REVERSED DECISION IN POSTAL TELEGRAPH SUIT.

Company Wins Against Verdict for Error in Transmission of a Message.

The reversal of the Supreme Court's decision by the Appellate Division in New York yesterday, in the case of Halstead & Co., against the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, has attracted wide-spread attention among those who have followed the suit.

About a year ago the plaintiffs obtained a judgment for $2,498.85 against the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, for an error in the transmission in a message, but yesterday the Appellate Division held that the person receiving a telegram is bound by the terms and conditions the same as the person sending the telegram is bound.

The company did not dispute that the message involved was an unrepeated message, and the court charged the jury that, as between the sender and the company there was a valid and lawful limitation by contract; however, the defendants were liable to the plaintiffs for the actual damages sustained. The court reversed the judgment and approved a decision of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in a similar case, which said that there is nothing in this regulation which tends to hinder the free use of the telegraph, or to impose on those having occasion to transmit or receive messages any impracticable duty. The court's interpretation of the case in question was that a person is entitled to damages only to the extent of the amount paid for the transmission of a message.

He told Mr. Backes he naturally wanted to see Lawton successful in his bids. He knew nothing about the erased stubs in Lawton's books, nor did he ever receive money from the latter except for his services.

Tobin swore positively that he had never received inside information, nor had he been posted in advance, with the understanding that his bids could be altered afterward. He said he had never paid any money for inside information.

U. S. Express Co. Wagon Upsets.

The breaking of a single link in a chain to which the traces were fastened detached the horse from one of the United State's Express Company's wagons, last night, on North avenue, and the heavily loaded wagon ran down the incline driveway leading to the railroad station, struck the curb and upset in the gutter, throwing the contents into the street. EULOGIZES MRS. RAYMOND

DIED LAST TUESDAY

Described As a Woman of Unusual Powers Who Thought For Herself—Husband's Great Helpmeet.

In its issue of Tuesday night, the Schenectady, N. Y., Evening Star had the following account of the death of Mrs. Raymond, wife of Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, formerly pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and now president of Union College:

"Mrs. Raymond, the wife of President Raymond of Union College, died this morning at about five o'clock. She had been long ill and for some time her friends had hardly hoped she could recover, but however expected, such an event when it does come is a very great shock. Her life was so bound up with the interests of the college that her death cannot but be widely felt, and very keenly at just this time of celebration when so many of the friends of the college are gathered from all parts of the country.

"Margaret Morris Raymond was the daughter of Lewis J. Thomas and Mary Morris. She was born in Wales, but her parents, when she was very young, came to this country, and her early life was passed at Middleville, Herkimer county, New York. She graduated from Oswego Normal School. She married on September 24, 1879, the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, at that time pastor of the First Reformed church of Paterson, N. J. There, as at Plainfield and at Albany, where Dr. Raymond was successively pastor, she was an effective factor in the life of church and city. Since 1894, when Dr. Raymond became president of the college and the town, being a woman of very wide feeling for the things that were interesting or helpful to others.

Her death will leave a great place empty in social life. It is rare to meet with a character so preoccupied with the claims and the happiness of others. She was constantly thinking of how she could bring her own best things into the lives of those even remotely connected with her. Her chief delight in all the things she possessed lay in the possibility of sharing them with others.

She was devotedly loyal to Union College. While she was well and strong, the president's house was a fine centre of interest for students, faculty, and friends of the college, not merely in social occasions but at all times.

Through all the last weeks of her exhaustive illness she was full of thought for the college, longing to live over commencement that no one might lose any of the pleasures of that season.

She was a woman of most unusual powers, she thought for herself. She was a great and universal reader of books, of which her criticism was keen and fine. Her appreciation of everything beautiful, noble and desirable filled her life with exquisite pleasure that nothing could destroy. She was a devoted Christian whose religion and whose love for her Divine Lord penetrated and influenced all her life.

With her deatn an intense and vital spirit passes away; now that she has gone many will feel more and more as time goes on, that life has lost one who embodied some of its most wonderful possibilities.

In accordance with Mrs. Raymond's express desire the ceremonies of commencement will be interrupted as little as is possible. The Board of Trustees will depute some one to take Dr. Raymond's place at the exercises today and tomorrow."

Society Wedding at Somerville.

A society wedding next Wednesday at 6.30 o'clock will be the marriage of Miss Olive Blanchard Klotz, daughter of former Assemblyman and Mrs. Jacob Klotz, and Harry Elmer Haynes. The ceremony will be performed in the Second Reformed church, Somerville, by Rev. Dr. Edwin Griffen, the pastor. Over 200 invitations have been issued for the event.

"Tom" Fay Sails For England.

Thomas Fay, of North avenue, sailed from New York, this morning, on the Cunard liner, "Campania" for Liverpool. He will spend the summer in visiting his former home and gathering souvenirs for the Timbo Club, having promised several bushel to the members. He was accompanied to the pier by a delegation from the club.

ANNIVERSARY FITTINGLY CELEBRATED BY JUNIORS

SOMERSET COUNCIL HAS MANY GUESTS AT APPROPRIATE AFFAIR.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., celebrated its fourteenth anniversary last night in an appropriate and interesting manner. There was a large representation present from Plainfield, Franklin and Benevolent Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., to join in congratulating the members of Somerset Council upon the success attained during its existence.

In addition there were present Past State Councilor Sharp, of Newark; Rev. J. Morgan Reed, and Chaplain Grey, of Trenton, and State Vice Councilor Thompson, of Jersey City, and each one gave a fine patriotic address which aroused great enthusiasm among the Juniors. Among the other speakers was Harry C. Runyon, of Benevolent Council..

Somerset Council was organized fourteen years ago with about twenty-five members and today it numbers 285 and is rapidly growing. Councilor Hulitt was in the chair, last night and had charge of the program, which followed a short business session during which the officers were nominated to be elected next week. After the speech-making refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. Somerset Council was congratulated upon its excellent showing and the members were inspired to do even greater things in the future.

BATAVIA OFFICIALS HERE TO INSPECT SEWAGE PLANT

WAX ENTHUSIASTIC OVER PLAINFIELD'S STREETS AND BUILDING.

Aldermen Frank W. Ballard, W. L. Richmond and George Gade and K. B. Mathes and J. W. Casey, all of Batavia, N. Y., are in Plainfield today for the purpose of inspecting the local sewage system. The party was met by Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, who acted as an escort. In addition to visiting the sewage disposal beds and examing the system used here, the visitors became greatly interested in other things in the city, including streets and the various buildings.

They were enthusiastic epsecially about the local streets, and Mr. Richmond, who is a civil engineer, declared that there is nothing in Western New York that can approach the fine macadam roads to be found in Plainfield. He was unable to understand, he said, why the city is considering the proposition to pave with brick.

Every member in the party spoke in the highest terms about Plainfield, remarking about the many fine buildings and well-kept private residences. They visited the Plainfield Trust Company and expressed great pleasure over the well equipped banking institution and its fine building.

Batavia is considering the proposition to install a sewage system somewhat after Plainfield's system, but owing to the lay of the ground in that city, it being almost entirely on the level, it will be necessary to use what is called the "lift system" in connection with the filtration system of beds. The visitors were much pleased with the workings of the local system and will undoubtedly recommend its adoption for Batavia.

In speaking of permanent pavement, Mr. Richmond said that in Batavia brick is used exclusively and it gives entire satisfaction. The pavement has been down for several years and it has given no cause for complaint whatever.

Pythians' Memorial Day.

Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., held a special meeting last night to complete arrangements for the annual Memorial Day exercises on Sunday, June 23, one week later than in former years because of the lateness of the season. It is hoped that by postponing the observance, better weather may be enjoyed and an abundance of flowers for decorative purposes may be obtained. Crescent company will have as its guests during the day Port Chester Lodge, of Port Chester, N. Y., and also a delegation from Rathbone company, of Brooklyn.

Jury Fails to Agree.

Albert Matura, of Elizabeth, who was tried in the Union County Court, yesterday, on a charge of illegal liquor selling, has escaped conviction, for the jury, after being out from 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 10:30 o'clock this morning, nineteen hours and five minutes, disagreed and was reluctantly discharged by Judge Atwater. The Judge said that he regretted exceedingly the inability of the jurors to agree as it would mean a new trial.

ASH CARTER'S RIG DROPS OVER A STEEP BANK

HORSE IS KILLED AND DRIVER HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

James Saunders first trip to the Compton dump in the West End of the city, yesterday afternoon, was a costly one for the ash carter, for he lost his horse and narrowly escaped being killed himself. Saunders was the second man in line to dump his load of ashes and rubbish, and he drove too close to the edge of the dump, despite warning from a bystander. His heavily loaded wagon sank deep into the soft filling and then fell over the bank, a distance of forty feet.

Fortunately, Saunders jumped off the wagon just in time, for his horse went down the embankment, turned a somersault and broke its neck. As soon as it was learned that the horse was fatally injured a policeman was summoned and the animal was shot. The loss is a heavy one for Saunders as the animal, which he had just purchased, was a good one.

It was only a few days ago that all the ash carters in the city received word from the city to dump on the Compton property, it being at a point which extends from Dunellen avenue. Saunders had collected his last load in the Netherwood district and it was his first trip to the new dump.

Mission Band Suspends for Summer.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, held its closing meeting for the summer in the lecture room of the church, yesterday afternoon. The business was chiefly of a routine character. It was at this meeting that the members were expected to bring in a dollar and tell how they earned it, but owing to the small attendance the receipts were not as large as looked for. However, it is known that a considerable sum will be realized from this source. After the meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served. The next meeting of the Band will be in October.

VAIL'S JURY DISAGREES

Discharged After Deliberating Twenty-Four Hours Without Reaching a Verdict.

RESULT A BIG SURPRISE

Trial of Miss Gillen Was to Have Followed, But Proceedings Have Taken Sudden Turn.

After remaining out twenty-four hours, the jury which heard the trial of Charles Vail, formerly of this city, accused of burning the Cornish mill property at West Portal to get the insurance, failed to reach a verdict. The members filed back in court at Flemington late yesterday afternoon and so informed Judge John L. Connett. The men had been locked up since Thursday afternoon and convinced that it would be useless to have them deliberate further, the court dismissed them.

Vail is still in jail, having been surrendered by his bondsman, Thomas McCarthy, of Junction, soon after his accomplice, Joseph Hummell, turned States evidence and related in detail how the building had been fired. The verdict was a great surprise to everyone as it was generally believed that Vail had failed to sufficiently disprove Hummell's story. When he went on the stand in his own defense, he declared that he had been in Plainfield on the day of the fire and the statement was corroborated by his wife, who is at present living with friends in North Plainfield. It is said that this evidence had considerable strength in holding several of the jurymen from balloting for a verdict of guilty.

The verdict has upset the plans of the prosecution as it was intended to go on with the trial of Miss Ellen Gillen, of this city, who is charged with being an accomplice in the plot to defraud the insurance companies. She was indicted by the Hunterdon county grand jury and secured bail, pending her hearing. She was in attendance at Vail's trial and also testified in his behalf.

Although Miss Gillen was a servant in the employ of a Watchung avenue family, she held the title to the property that was burned. She met Vail through his brother, Harry Vail, also of this city, who became acquainted with her through delivering goods at the house where she was employed. Harry Vail was indicted and is now a fugitive from justice.

With a promise from the weather man that a clear and balmy atmosphere will prevail, nothing stands in the way of making the Timbo Club's fourth annual outing tomorrow, a success in every detail. The start will be made a 7.30 and only one stop will be made on the way, at Elizabeth. The return trip will commence at 10 o'clock, giving the Timboites and their friends a full day at Jersey's greatest coast resort

LOCAL MAN'S INJURIES MAY PROVE SERIOUS

DRAGGED BY TROLLEY CAR, EDWARD CLARKSON MAY LOSE BOTH LEGS.

Edward Clarkson, of Elm place, who was seriously injured in New York, on Friday, June 7, and who has been in Bellevue Hospital ever since, is reported to be in a serious condition. It was said yesterday that it might be necessary to amputate both legs if there was no change for the better.

Mr. Clarkson has been in the employ of the Vacuum Cleaning Company, of New York, and was engaged to drive one of its automobile cleaning wagons about the city. He was going through Lexington avenue, when a trodey car ran into the vehicle, knocked him off the seat and dragged him for nearly a block before the motorman stopped.

Mr. Clarkson was thrown under the car and in being dragged tarough the street he was cut about the face and head and his legs were also injured to a considerable extent. He was taken at once to Bellevue Hospital and given prompt treatment. A large number of stitches were required to close the wounds, but the physicians in charge are afraid that blood poisoning might develop and it is that that makes his condition so alarming.

MILLIKEN BROTHERS LAYS OFF 1,500 EMPLOYES.

General Opinion That the Concern Will Be Taken Over by U. S. Steel Corporation.

Following the bankruptcy of the Milliken Brothers, announced early this week, about fifteen hundred men were laid off at the steel plant on Staten Island yesterday. That part of the plant which is used for the actual making of steel was practically shut down. Most of the men discharged are laborers who live on Staten Island. On dismissing them Superintendent Marlow said that he could not tell when the company would be able to take them back. The office force has been retained in full as yet.

That part of the plant where the steel is put into shape for structural purposes is still at work, the apparent object being to keep up a supply of steel for buildings that are now going up, such as the Singer Building in New York, which would be greatly inconvenienced if their building materials were to be cut off now. It is said among the men, however, that the working force in the structural section of the concern will also be lessened. The section of the plant from which discharges have been made is the one that has been most recently constructed. The newly-built mills, it is claimed, are responsible for the bankruptcy of the firm, because they cost more than had been calculated, and the firm's capital had to be depleted to carry out the work, so that the firm found itself embarrassed at a time when the money market was tight.

The opinion is growing that the plant of the Milliken Brothers will be taken over by the United States Steel Corporation, and it is believed that the place is being closed up gradually, preparatory to its being merged with the trust. Not much faith is placed in the rumor that the Steel Corporation forced the Milliken firm to the wall, and it is looked upon as natural that the concern should turn to the big steel company for aid in its time of distress.

Held for Contempt.

The contempt proceedings instituted in the Somerset county courts against Joseph Sansome, of Raritan, on a charge of failing to appear as a witness in the recent trial of Mrs. Annie Salsberger, charged with disorderly conduct, came up before Judge Schenck yesterday at Somerville. Prosecutor Reger asserted that Sansome and his wife had been duly subpoenaed to testify in the case, but neither had shown up. The woman was excused because of illness. Sansome was held in $300 bail to appear next Friday.

Commencement at Watchung.

The annual commencement exercises will be held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung, Wednesday night, June 19, when diplomas will be presented to Edith Musing, Mary Texier, George Schmidt and Edward Bodin, the four pupils having completed the Grammar grade course. An attractive program has been prepared for the occasion.

School Teachers Re-Engaged.

At a recent meeting of the Warren Township Board of Education Supervising Principal E. E. Sage and the three teachers were re-engaged. The minimum salary of the latter was raised to $42.50 per month. Two years ago the salaries of all were $35 a month each, which goes to show Warren is appreciating the value of good schools.

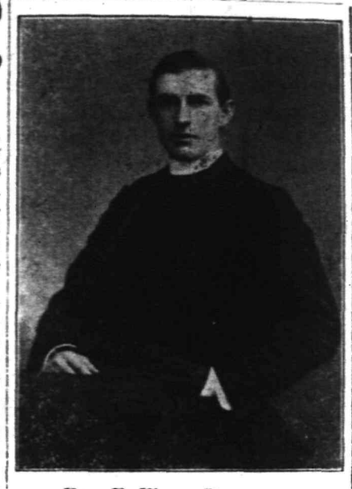
BISHOP SCARBOROUGH CONSECRATES GRACE CHURCH



Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson.

Grace P. E. Church.

MANY CLERICS ATTEND

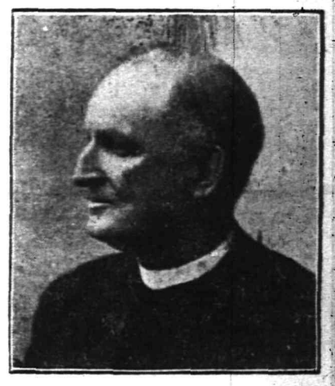
Before a congregation that filled the edifice, Grace Protestant Episcopal church was consecrated by Bishop Scarborough this morning. The church wore a festal air, handsome gowns uniting with floral decorations to render the church interior brilliant. The altar was lavishly decorated with blooms.



Rev. E. M. Rodman.

Prominent clerics took part in the service. Episcopal clergymen from a number of parishes of the diocese were present, and a number of local ministers attended the service. Among the clergymen who took part were Rev. Dr. Parker Morgan, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, and Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, of Grace church, New York.

The service began at 10:30 o'clock. The processional formed in the parish house, with the bishop leading, attended by Drs. Morgan and Huntington; the preacher of the day, Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace church, came next, then the visiting clergy in the order of their seniority; then the crucifor, Arthur Willis, and the choir, attended by the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, as chaplain of the choir. The course of the processional was down Sycamore street to Seventh street, to the main door of the church.

At the entrance the bishop was met by Wardens Howard Fleming and Marion S. Ackerman, and Vestrymen S. D. Lounsbery, W. T. Gough, O. G. Waring, Lewis G. Timpson, J. Paul Nolting, E. H. Booth, and W. T. Pelletier. Preceded by the wardens and vestrymen the procession continued up the aisle, the bishop and clergymen repeating the 24th psalm responsively. The Bishop passed into the sanctuary attended by Dr. Huntington and the rector emeritus. There, seated in a chair, he was presented with the legal papers, by which the diocese becomes vested with the church property. Carrying out the office of consecration, the bishop then addressed the congregation, bidding them pray for the blessing of God on the church and the parish.

At the conclusion of the prayer the sentences of consecration were read and laid on the communion table. After which the bishop pronounced a blessing. That concluded the actual consecration.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Rev. Mr. Dieterick, of the Methodist church, has arranged for an illustrated song service tomorrow night, instead of the regular evening preaching service. The service will be an interesting one and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours: Sunday-school, 9:30 a. m.; morning preaching, 10:45; B. Y. P. U. meeting, 7:15 p. m., followed at 8 o'clock with the regular evening service.

The local league team and the Y. M. C. A. team are battling this afternoon on the local diamond. It will be a great game, as the result decides the lead in the Inter-City League pennant race. Game called at 3:45.

Frankie Lee, who is taking a course of study at the Madison Boarding School, is spending his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lee.

George H. Johnston, who has been ill for two weeks with a severe attack of rheumatism, is reported as being improved somewhat.

The regular weekly prayer and praise meeting at the Methodist church tonight will be led by Rev. Mr. Dieterick.

Only the regular township routine business was transacted at the committee meeting held last night in the town rooms.

Yesterday was flag day. A number of the residents remembered it and floated Old Glory to the breeze.

Miss Marion Goodwin has returned from a visit with friends at Lyons Farms.

To Bury Scorched Torahs.

New York, June 15.—Followed by thousands of Hebrews in carriages and afoot and obeying an edict of the Mosaic law which never before in the United States has had opportunity for its enforcement, eighteen sacred scrolls, or Torahs, of synagogues, damaged by fire a year ago and only recently recovered, will be borne in a sealed coffin of expensive workmanship through the east side tomorrow, across the Williamsburg bridge and to Washington cemetery. There in the burial plot of the synagogue Zichru Toras Moses the sacred scrolls will be entered with solemn ceremony and above them a monument will be erected. Nothing broken or damaged may be used in the sacred rites of the adoration of Israel's God, and nothing which has been sanctified by such use may be treated with aught save reverence. This was the mandate of Moses, and the bidding of the prophet is the law which his devoted followers will enjoy.

Wedded on Skates.

New York, June 15.—With the entire bridal party, including the minister, on roller skates, Miss Susan Pierce, of No. 105 West Ninety-fifth street, was married to Raymond Barrett, of No. 3 West Twenty-fifth street, in a skating rink in Paradise Park, Fort George, last night. Before the ceremony there was a procession of about one thousand persons, led by the bride and bridegroom, while the band played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The ceremony took place on a small platform in the centre of the hall. Miss Hattie Monroe was bridesmaid and William Posner was the best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee and Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Barrows sailed yesterday for Europe. They will be absent several weeks.

Miss Edith Myer and brother, Charles Meyer, of South Second street, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Rude, of Neshanic.

Mrs. Myers Hodge and daughter, Miss Hazel Hodge, of Somerville, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Thompson, of Belvidere avenue.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Martin A. Korf, of the borough, will have charge of the meeting at the Wilson Memorial chapel tomorrow night.

Angus P. Atwood will lead the Epworth League meeting at the First M. E. church, tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock, the topic being "Wasting Harvests."

The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church will meet tomorrow morning at 9:30, instead of the afternoon, the arrangement being for the summer months.

The Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church, commencing tomorrow and continuing during the summer, will meet at 11:15 o'clock in the morning, following the preaching service.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, will attend divine service at the Park Avenue Baptist church, tomorrow night, when the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, will preach an appropriate sermon.

Children's Day exercises will be held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, tomorrow morning, when a fine program will be presented. In the evening the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson, will preach an illustrated sermon, the subject being "Seven Cups of Life." It will be of special interest to young and old. Special music will be rendered at the service.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Miss Nettie Metcalf, of Warren, O., is said to be the only woman in America who has originated a breed of chickens.

Mrs. Annie Besant, who is sixty years old, lives in Benares, the sacred city of India, where she has founded a Hindoo girls' school and a college.

The Duchess of Wellington possesses the splendid services of Sevres made for Napoleon I., of which every single piece is different, the making practically priceless.

One of the most successful business women in Rhode Island is Mrs. John R. Hamilton, of Providence. She is a florist, and carnations are her specialty, and she claims to have gained both health and financial profit among her flowers.

Mrs. Frank Woodward, of St. Charles, Mich., earns a considerable sum of money each season shooting wolves. Last winter Mrs. Woodward received from the State $2,970 for the scalps of 198 wolves, which were killed by herself and her husband.

Though she is not yet a social "bud," Miss Helen Taft has been nicknamed "the tulip girl" by her close friends. The title had its origin in her fondness for a certain style of dressing. The daughter of the secretary of war is almost seventeen and will "come out" in the last winter of the Roosevelt administration.

Mrs. Donald MacLean, recently elected president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is the sixth woman to fill the honorable office. Like herself, Mrs. MacLean's predecessors were all women of national prominence. The first was Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, who died in office. She was succeeded by Mrs. Adlai Stevenson. The others were Mrs. Daniel Manning, Mrs. John W. Foster and Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks.

Missionary Mare Buried.

Steubenville, Ohio, June 15.—With all the solemnity attending the burial of a human being the body of Florence Nightingale, the missionary pacing mare, was buried in the paddock at the race track in Cadiz yesterday. Her grave was covered with flowers sent by horsemen. Services at the grave were omitted, as the preacher who had promised to conduct them decided at the last moment not to attend. He promised, however, to devote part of his sermon on Sunday to praise of the horse that had earned more than $2,500 for the home missionary cause of the Methodist Episcopal church during her six years on the turf. George W. Glover, Florence Nightingale's owner, declared tonight he would erect a costly tombstone over the mare's grave.

Find Launch Victims.

Norfolk, Va., June 15.—According to information from Hampton Roads at eleven o'clock last night the battleship Minnesota's missing launch, with its load of human freight, has been found in eight fathoms of water off the Rip-Raps, a small island between Old Point and Discovery Pier, Jamestown Exposition grounds. The naval tugs Locket and Alice have left the Navy Yard here with eleven coffins for the victims' bodies and derrick equipment with which to raise the launch. The news of the discovery was quickly communicated among the officers and men of the fleet. The mystery of the vessel, if any, which caused the sinking is still unsolved.

Plot to Kill Mr. Fairbanks.

Selma, Ala., June 15.—A newspaper man who arrived here yesterday from Montgomery reported to the Chief of Police that while at the Montgomery (Ala.) station early yesterday morning he overheard two men of foreign descent saying that there was a plot to assassinate Vice President Fairbanks and Senator Joseph B. Foraker during the funeral of Senator Morgan at Selma today. The assassins, according to the story, were coming to Selma from New Orleans. Authorities in Montgomery have been communicated with and they concur in the belief that the report is absurd.

The Chicago American League Club will cross bats with the Elizabethport Stars at Elizabethport tomorrow afternoon. The Windy City champions will present their regular lineup.

The Jersey City Eastern League Club will meet the Hobokens at St. George's Cricket Grounds, tomorrow afternoon, when the old-time rivalry will be resumed.

This afternoon the Y. M. C. A. team will cross bats with the Scotch Plains nine at home, while Bound Brook will play Dunellen on its home grounds.

The one game in this city this afternoon will be at Crescent Oval between Clinton Avenue and the Raritans, of Perth Amboy. The visiting team is considered one of the strongest in Middlesex county and will come to Plainfield determined to win. Randolph and O'Loughlin will be the battery for the home team.

It is said that "Phil." Smith will join the Johnstown Tri-State League team next week. It is to be hoped that he will be given a chance to pitch.

Some one has said that rain is the only thing that prevents the New York Giants from sliding down the ladder. A little more ginger will help to win games.

The Ironsides, of Newark, will play the West Ends, of Somerville, at the latter place, this afternoon. The Ironsides are rated as one of the best semi-professional teams in the State.

"Dick" Watt, of umpire fame, was in Plainfield yesterday calling on baseball friends and incidentally casting an eye about for "Phil." Smith, who he wants to pitch at Garwood today.

Braden, the pitcher for the West Ends, of Somerville, is doing good work this season, and barring the contests with Flemington has been able to win every game for his team.

A large crowd of Plainfield rooters will accompany the Y. M. C. A. team to Scotch Plains this afternoon to cheer their team on to victory.

GOLF.

Miss M. W. Phelps broke the women's record for the course at Atlantic City, on Thursday, with a 90. She finished 6 up on Mrs. Neidlinger, formerly Miss Gertrude Travers.

Arrangements have been completed for receiving a large number of golfers from the Metropolitan district at the Plainfield Country Club, this afternoon, when the open tournament will be held. The pairings will be made at the tee, and it is expected that there will be considerable rivalry for the prizes offered by the club. There will be six prizes for the first, second and third best net and gross scores, but no competitor will be eligible to win more than one prize and no member of the Plainfield Country Club will be eligible to win either the prize for the best gross or best net scores. Julius E. Erickson is chairman of the committee in charge of the tournament.

"Marty" O'Loughlin will leave for Philadelphia on Monday to prepare for the big tournament to be held there later in the week.

An interesting golf match will be played tomorrow at Cranford, between "Marty" O'Loughlin and M. J. Dumont, of the Plainfield Country Club, and Joseph Sherman and Professional Conway, of the Westfield Golf Club. Last Sunday the Plainfield pair won the match at Westfield.

Owing to the fact that her son was graduated from West Point this week, Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers has been unable to take part in the women's golf championship tournament at Atlantic City. Both she and Mr. Rogers have been attending the various exercises at the Military Academy.

Competitions for the President's, Golf Club and Hydewood Park cups will be features at the Park Golf Club this afternoon and the social features at the clubhouse, including a tea, will attract many members.

Weekly competitions will be the program at the Middlebrook Golf Club, Finderne, this afternoon, for which prizes are offered.

In speaking of the absence of women on the golf courses in the East, it is said that the same complaint is heard throughout the West. It is considered to be a hard game for most women to follow and that as a rule they do not care for such violent exercise.

JERSEY'S HIGH RANK IN ELECTRICAL MANUFACTURE.

Stand Third as to the Capital and Fourth as to Value.

Washington, June 15.—A bulletin issued yesterday by the census bureau contains on the manufacture, according to the census of 1905, of electrical machinery, apparatus and supplies. It says that during the five-year-period from 1900 there have been extensive improvements in the utilization of electricity and electrical machinery and radical innovations in electrical devices for general use. In 1905 there were 784 establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of electrical machinery, apparatus and supplies with a capital of $174,066,026. There have been increases since 1900 in all items, even in the number of establishments an item which in most industries, the report says, has been reduced by the general tendency toward consolidation. There was a gain of 34.9 per cent. in the number of establishments and of 108.1 per cent in capital and in value of products of 52.3 per cent.

In addition to the reports reported by these establishments, there was an output of electrical machinery and supplies valued at $18,742,033, from 128 establishments engaged primarily in other lines of manufacture.

New York, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Indiana and New Jersey reported 631 out of the 784 establishments making electrical apparatus, their output being 90.1 per cent. of the total. The increase in total capital was greatest in Pennsylvania, equaling 178.5 per cent., although the value of the products advanced only 37.4 per cent. The capital and value of products of the leading States follow:

	Capital.	Value of Prods.
NewYork	$30,643,167	$35,348,276
Illinois	12,735,427	16,700,027
Mass.	12,735,427	15,882,216
New Jersey	18,457,821	13,803,476
Ohio	10,408,184	11,019,235

The total value of telephonic apparatus manufactured in 1905 was $15,863,698, as compared with $10,512,412 for 1900. Illinois is the great centre of telephonic manufacturing industry, and more than half of the total products was from that State.

An apparen falling off in the production of telegraph apparatus from $1,642,266 in 1900 to $1,111,194 in 1905 is accounted for in part by the growing custom among the larger telegraph systems of making and repairing their own apparatus.

¶ When Mr. Munn gets into the forest he is on familiar ground; ground which he loves, and from which he extracts an absorbing sweetness that he puts into his stories. CYCLONES.

The air is always warmer in front of a cyclone than in its rear. The former, too, is wet, while the latter is dry.

A cyclone may have any diameter from 100 to 3,000 miles. The usual dimensions are between 1,000 to 2,000 miles.

A cyclone, or large circular storm, may die out in a single day or it may last for a fortnight. It usually travels eastward at about twenty miles an hour.

PREPARING TO WEIGHT ALL THE LOCAL MAILS

SYSTEMATIC MEASUREMENTS TO BE MADE IN 50,000 POSTOFFICES.

Commencing July 1, and continuing daily for a period of six months, every postoffice in the country which transfers mail direct by railway service will weigh all mail originating in the office, and for thirty days during the same period keep an accurate record of the weight of all mail received from railway postoffice cars, railway mail storage cars and compartment cars on railroads carrying mails. For seven days every piece of mail originating in the office shall be counted to determine the revenue and cost of handling the home business of each office.

The work will be done in accordance with an act of Congress, passed March 2, intended to provide a more systematic method for weighing the mails carried by railroads than the one heretofore in vogue for ascertaining the cost, and also to more definitely ascertain the actual revenue of each office. Postoffices which receive and transfer mail through depository and distributing offices will be required during the same time to keep a record of the actual number of pieces of each class of mail originating in the office.

Postmaster Bird is making the preliminary arrangements for the work, which will be conducted by experienced attaches of the local office, whose places during the period mentioned will be filled by substitute employes. The daily record to be taken and forwarded to the department at Washington will, it is expected, show the actual amount of business transacted in every one of the 50,000 postoffices in the country and be the first attempt made at securing an accurate record.

Heretofore the custom has been to weigh the mails transferred by the railroads on the depot platforms once every four years by men assigned by the department for that purpose. The weighing usually covered a period of four to six weeks and invariably included the last week of one quarter and first of the succeeding one, when there is a vast increase in the volume of mail incoming and outgoing at all postoffices, large and small.

While the mail handled every day in the week was weighed in computing the average daily weight handled, Sundays were excluded and the daily average was therefore apparently increased by one-seventh. On the average thus obtained the compensation of railroads and "star route" carriers was fixed, and the plan is said to have involved an unnecessary expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually by the government for the benefit of the railroads.

The new system, it is expected, will change all this and make padding of weight of mail almost impossible, covering as it does every class of mail handled and being conducted in all, officers for a uniform period of 184 days, which will be accepted as an average for the year, as the three extra days will cover the possible extra weight in January of the six months, which contain only 181 days, except once in every four years.

"DON'T BE A GREEN BUG," THE LATEST SLANG PHRASE.

"Don't be a green bug!"

The green bug has been crowned king of the slang domain. On the 23d of May just past proud "23" sadly doffed the ermine and passed out into the cold rain, says the Chicago News. Likewise the haughty lemon shambled from its golden salver back to the fruit stand of commerce. Apart from this the coronation was a gala affair, and the ceremony progressed without a hitch. The new monarch is a protege of the Chicago board of trade, but its influence will now be felt in every part of the United States where rules English as she is spoke.

It is to Wall street the green bug owes his new job. Dispatches said that foes of big financiers there are denounced as "green bugs," being declared worse than destructive insects in the western wheat plains This sanction of the green bug as a term in correct language was followed by evidences of its adoption in many circles in Chicago. Then conspirators, seizing upon the ominous protend of the calendar, snatcher the scepter from poor "23" and placed the bauble in the waiting claws of the green bug.

For those who would tumble to the inner significance of the emerald buzzer the following Westerian definition will be useful:

GREEN BUG, n.—A knocker; a cold water sprayer; a damp blanket wilder; one who planes the edges from another's enjoyment; a joy jolter; a hammer artist; an anvil chorister; one who spoils a good thing; a person at whose approach the fire alarm is turned in; one who attempts to slip the bolt and burn the axle grease in the wheel of progress.

THE INVESTIGATION REPORT.

Inquisitor Backes, of the Assembly Investigating Committee, will doubtless have the committee report ready when the Legislature meets next Tuesday. This will be only a preliminary report. The investigation was not intended to be merely for a report to this Legislature. The time is too short to make anything like a thorough investigation and, necessarily, while some matters have been only partly inquired into, others of equal importance have not been probed at all. The question will arise at the legislative session whether the Senate shall not be equally represented on the investigating committee. A committe of the whole Legislature would certainly be preferable to a committee representing only one branch of the Legislature. The Senate at the regular session ran away from investigation, and if the Senate could have had its way there would have been no investigation and no developments. The Senate, therefore, is not in a position to demand or dictate. If the two houses can agree upon a joint committee, leaving Inquisitor Backes to continue his work unhampered, well and good.—Newark Star.

DIVIDES WITH FREEHOLDER.

Strickland's Captor Gives Man Who 'Phoned the Tip Half of Reward.

New Brunswick, June 15.—Enos Fouratt, the marshal of Metuchen, who caught Reuben Strickland, who escaped from State prison last week, has divided his reward of $50 with former Freeholder Everett Tappen, who tipped him of Strickland's presence.

It was Tappen who recognized in a stranger at the Bonhamton hotel bar boasting that he was taking his first drink in eight years a resemblance to the published description of the fugitive, so he telephoned to Fouratt, who nabbed the man and turned him over to the prison authorities. He had served nearly ten years of a thirty-year sentence for murder.

Say Zelaya Declared War.

Washington, D. C. June 15—President Zelaya, of Nicaragua, according to advices received here yesterday, has started out to conquer Central America, in the name of a union of the five republics, now constantly embroiled in war and revolution. Joseph D. Olivares, American Consul General at Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, cabled the State Department today:

"I have been officially informed that in accordance with the Central American union plans President Zelaya has despatched ammunition of war and troops in aid of General Alfaro, who is the popular union candidate for President of Salvador. President Figuera, of that country, opposes the union idea." This came as an open avowal of what had already been charged—that the revolutionists that attacked and captured Acajutla, Salvador, a few days ago, began their campaign under Nicaraguan auspices. Salvador has plenty of latitude in international law to regard this as an act of war. The Salvadorean Minister, Senor Mejia, has received from his government positive gunboat Momotombo which landed the Salvadorean revolutionists at Acajutla.

Gives Library to Germany.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 15.—The prime object of Andrew Carnegie's visit to Kiel next week is to announce to the German people that he will erect for them in Berlin a library, to which his first donation will be $1,000,000. Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie will be the guests of Charlemagne Tower and will be presented to the Emperor and Empress. There will be a public ceremony, at which Mr. Carnegie will announce his gift. Mr. Carnegie was greatly flattered by the importance the Germans attached to the dedication of the new Carnegie Institute here in April, when the German government was represented by Theodore von Moeller, Miinster of State; Lieutenant General Alfred von Lowenfeld, Adjutant General to the Emperor; Ernest von Ihne, Court Architect to the Emperor, and many notable German educators.

Dr. Robinson was bitten by a cat, and lockjaw resulted. He was a Cornell graduate and a prominent young physician.

LIKE ONE LARGE FAMILY.

People of Newfoundland Have No Need of Hotels.

I need scarcely say there are no hotels on this coast, and consequently no hotel bills. The traveler selects his own house when he enters a settlement, walks in and sits down by the stove. Indeed he scarcely waits for the invitation to "sit in" when the family goes to meals, the people of this coast being much given to hospitality. When night comes on he simply takes off his boots and—stays. It may be he will have to share a bunk with one of the household, or perhaps he has a bed in "the room;" that depends on his social position. If room is short he will turn in on a settle, or simply lie down on the floor. I have slept on a settle under which the hens lived in winter and rested as soundly as on any feather bed, the only inconvenience being that now and again I had to grope after the rooster, which persisted in thinking it was morning long before I did. The first question asked a stranger on his entering a house will not be "What is your business?" It is certain to be "Have you been to tea?" For our national drink is tea, and a drunken man is seldom or never seen. Indeed we have become a prohibition coast.—London Standard.

NEVER ON THE THIRTY-FIRST.

Bridegroom's Second Visit Would Be One Day Afterward.

Rev. Dr. William H. Fisburn, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, most sunshiny men in the world and likes nothing better than a good, wholesome joke, even if it is turned against himself. He was visited in his home on last St. Patrick's day by a prosperous looking couple who desired his kindly office in making them one. The man was an ironmaster from Pittsburg and the bride-elect was a Jersey woman. The business was quickly dispatched and the happy bridegroom came to the question so many in like fix ask the clergyman: "Just suit yourself as to that," said Dr. Fisburn as his eyes rested upon a thick roll of bills the ironmaster had dug out of his trousers' pocket. "Well," said the newly-made husband, "as this is the seventeenth of March I'll make it $17, and good luck to you." "My friend," said the dominie, "I wish you the greatest happiness in the world, but if ever you happen to want me again just call around on the thirty-first of the month." "No, sir," replied the bridegroom as he walked away, "I'll come on the first."

Moorish Idea of Feminine Beauty.

The amiability of Moorish women strikes me greatly, says a writer in the National Review. I visited some the other day, and they were full of kindly interest. They liked my fair hair, they liked my clothes; one old crone suggested how lovely I should be were I to paint my cheeks a brilliant red, stain my under lips coal black, adding three black vertical lines on my forehead and one in the middle of my chin, also stain my teeth with walnut juice, my hands with henna! I therefore rubbed my cheeks with my handkerchief till they turned crimson; that amused them highly, and they laughed and said I needed no paint, but did need henna and blacking!

Milk Peddler's Trick.

"Of course, in this city," said a Philadelphia milk inspector, "the milk is pure, but I've been in some towns where impure milk dealers have played some funny dodges on me. You know how I work? Sneak along the streets, hold up a milkman, and take a sample right out of the can? Well, it has been a common thing when a milkman has known me by sight for him to pretend to trip on seeing me coming, fall headlong and upset his can of milk all over the pavement. Yes, that trick worked the first time, and I wasted a lot of pity on the man that played it."

Hotel Counter Sarcasm.

Some sharp pieces of sarcasm flash across the hotel counters at times. The other night an unkempt individual drifted into the Imperial, whose appearance did not prove at all satisfactory to the clerk. "Sorry, we shall have to ask you to settle in advance," said the clerk. "But you see we don't know you—" The response of the arrival was cool. "What difference does that make?" "Why, so many swindlers have done us lately, you see—" "Oh, I thought there was professional courtesy among swindlers." And he walked out indignantly.—San Francisco Call.

Freaks of Natur'.

"You never kin tell about natur'," said the Billville brother; "she is all the time cuttin' of the most onexpected capers. I remember when ol' Jinks seen the icicles hangin' on his peach trees that cold spring we had—how he got mad an' sold out fer $6, and the man who bought him out that year made $600 on the deal; but he had ter git the high sheriff an' two deputies to go with him to gather the crop, for ol' Jinks always met him with a shotgun—loaded to the muzzle."

Wanted an Understanding.

"You have alienated my wife's affections," said the visitor, and there was a glint in his eye. "And," said the man addressed, with a covert sneer, "you propose to seek financial salve?" "Salve nothing," replied the visitor. "I came merely to offer sympathy and to remark that if my home is broken up the bull pup is my personal property, and don't you forget it."

GRACE CHURCH CONSECRATED

communion service followed. The Bishop said the communion office. Dr. Huntington was epistler and Dr. Morgan gospeler.

The venerable rector emeritus preached the sermon at the appointed place in the communion service. His text was from St. James' epistle to the Hebrews, first chapter, third and fourth verses. His address was largely historical.

St. James taught the lesson of patience, he said; patience in trials, in good works, under provocation, even in persecution. It seemed to the speaker that the lesson God had meant to teach Grace parish was patience.

God's dealings with parishes were much like his dealings with individual souls. They did not have all plain sailing, and His method differed with each one. Parishes, as well as people, had seasons of trial in which to develop their powers and their faith. Some parishes the speaker had seen leap forward to wealth and influence almost at a bound. But it was not that way with Grace parish. The beginning had been made in a small way, and the progress had been by slow substantial growth that made for lasting results. The speaker went into a most interesting sketch of the parish start and growth.

After the service a lawn fete was held on the parish house grounds. Refreshments were served, and the Eureka Quartette, of New York, sang and played. The fete was held under the direction of the guild.

Mrs. Henry E. Titus, head of the Guild, was in charge of the arrangements, and the following committees assisted her: Guild: Mrs. Daniel Van Buren, Mrs. E. S. Hyatt, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. Bernard Coomb, Mrs. Iredell, Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, Mrs. S. S. Guion, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Bartine; Reception, Mrs. J. M. Van Buren, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, Mrs. George Smalley, Miss Elizabeth Cock, the Misses Tweedy, Mrs. Erickson, Mrs. Harriot, Mrs. W. T. Gough, Mrs. Gifford Mayer, Mrs. E. L. Finch, Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, Miss May Rodman, Mrs. E. H. Booth, Mrs. S. D. Lounsbery; Table, Mrs. George S. Ring, Mrs. Cowperthwaite, Mrs. Charles Dubois, Mrs. Harry Lovell, Miss Mary Holly, Mrs. J. Paul Nolting and Mrs. Charles Bull.

The following young women served as waitresses: The Misses Titus, Davis, Crane, Finch, Egan, Faber, Huse, Smith, Lapsley, VanBoskerck, Fleming. The refreshments were served from a large tent erected at the side of the parish house.

RUTGERS GRADUATION NEXT WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

For the First Time in Some Years Plainfield Will Not Be Represented in the Class.

Rutgers College will hold its commencement exercises next Wednesday evening in the Ballantyne gymnasium in New Brunswick. For the first time in some years there will be no Plainfield young men graduated from the State college. In other years this city has been well represented among the graduates and its young men have stood high in class. There are two graduates, however, from Union county, Harvey Clifford Robbins, of Roselle, and Reuben Thorp, Jr., of Rahway.

The class of 1907 is of the usual size. It includes students from all parts of New Jersey, New York and other States, and one of the graduates is a Porto Rican. The honors in mathematics, engineering, oratory and other subjects are evenly divided among students from various parts of the State. The outgoing class will be replaced by a freshman class which promises to be the largest in years. To judge by the number of applications thus far received the incoming freshman class will be the largest in the history of Rutgers. The increase in the number of students is an indication of the steady growth and improvement in the college, which is also shown by changes in the curriculum to meet the demands of students seeking knowledge of all sorts.

According to the new curriculum Rutgers will offer the following courses of study: Classical course, with the degree of bachelor of arts; Latin scientific course, with the degree of bachelor of letters; scientific courses which lead to the degree of bachelor of science and include a general scientific course, and technical courses in civil engineering, mechanical engineering, chemistry, keramics, biology and agriculture.

College will close on June 19, and will reopen on September 18. During the summer many improvements will be made. The new building for electricity and bleachers will be added and other improvements made to the Nelson Field, which is the athletic field for the college.

Football applicants will report for practice on Labor Day, to get into trim for the hard games with Fordham and Swarthmore, which are scheduled for early in the season.

High Lawyer to Be Heard From.

Ida Hedgman, colored, arrested on complaint of Elizabeth Betts, also colored, was arraigned in the city court this morning, charged with using profane language. Ida told Judge Runyon he couldn't possibly understand all about the case unless he had heard from Thomas Martin, "the highest lawyer in Virginia," who knew it from start to finish. The magistrate obligingly postponed the hearing until next Saturday, to enable Ida to write to Mr. Martin.

Broke Greenhouse Panes.

Joseph Castonido and John Caulfield, arrested for fighting, were arraigned be fore Judge Runyon this morning in the city court. They fought in front of Carl Peterson's greenhouse on Watchung avenue, opposite the trolley station, and they pushed in some of his panes in their pushing and gouging. They settled for the damage and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

The Goethe-Schiller monument, a gift of the German citizens of the city of Cleveland, has been dedicated. The services consisted of the formal unveiling, followed by a German-American festival.

Miss Julio Magruder, the novelist, who died at Richmond, Va., on Sunday, after a protracted illness, was the author of "The Child Amy," "Dead Selves," "Miss Ayr of Virginia," "A Realized Ideal," "A Heaven Kissing Hill," "Struan," "A Beautiful Alien" and "A Manfest Destiny." Her latest novel, "The Thousandth Woman," was published two years ago.

James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States, will visit Oklahoma and Indian Territory from June 13 to 18, travelling as the guest of A. J. Davidson, president of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway. Mr. Bryce is keenly interested in the proposed Oklahoma constitution.

Anna Katherine Green, who is a Mrs. Rohlfs, has a small boy of 14 who takes a very lively interest in his mother's work. After reading his mother's new book, "The Mayor's Wife," he remarked, "Gee! Mother, your must be a wizard—it beats 'The Leavenworth Case.'"

Judge Shute's "The Real Diary of a Real Boy" is largely based on actual occurrences in his boyhood. A portion of it was even taken from an old "Dairy" that he found.

Birissoff, the Russian artist, has won much praise from Lowdon art critics who have viewed his pictures of polar scenes. Dr. Nansen pronounces the sketches and paintings wonderful in their fidelity and vividness.

Edna Wallace Hopper, the actress, is seriously ill in her apartment in New York. She is threatened with typhoid fever. A long and exacting theatrical season and worry over the failure of the suit to break the will of Alexander Dunsmuir is said to be the cause.

Allan Everett Olney, the inventor, who is known wherever musical instruments are manufactured, has been committed to the insane asylum at Middletown, Conn.

In Belgium girls are expected to give five weeks out of each school year to learning housework. The girl is required to know not only how to cook a dinner, but to clean up and care for a kitchen, do marketing, wash and iron.

Sir Hiram Maxim, the great engineer and inventor of the automatic system of firearms, has confessed that he was no infant prodigy—in fact, he believes that he was the most stupid and also the best-behaved pupil at his grst school.

Baron Speck von Sternberg, the German Ambassador to the United States, is on his way from the Italian Tyrol to Dresden, where he will be received by King Frederick, on which occasion His Majesty will personally bestow on the Ambassador Saxony's highest decoration, the Grand Cross of Albrecht.

Young Alfonso, of Spain, is getting more and more Anglicized. Moved by the example of King Edward, he is about to start cattle farming on a large scale.

Mrs. Marshall Field, widow of Chicago's merchant prince, is to become an inspector of milk, a visitor to the tenement houses of Chicago, an angel of the hospitals and rival for sociological honors of Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

It seems that Theodore Roosevelt is not the first to give Oyster Bay Presidential distinction. George Washington once spent two days there. The house where he was entertained is still in good condition and the furniture in the room he occupied has never been changed.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mme. Sembrich is among the few public singers who use their married names.

Queen Liliuokalani has denied that she intends to get married again, although she is only sixty-eight.

St. Louis boasts of a girl blacksmith—Minnie Hagmann, aged sixteen, who shoes horses as quickly and neatly as does her experienced blacksmith father.

Rev. Anna H. Shaw, noted woman lecturer and president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, is building a handsome home for herself at Moylan, Pa.

Mrs. Collis P. Huntington, of New York, has purchased the Paris house of the late Baron Hirsch in the Avenue Gabriel. The price is said to have been $600,000.

In her niety-sixth year Mrs. Elizabeth F. Gillis, of Milford, is the oldest person in town and one of the oldest in Massachusetts. She has been a teacher for the greater part of her life.

Mrs. Roosevelt has chosen to ally herself with that part of society which goes in for uplifting. She has sedulously avoided the merely frivolous. Her name is on the list of patrons of art and music. She is pledged when her husband leaves office to aid in the establishment of a national academy of art and of a national conservatory, both to be supported by government funds.

Mother Stewart, the founder of the W. C. T. U., recently celebrated her ninety-first birthday anniversary. She was postmistress under General Jackson, the first woman known to hold a federal office. She was the first woman to ask for police matrons. She began the temperance crusade in Springfield, O., in 1873, singing and playing in the saloons. She has written four books, the last one in her eighty-ninth year.

TRAIN AND TRACK.

The Slugen railway in Switzerland, starting at Coire, will have a length of fifty-two miles. The main tunnel through the Splugen will be seventeen miles in length, and its estimated cost is $25,000,000.

The Southern Pacific Railroad has thirteen new lines under construction, representing an expenditure of $53,000,000. Five of the lines, comprising the principal part of the works, are in southern California.

Genoa and Milan are to be connected by an electric railroad eighty-five miles long, which is to cost $47,000,000. The high cost is owing to the nature of the country through which the line will pass. It will require nineteen tunnels, one of which will be twelve miles long. There will be 372 bridges, and the road will be six years in course of construction. The cost of the line construction alone will be $500,000 a mile.

COLLEGE AND SCHOOL.

Instead of using a common towel in the washroom pupils of the Winchester school, New Haven, Conn., are provided with absorbent paper, thus reducing the danger of spreading disease to a minimum.

Beginning with the fall of 1909 every student who seeks to enter the college of medicine and surgery of the University of Michigan as a candidate for the M. D. degree must show a certificate that he has had two years' work, to include special scientific subjects, in the literary department of some first class college or university.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

When the gums are tender and bleeding the mouth should be rinsed with warm water to which listerine has been added.

Hot water to which salt has been added is an excellent remedy for tonsilitis. Wet a cloth with the salt water and apply outwardly.

A good complexion cannot be rubbed in from the outside; it must be swallowed. The best way to get this is not in medicine, but in green vegetables and dandelion salad.

Cinders or foreign substances may be removed from the eye by inserting one or two flaxseeds, which will soon almost dissolve and ooze out through the closed linds, bringing the torturing speck with them.

PASSENGER GETS A VERDICT.

According to a decision in the Elizabeth District Court yesterday the contract on tickets need not be shown by holders on the demand of a conducter.

Max Folkenslick sued the New Jersey Central Railroad for $300 damages for alleged humiliation. He was a passenger on April 13 on a train bound for New York when he gave to the conductor the part of a ticket on which were printed the words: "Void if detached." The conductor refused to accept this part of the ticket, without the contract part, and when Folkenslick refused to show the other part he was put off the train. The jury gave Mr. Folkenslick a verdict for $50.

The Mystery of Carneycroft

By JOSEPH BROWN COOKE. COPYRIGHT 1907 BY STORY-PRESS CORPORATION

There's little to tell now, sir," said Bobbs, bravely keeping back his tears. "We lived either in my mother's house or in the old cellar with the tunnel that leads to the river. Mrs. Bruce is my mother, sir, and my name is Robert Bruce, but in the old country they used to call me "Bobs,' sir, after Lord Roberts, you know.

"Mother helped take care of Mr. Carney, sir, and washed his things and the bandages he used, and when we had to go to the cellar to stay as we did when you came, fearin' as you might see us at the house, Mr. Jenks would get the things for her when we'd leave 'm in the path. We always had enough to eat stored away for such times and we could get water from the river, but sometimes we had to send things to mother and so Mr. Jenks would take them. He didn't know we were here at all, sir, but he wants to marry mother, you know, and so he'd do whatever she told him, without asking any questions.

"Was it Jenks who told you when I cabled to Europe?" I asked. "You must have known of it very soon to have answered it so promptly."

"Yes, sir," replied Bobbs. "You see, sir, he's at the station every day, and a message to England made such a sensation that they were all talking of it, sir. When I told Mr. Carney about it, sir, he said I should answer it as I did, so I wrote at once to my cousin in New York, who'd been attending to the letters for us, sir, when they were sent on from London."

"How did you make the ghosts appear so well, Bobbs?" I asked. "They seemed to fairly float in the air."

"Oh, that was this way, sir," said Bobbs. "When Mr. Carney got so that he couldn't walk, on account of his feet being so bad, sir, he got some of those cycle skates with the big rubber wheels and we used to exercise with 'em at night, on the paths, sir. They'd go right over the leaves and grass, too, if it was pretty sharp down hill—we always went to the river, sir, when we were trying to get away, so that we could dive into the mouth of the old tunnel, if need be. We never had to do it but once. That was the time you and the other gentleman first saw us, sir. Most generally the folks would be so frightened that they would run, and then we could drop behind a bush and take off the sheets, like we did the night you had mother and Mr. Jenks down by the path, sir."

"But about the notes and the cigar case, Bobbs? How did you manage that?" I asked.

Bobbs tearfully produced a small monkey, not much larger than a kitten, from one of his pockets and, stroking the little animal affectionately, he said with emotion:

"It was Chico, sir. Mr. Carney brought him for a pet and he is almost human, sir, and will do anything you tell him. He's so sly, sir, that he can pick your pocket in broad daylight, sir, and you'll never find him out. I don't know about the cigar case, sir, but the day after you came last summer he got away and must have been in the library, where you and the other gentleman were looking for something. After you'd gone to the village, sir, I found him under one of the big chairs, clinging to the bottom, and scared half out of his wits as he always is after he's been playing pranks. You see," he explained, "I had a key to the kitchen door and could get in and out as I pleased until you had the new locks put on."

"Bobbs," I said, raising from my seat, "I want to ask you one more question before you go. Do you remember the first note that you sent me? The one Chico brought when he climbed up the ivy into my window last summer?"

"Yes, sir," said Bobbs, briefly.

"Well, how did you happen to say what you did in that note?" I asked.

"Mr. Carney told me to say it, of course, sir," replied Bobbs.

"Yes, sir," said Bobbs. "I was in the house watching you the day you came, sir, and when you picked up that glove of Miss Carney's and kissed it, sir, I told him of it. Then he said I should write the note as I did, sir, and that you'd make a good husband for her and he hoped you would marry her, sir."

"That will do, Bobbs," I said. "Good night, my boy. I hope you'll get some sleep."

I sat down once more by the dimly burning lamp and, taking the glove from my pocket, I kissed it gently again and again. A slight sound caused me to raise my eyes and I saw Florence Carney standing, with outstretched hands, in the shadow of one of the bookcases. I sprang toward her and, sobbing softly, she nestled in my arms, with hers entwined about my neck.

The only guest at my bachelor dinner, on the eve of my marriage, was MacArdel, and, as we were sipping our coffee, he exclaimed:

"By the way, Ware, you owe me this dinner. You remember our little wager last summer, don't you?"

"I remember it very well, indeed," I replied with a smile, "but it hasn't been decided in full. You don't know it, old man, but I haven't proposed to her yet," and we tossed a coin for the bill.

She Nestled in My Arms.

THE END.

RECTOR'S LIST OF "DON'TS" FOR WORKING GIRLS.

Gives Fourteen Rules to be Observed in Every Day Life.

A list of "don'ts" for the benefit of the working girls of his parish was announced this week by Monsignor Arthur J. Teeling, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, Lynn, Mass. They are:

"Don't go to public dances, and

"Don't go to Saturday night dances.

"Don't miss your prayers in the morning. Shorten your talk, with Cella or Jim by ten minutes the night before and have this time to spare in the morning.

"Don't read them at any time. Improve your mind; don't hold its diseases.

"Don't be late for work, and

"Don't give less labor than is due for what you receive. Hence,

"Don't gossip about Tillie and Mamie and Jim and some others until their characters are burned to a crisp, and, moreover, your work is still waiting.

"Don't give your employer a chance to be a benefactor. Rather beg your bread. Take a favor from any man and you are on most treacherous ground, therefore,

"Don't permit the least bit of familiarity from your employer, whether he be married or unmarried. You are there to work, not to start a honeymoon or to fill the demands of a sensualist.

"Don't 'live to eat.' You cannot stand the indiscretion of eating nothing but candy and ice cream and tea for lunch.

"Don't refuse to speak to Mary because Mary didn't answer at once a question you asked.

"Don't break into a conversation. It's far better to be poor and polite than rich and impolite.

"Don't be jealous. It will hurt, you, not the one of whom you are jealous."

ELIZABETH YOUNG MAN SHOT DOWN ON DOORSTEP.

Dropped Dead As He and His Father Were Pursuing the Assassin.

Fred Rash, aged twenty years, was fatally shot at 11:25, last night, as he was entering his home on Garden street, Elizabeth, and Charles Ferdio, of 21 South Broad street, this city, was arrested this morning, charged with the crime. After his arrest Ferdio acknowledged the shooting and he was committed.

Young Rash and his parents had been spending the evening with friends on Pearl street, Elizabeth, and when they neared home the young man said to his father, "Let me have the key to the front door and I will unlock it." He started ahead of his parents and as he was walking up the steps at the house a pistol shot was heard. Just then Rash and his father saw a man running away from the house. They chased him as far as Grier street, when the young man dropped dead. An examination showed that the bullet had struck near the heart.

Before the son died his father asked him who it was that shot, and he replied: "The grass cutter at the car works." This furnished a clue and the arrest of Ferdio followed this morning. He explained that he was going home at the time of the shooting and he thought that young Rash was after him when he ran toward the house. This was the only reason he gave for shooting. So far as can be learned Ferdio and Rash were unacquainted.

The first two people to respond to the request of the special committee appointed to secure funds for the enlargement of Somerset Hospital in Somerville were J. REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING.

Opp. R. R. Station. North and Elm Sts., Westfield, N. J.

SLICING A SKYSCRAPER.

Top of the Singer Building to be Cut Off For a Three Story Addition.

A portion of the upper part of the great Singer Building, at Liberty street and Broadway, which is passed by scores of Plainfielders every day, is to be sliced off and three additional stories sandwiched in between the seventh and eleventh floors. Work on the scaffolding began yesterday, and a small army of men will be occupied night and day until it is completed. The undertaking is confined to the original corner building, which is to be a part of the monster forty-one-story structure now being erected—the tallest office building in the world.

According to Ernest Flagg, the architect, the surgical operation is necessary in order that the old eleven story building shall conform in height and outline to the new fourteen-story addition above, from the centre of which will rise the 612-foot tower. It is also necessitated by the fabulous realty values in lower Broadway, the policy of the owners being to increase the height of the old building in order to obtain 15,600 square feet of additional office space.

The roof and structural material will be removed in sections to the ground. The eighth, ninth and tenth floors will then be built on, after which the old mansard roof, inclosing the four additional floors, will be replaced section by section.

The architect promises that no tenant on any of the lower floors will be disturbed between now and January, when the queer feat wil be colmpleted.

VAUDEVILLE ENDS TONIGHT.

The big vaudeville bill which has held the boards at the New Plainfield theatre all week, will be presented for the last time tonight. A large audience attended this afternoon and the popularity of Miss May Ward and her eight "Dresden dolls" took great leaps forward. This act is the feature of the bill and is one of the best that has ever been seen in the city.

Next week, Archie L. Shepard's pictures will be resumed under the "continuous" policy in vogue up to this week. The subjects will be changed twice each week.

Tailor Praed Severely Burned.

John J. Praed, the Park avenue tailor, was badly burned about the arms and hands, Thursday afternoon, in trying to extinguish a small fire at his store which started in a bunch of wadding in some mysterious manner. He attempted to carry the blazing stuff out doors, when the sleeves of his shirt caught fire. He dropped the wadding and grabbed up a rug in his efforts to extinguish the flames. He did not succeed until his hands and arms were terribly burned.

LESSONS OF THE CROSS

Rev. A. E. Finn Preaches Annual Sermon to Golden Eagle Knights.

SIN'S BITTER PENALTY

Defective Conception of Sin Leads People to Speak Scornfully of the Atonement—Pledge of Salvation.

The annual sermon to Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, was preached by Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night. The Knights met at the castle hall in the Babcock building, and marched in a body to the church, wearing uniform caps and regalia. The sermon and the service were of unusual interest to the knights, because Mr. Finn has just become a member of the order.

Preaching on "The Unsurpassed Theme," from Galatians 6:14, Mr. Finn said, in substance:

"In Scott's 'Lady of the Lake' we have given the account of how the old priest summoned the Clan to action. He took a piece of wood and converted it into a cross and dipped it in blood, and started it on its thrilling errand with these words:

"'When flits the cross from man to man,
Vich-Alpine's summons to his clan,
Burst be the ear that fails to heed!
Palsied the foot that fails to speed!
And be the grace to him denied,
Bought by this sign to all beside!'

"At the sight of the blood stained cross the fisherman left the strand, the blacksmith left his anvil, the farmer left his plough, the young man left his new made bride, and they all went to do duty in defense of home and country. What was there in that blood stained cross that inspired those men to action? What is there in this little wooden cross that plays such an important part in the ritual of your order? Is there any magic in the wood out of which it is made? Is there any virtue in the form into which this wood has been shaped? The cross was once an emblem of ignominy and shame, regarded in the very same way as we now regard the hangman's rope or the electric chair. What has changed this cross from an eblem of ignominy and shame to an emblem of sacrifice and love? Brothers I want you to ascend Mount Calvary with me tonight that we may see the place where Jesus was crucified, that we may see the place of our reconciliation with God, that we may see the place where the full price was paid for our redemption and salvation; and as we stand under the shadow of the cross I want you to think of some important lessons which it teaches.

"The cross of Jesus gives us God's estimate of sin. Turn to the Bible and you find this teaching about sin: 1. That sin is so bad that it brought upon the sinner the death penalty. 2. That sin is so bad that no penalty short of the death of the Son of God could atone for and cleanse from it. How many people speak now with scorn about the atonement, and why? Because of a defective conception of sin. We will never appreciate the cross of Jesus until we have the Bible conception of sin, viz., that it destroys our lives here and hereafter.

"The cross of Jesus gives us an estimate of God's love for man. We hear much about the sweetness of love, but it has another side and that is why it is the antithesis of selfishness. Love costs; God did not love man without a termendous cost. There was peril in Christ's mission to the world. In his marvelous love for us he put his lips to the poison of our sin and died.

"The cross of Jesus is the pledge of man's salvation. The chasm made by sin has been bridged by the cross of Christ. Christ had to die that he might render men service, and especially that he might render them the service of being a ransom, that he might bring a liberating, emancipating, freeing power into their lost and enslaved lives.

"Our acceptance of the finished work on the cross is the pledge of our future happiness. Heaven is the place where man meets his God, where we shall see Him face to face, where hope merges into fruition, where home looms up brighter, more glorious and eternal, and where happiness becomes complete, unalloyed, and endless, and heaven is not attained by any merits of ours. It is attained by the acceptance of the finished work on the cross."

Mrs. William Hepburn Clark.

Mrs. Dorothea Sparkman, wife of William Hepburn Clairk, of East Ninth street, the daughter of the late James D. Sparkman and Mary Ann Place, died on Friday at Clifton Springs, N. Y., where she had been since the holidays for treatment of diseases. She is survived by a son and two daughters. The burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery, New York.

DEATH COMES TO MRS. LYDIA P. ACKERMAN

PASSED AWAY AT AT HER HOME; "LYDE PARK," SCOTCH PLAINS.

Mrs. Lydia P. Ackerman, widow of the late Warren Ackerman, Esq., died at her home, "Lyde Park," Scotch Plains, early yesterday morning. For several months she had not enjoyed her customary good health, but only within a short time has her vitality failed.

While Mrs. Ackerman had no children of her own, a gentle and life long care has been extended to her nephew, Furman Platt, of New York, who survives her, and who was constantly with her during her last illness.

Among her wide circle of relatives and acquaintances, Mrs. Ackerman has always been known for her unselfish and hositable character, and her death will carry a long and sincere sorrow to the hearts of many who have enjoyed her friendship and been comforted by her tender and practical sympathy.

Funeral services will be held at the First Presbyterian church, of this city, on Wednesday morning, at 11 o'clock, and interment at the family mansoleum at Hillside cemetery.

BRIEF ILLNESS FATAL TO MRS. ISAAC M. RUNYON.

Died Saturday From Bronchial Affection Which Affected Her Few Days Before.

Mrs. Susan M. Runyon, wife of Isaac M. Runyon, aged seventy-three years, died suddenly at her home on West Front street and Washington avenue, Saturday afternoon after a brief illness from bronchial affection with which she was taken a few days before. She recovered sufficiently to visit some friends at Metuchen on Thursday. Friday and Saturday she was feeling better, but Saturday she was a little weaker. Early in the afternoon she was taken with a fainting spell and quietly passed away.

Mrs. Runyon was Miss Susan M. Stelle, daughter of Drake Stelle, of Stelton, where she was born. She was married to Mr. Runyon forty-eight years ago and lived where she died from that time. Mr. Runyon was born at his present place of residence and has always resided there. Mrs. Runyon was the last of four sisters and three brothers. She was a faithful member and regular attendant of the First Baptist church, and was especially interested in the cause of missions. She was a woman of exemplary Christian character and beloved by all who knew her. She is survived by a husband, a daughter, Miss Louise Runyon, a teacher in the Bryant School, and one son, Howard J. Runyon. The funeral services will be held from the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

HIS AUTO WRECKED.

Mr. Tilney's Cautious Driving Went For Naught on Pluckemin Road.

A. A. Tilney, of Central avenue, driving his touring automobile to Morristown yesterday afternoon, pulled to one side of the road between Pluckemin and Somerville, to give a clear path to an approaching car. Mr. Tilney is a cautious driver, and he went almost to the ditch in his anxiety to give the other car plenty of room. He might just as well have stayed in the center of the roadway, because the other auto ran plump into his machine. The front wheels engaged, and a general ripping and tearing ensued. Nobody was hurt, but the colliding car was put out of commission, and Mr. Tilney's car was crippled so it could hardly limp home.

Nobody could tell what brought the other machine into the Tilney auto. It is supposed the driver thought he had room enough to go by, and left himself no time for steering out when the mistake in calculation made itself evident.

In Mr. Tilney's car were Mrs. Tilney, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murray, Jr., and the chauffeur. The other car was driven by a Montclair man, who gave his name to Mr. Tilney. Neither car was going over eight miles an hour. Mrs. Tilney and Mrs. Murray came home by trolley. The men stuck to the crippled auto.

BAPTISTS WON THE MEET

Take Another Cup in Outdoor Competition of the S. S. A. A.

NO TROUBLE TO WIN

But Congregationalists Made a Stronger Bid For First Honors Than In Other Meets.

Another cup was won by the First Baptist Church Sunday-school for athletic supremacy Saturday afternoon. The Baptist entrants in the out-door meet of the Sunday-school Athletic League held to form, and had no particular trouble in repeating the triumphs of the indoor meets. At the same time, the victory was not as one-sided by a good deal as the others had been. The Congregationalists made a strong bid for the cup, and only fourteen points separated them from the winners at the end of the meet. The meet was at the Riding and Driving Club grounds.

The Baptists scored sixty-seven points, and the Congregationalists, fifty-three. The First Methodist school, the only other to contest, scored eight. Stryker Hoagland won the gruelling mile run for them handily.

A feature of the meet was the sprinting of D. R. Miller, First Baptist. He took five firsts and easily led in medal winning.

BIG FIELD OF GOLFERS

Sixty-Four Starters in Metropolitan Association's Event on Country Club Links.

LOW SCORES RULED

Best Net Returned By Frank O. Reinhart But Rules Keep Him From Getting Prize.

The one-day golf tournament open to the men of the Metropolitan Golf Association, which was held at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday, was a great success. The field was much larger than anticipated and exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the club members. It was the first event of the kind ever held at the local club, although they have been frequent in the Women's M. G. A. and in the West, and as the Wykagyl and other clubs in the association have taken up the lead of the Plainfield Country Club, the innovation promises to be a feature of the season.

There was not much of an advance entry list, as it was understood that the contestants would be paired at the first tee. The handicapping, which was under the personal direction of Leighton Calkins, was satisfactory in every way and not a complaint was heard.

There were sixty-four starters and all but a few posted their scores. It was a disappointment that Walter J. Travis and Jerome D. Travers were not among the players, but Findlay S. Douglas, Archie Reid, Max Behr and J. L. Taylor, who won the handicap event at Garden City, last season, furnished a quartette of well-known outside talent. As was to be expected there were several ties.

Frank O. Reinhart returned the best net score for the day, a 70, but being a member of the home club was not eligible to take the first prize. Findlay Douglas, who was tie with Reinhart for the best gross score, received the first prize, while the Plainfielder received the second gross score prize. L. P. Gwyer, of Siwanoy, received the third gross score prize on the playoff of a tie with Marshall Whitlatch and Archie Reid for the best net score prize, there being three ties at 71.

It was pretty late when all the scores were posted, but the players who were tied for the first net score prize were willing to playoff and they did at 12 holes. It was nearly 8 o'clock when the play was completed. The result was that Archie Reid, of St. Andrew, won the first prize, with a score of 52; Marshall Whitlatch received the second net score prize with a score of 55. There still remained one tie between S. H. Lockert, of Montclair, and C. W. Hunt, of Englewood, for the third net score prize, each returning a 74. Mr. Lockert went home directly after he finished and this match will have to be played later.

All of the scores were excellent, although some of them were not as low as expected. There was not a net score of 100, the highest being a 98, returned by W. H. Rose, of Arsdale.

The committee in charge of the tournament, of which Julius E. Erickson was the chairman, performed its duties in a way that pleased everyone. Roy Cox and C. B. Morgan looked after the score board and posted the various scores as the contestants came in. The visiting players were much pleased with the tournament, the course and the hospitality of the home club. During the afternoon each group of players was followed by a fair sized gallery which lent additional interest.

The course was never in better condition, which was due to the untiring efforts of Mr. Calkins, chairman of the Green committee. He was on the course as early as 6:30 Saturday morning and had his men at work putting on the finishing touches, and he remained there throughout the day. After the tournament there were many dinner parties, the home club members entertaining such of the visiting players as could stay.

The complete list of scores returned in the tournament follow:

Frank O. Reinhart, Plainfield Country Club, 73, 3—70; Archie Reid, St. Andrew, 75, 4—71; Marshall Whitlatch, Montclair, 75, 4—71; Findlay S. Douglas, Nassau, 73, 2—71; L. P. Gwyer, Siwanoy, 76, 5—71; S. H. Lockert, Montclair, 78, 4—74; C. W. Hunt, Englewood, 85, 11—74; Morris J. Dumont, Plainfield Country Club, 81, 6—75; E. M. Wild, Cranford, 80, 5—75; R. Story Rowland, Plainfield Country Club, 82, 6—76; Henry D. Hibbard, Plainfield Country Club, 84, 7—77; S. D. Bowers, Brooklawn, 82, 5—77; M. D. W. Thurston, Baltusrol, 87, 10—77; H. V. Gaines, Wykagyl, 86, 9—77; Harold Wilcox, Montclair, 82, 4—78; J. B. C. Baker, Arsdale, 84, 6—78; J. M. Rhett, Dyker Meadow,

A REMARKABLE PHYSIQUE

DEFIES OLD AGE

Scorns Glasses, Plays Pool and Takes Five Mile Walks Just For the Exercise.

Bennet Brittin, who is Plainfield's "oldest-young man," and without doubt the most remarkably preserved individual in New Jersey, was ninety-four years old yesterday, and in honor of the occasion he held "open house" at his home on West Front street, at Clinton avenue. Friends called to extend greetings and "many happy returns" until late in the evening but when it was all over the celebrant was as fresh as the proverbial daisy.

Mr. Brittin was born at Paterson, on June 16, 1813, of Dutch parentage and it is doubtful at the present time if one man in a dozen would guess his age at more than seventy-five. Tall and erect, with no semblance of the stoop brought by the weight of years, he is up and doing every day of the year and does work that "youngsters" of sixty would think over twice before attempting. At the present time he conducts a pool room at his place in the Evona district and there are few men who chase the ivories over the table that can beat him at the game. Scorning glasses and with a steady hand, this agile nonogenarian handles the cue like a professional and often stops to hand out pointers to his competitors.

And he is very much interested in athletics, too. Strange as it may seem, when the Hope Y. M. A. held its big Fourth of July celebration five years ago, Mr. Brittin tendered his entry for the fat men's race. After their first shock of surprise was over, the officials refused it with the explanation that they were afraid the exertion would prove too much for him. The applicant was very much offended, and since then he has met and defeated several runners in friendly matches. He keeps an eye on the sports of the day and can hand out baseball dope with the most pronounced crank.

Mr. Brittin is a veteran of the Civil War, having served with distinction in the First N. Y. (Lincoln's) cavalry, and his striding figure is familiar in the local G. A. R. Memorial Day parades. At last month's celebration he marched over the entire route and finished up without the least sign of fatigue. The walk from Clinton avenue to town and back again is a mere nothing to him and he frequently takes a five mile jaunt just as an appetizer.

For the greater part of his life, this remarkable "old-young" man has been in the hotel business, starting in at Sixth avenue and Forty-first street, opposite the Crystal palace site, when little more than a boy. He was forty-eight years old when the call to arms came from Lincoln, but he declared he was forty-five in order to be one of the "boys in blue." After the war he returned to New York but soon after came to Plainfield and took up farming on what is now Terrill road, near the Jackson school house. He built the hotel at Terrill road and South avenue and after conducting it for some years, in 1880 bought out George Miller, who was proprietor of a similar place at Scotch Plains. This he managed until 1893 when he disposed of the business to "Billy" Lee and located at Clinton avenue.

Mr. Brittin's memory is wonderful and he relates facts as far back as 1825 with amazing accuracy. He is a very interesting talker and it seems like reading a page from history to have him tell of the old days in New York when everybody ran to fires, when the Dutch night watchman roamed the streets and called out "zwelf o'clock and all be's well" and when all traveling was accomplished by stage coach.

Mr. Brittin's father lived to be ninety-four and his mother to ninety-seven. His paternal grandfather died at the ripe old age of 104. He has but one daughter, Mrs. Susan DeCastro, of Havana, Cuba, who is visiting him at the present time.

Fast Going; Slow Returning.

The Timbo Social Club excursion to Atlantic City, yesterday, was a great success. Some 200 bon vivants enjoyed the trip. It started from North avenue at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. The run down was made in three hours. The return trip was begun at 10 o'clock at night, and it was 3 o'clock before the train reached Plainfield.

Arrested in the Borough.

John Breen, of Plainfield, was arrested in the borough Saturday night, for being drunk and disorderly. He will be given a hearing before Recorder Dolliver tonight at 7 o'clock.

MISS EDNA M. NICHOLL A CHARMING JUNE BRIDE

WEDDED AT HOME CEREMONY TO JONATHAN A. RAWSON, OF BROOKLYN.

Miss Edna Marion Nicholl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Nicholl, of Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, and Jonathan Ansel Rawson, of Brooklyn, were quietly married Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. Owing to the recent death of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Townsend, the invitations were limited to the families of the contracting parties and a few intimate friends. Rev. Clarence C. Woodruff, pastor of the Roselle Park Methodist Episcopal church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Nicholl, as maid-of-honor, and the ribbon girls wereMiss Louise Townsend Nicholl, sister of the bride; Miss Kate Cameron Simmons, of Brooklyn; Miss Mabel Alger Powell, of Ghent, N. Y.; Miss Anne Elizabeth Rawson, of East Alstead, N. H., sister of the groom. The flower bearers were Miss Katherine vanDyke and Robert Lowry vanDyke, of Westfield, niece and nephew of the bride.

The bridal party was met in the parlor by the groom and his best man, Chester Tapley Porter, of Worcester, Mass. The ceremony was performed beneath an arbor of locust, the bride being given away by her father.

The bride was gowned in a princess lace robe over white satin and wore a tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and sweet peas and maiden-hair fern. The maid-of-honor wore a gown of pink point d'esprit over pink silk and carried a shower bouquet of mignonette. The ribbon girls were gowned, two in pale green and two in violet. The flower bearers were dressed in white and carried daisies.

The house was elaborately decorated, the parlor being in white and green, the supper room in pink and green, there being a profusion of flowers and greens.

After the ceremony the couple received congratulations and supper was served. Later Mr. and Mrs. Rawson left for a wedding trip. The bride is a graduate of Swarthmore College. She was formerly contralto soloist at the First Presbyterian church, and is very popular. She received a large number of gifts of use and value. The groom is a graduate of Amherst College, and a number of classmates from both Swarthmore and Amherst attended the wedding. The groom is engaged in the export business in New York and he and his bride will reside at Summit upon their return.

FIRST PUBLIC SERVICE AT Y. W. C. A. NEXT SUNDAY.

Formal Opening of the Building Will Not Be Observed Until Next Fall.

The home of the Young Women's Christian Association at 212 East Front street is nearly ready for complete occupancy and by the end of the week the repairs will be finished, after which the house will be opened to the members of the association, but no formal opening will be held until fall.

On Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, the first public service will be held there. It will be a dedication service. After Sunday the pledged members are asked to come to the house and attend to their membership pledges and inspect the building.

Plans are being made for extensive educational work in the fall. A basketball team, an evening reading circle, the use of the reading room will be some of the features. The secretary, Miss Tapping, will be at the office from 11 to 12 o'clock in the morning and during the evening.

Serious Conflagration Prevented.

Fire was discovered in one of the sheds in Guion's lumber yard on Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon, at 5:55 o'clock, and in answer to an alarm sent in from Box 21 by F. T. Ostrom, all the apparatus at headquarters responded. The fire, which it is believed was started by a spark from a passing locomotive, was well underway, when the department arrived, and it was only due to prompt work on the part of the firemen that a serious conflagration was prevented. The damage amounted to $25. There was no insurance.

Bad End to Trolley Ride.

Elwood Geary took his little son for a trolley ride Saturday afternoon. He stopped off at two or three places to take a holiday drink or two. The usual result followed. Captain Frederickson saw him staggering helplessly at Washington and Front streets at 7:45 o'clock, with the child clinging to him, and placed him under arrest. He was penitent in the city court this morning, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

WRECKED AGAINST TREE

Trolley Car Jumps Track and Motorman Has Narrow Escape.

TRACKS IN BAD SHAPE

Trolley car No. 259, of the Somerset street line, northbound, jumped the track near the Greenbrook bridge shortly after 12:30 o'clock this noon, and nearly wrecked itself against a tree in front of Horace J. Martin's blacksmith shop. The motorman, John Hill, of Dunellen, had a narrow escape from injury, and the dozen passengers and a number of passers-by might have been hurt in ten or more different ways, but luck held good all the way through the accident. The car was only slightly damaged, and the tree will go on growing. It was as spectacular an accident as the trolley company has furnished for some time, and a crowd of people spent a half hour thinking up the various ways in which everybody on the car and seven or eight people on the street might have been mashed up and killed.

A bad stretch of track was responsible for 259's jump. The rails are so bad where the car left them that it is a wonder a dozen cars a day haven't done what 259 did. Hill, the motorman, shut off power when he approached the stretch, but the car was going some when the front truck lef the rails. Hill put on the brake hard, but the car went on for thirty feet or more and then swung around almost full and headed for the walk. It hit the curb with a bang, went up on the flags and brought up full against the tree before Mr. Martin's place. It smashed a box sign about the tree to flinders, and the fender went to smash.

Hill clung to the brake all the way. He had time to jump as the car headed for the tree, but he took his chances to kill what speed he could in the g rinding wheels. The impact threw him hard against the car front, and his left leg was badly wrenched. Dr. A. H. Dundon examined it after the crash, and said his injury was not serious.

The passengers were badly rattled when the car turned toward the walk, but none of them jumped. Jerry Griffin, the conductor, jumped as the car hit; he was not hurt. A woman who got away before her name could be learned, was slightly injured. Leonard Young, a barber, who was crossing the street when the car jumped around, reported himself hurt to the conductor. He said something knocked him down and gave him an awful bump.

The accident did not make the track worse than it had been, and traffic was not delayed. The passengers who felt brave enough to risk their lives over the rest of the scarred and gouged and bumpy rails transferred to the next car.

GAVE A HOUSE PARTY.

Miss Helen Armstrong Hostess at Enjoyable Affair.

A house-party at the home of Miss Helen Armstrong, of Duer street, beginning Friday night, included several guests from out of town, among whom were Miss Trixie Nash, of Brooklyn; Miss Bessie Leary, of Utica; and Arthur B. Lawrence, of Easton, Pa. The festivities began with a card party at Miss Armstrong's home on Friday night. Saturday afternoon the young people went to "Big Tree Farm," near Dunellen, where various sports were played and dancing enjoyed.

Besides the hostess and those mentioned, others in the party were Miss Strickland and Mr. Close, of Bound Brook; Miss Morgan, Miss Shock, Miss Long, Fred Armstrong, Enoch and Edward Hardingham, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Peter and Fred Leary, of Plainfield.

RIVERMAN IN REAL ACTION.

Journey Down Stream on a Log Simple Exercise to Him.

First and foremost, your riverman can ride a log. This does not mean merely that he is able to stand upright or to jump from one to another without splashing in—though even that is no mean feat, as a trial will convince you. That is the kindergarten of it. The sawlog in the water is not only his object of labor, but his means of transportation. Your true riverman on drive almost never steps on land except to eat and sleep. A journey downstream is to him an affair of great simplicity. He pushes into the current a stick of timber, jumps lightly atop it, leans against his peavy and floats away as graceful as a Grecian statue. When his unstable craft overtakes other logs he deserts it, runs forward as far as he can—the logs bobbing awash behind his spring—and so continues on another timber. Jack Boyd once for a bet rode for 12 miles down Grand river on a log he could carry to the stream's bank across his shoulders. Fully half the time his feet were submerged to the ankles. Nor does quick water always cause your expert riverman to disembark. Using his peavy as a balancing pole and treading with squirrel-like quickness as his footing rolls, he will run rapids of considerable force and volume. When the tail of a drive passes through the chute of a dam there are always half a dozen or so of the "rear" men who, out of sheer bravado, will run through standing upright like circus riders and yelling like fiends.—Outing Magazine.

MUSIC OF MAN AND BIRDS.

Interesting to Trace Evolution of the World's Harmony.

If the discovery of independent evolutions of human music all tending in the same direction indicates the existence of an ideal standard toward which progress leads, how much stronger is the evidence afforded by the fact that bird music is developing along the same lines! It seems a far cry from a Beethoven symphony of a Wagnerian opera to the simple lay of a sparrow, but as we trace the course of the mighty river of music back toward its source, the stream becomes narrower and narrower, until it is contracted to a point where it is no broader than the little rill of bird music. Nor does the decrease stop there; for, remarkable as it may seem, there was a time when the music from which ours has been evolved was inferior to some of that which floats to our ears from the woods of spring. This is not to say merely that the songs of certain of the birds involve more intervals and greater variety, but that they are of a higher order judged by our own modern standards.—Henry Oldys in Harper's.

We're Not "So Much" on Music.

We boast of our "grand orchestras" of 60 pieces. Bah! When the "Creation" was performed at the palace of Prince Lobzowitz there were 160 chosen musicians. The audience included nobles, artists and celebrities from many parts of the world, about 1,500 in number. Haydn, then an old man, was present. Dr. Cappelini, a distinguished physician, seeing that the composer was not sufficiently covered, asked for wraps; and immediately ladies offered splendid cashmere shawls, which were placed around the legs and feet of the venerable man. That was the crowning day of his life's labors. The director of the orchestra and many noblemen came forward and shook hands tenderly and respectfully with the great master.—N. Y. Press.

If the Sun Were Another Color.

It is amazing to consider the possibilities if the sun were some other color. If it were blue, for instance, there would be only two colors in the world, blue and black; or if it were red then everything would be red or black. In the latter case we should have red snow, red lillies, black grass, black clear sky and red clouds. There would be a little variety, however, if the sun were green. Things that are now yellow would still remain that color, but there would be no reds, purples, orange or pinks and very few of those cheery hues that make the world so bright and pleasant.

One Benefit of Matrimony.

She had sat by him once or twice at the little restaurant with the big friendly tables, so when the long mustached waiter set the soup bowl before her she helped him and passed him his plate. She was amazed at his gratitude. "I can't thank you enough," he told her. "That soup will taste entirely different to me now. Do you know, I get so blamed lonely dining night after night at these restaurants and cafes with only the waiters to serve me I've been on the ragged edge of marrying more than once, just to get sombody to ladle out my soup."

Low Voltage Incandescent Lamp.

For use in conjunction with storage batteries a new low voltage incandescent lamp has recently been put on the market in Germany, the filament of which is made of osram instead of carbon. The results of this substitution is that storage batteries made up of a small number of cells can furnish ample current for the operation of such lamps, which are especially designed for use on automobiles, motor boats, etc.

His Way.

IN OCEAN'S GREATEST DEPTHS.

Pressure of Water That Would Destroy a Battleship.

More than half the surface of the globe is hidden under water two miles deep; 7,000,000 square miles lie at a depth of 18,000 feet or more. Many places have been found five miles and more in depth. The greatest depth yet sounded is 31,200 feet, near the island of Guam. If Mount Everest, the world's highest mountain, were plucked from its seat and dropped into this spot the waves would still roll 2,000 feet above its crest. Into this terrific abyss the waters press down with a force of more than 10,000 pounds to the square inch. The stauchest ship ever built would be crippled under this awful pressure like an eggshell under a steam roller. A pine beam, 15 feet long, which held open the mouth of a trawl used in making a cast at a depth of more than 18,000 feet, was crushed flat as if it had been passed between rollers. The body of the man who should attempt to venture to such depths would be compressed until the flesh was forced into the interstices of the bone and his trunk was no larger than a rolling pin. Still, the body would reach the bottom, for anything that will sink in a tub of water will sink to the uttermost depths of the ocean. —Eugene Willoughby in The Ocean.

THE TALE OF A FISH.

As Related to His Friends by the Veracious Jenkins.

They had been discussing fish and fishing, when Jenkins suddenly added: "Did I ever tell you about Pitti Sing, my pet Japanese fan-tailed goldfish? Bought her from Jake Hope for $45, and she is no longer than your finger. But about her intelligence. Of course, she comes when called and eats out of your hand and all that childish nonsense; but here's a thing she did which indicates thought, reasoning, brainwork. One day a candlestick fell from the mantel on to the thick glass bowl in which Pitti Sing was dreaming. The candlestick cracked the bowl and knocked a small hole in it. Pitti Sing, all alone in the drawing room, saw the water that was essential to her existence flowing through the hole, and what do you think she did? She plugged up the leak with her tail, and in that position I found her on my return an hour or so later. She had saved her life, but the end of her tail, from exposure to the air, was all shriveled and cracked. I had to massage it with cold cream before the poor little thing could swim again." There was painful silence for a few minutes; then when Dumply said it looked like rain everybody but Jenkins followed him out.

Smoked in Church.

Although the present universal habit of smoking is of comparatively recent date, the use of tobacco was carried to a great excess when it was first introduced. Our ancestors smoked even in church. All such offenders were solemnly excommunicated by Urban VIII. in 1624, and again by Innocence XII. in 1690, when the practice seems to have extended to Rome itself. There was William Breedon, too, vicar of Thornton, "a profound divine, and absolutely the most polite person for nativities in that age," of whom the astrologer Lilly says that "when he had no tobacco he would cut the bell ropes and smoke them."

Ancient "Cure" for Madness.

In the "Dictionarium Domesticum, Being a New and Compleat Household Dictionary for the Use Both of City and Country" (1736), is this sure cure for a malady which has in modern times been regarded as rather obstinate: "For lunacy and madness—Boil three large handfuls of ground ivy, shred small, in two quarts of wine till there is but one-third part remaining; then strain it and add to it six ounces of the best salad oil; boil it up to an ointment, shave the patient's head, warm the ointment and chafe his head with it. This is Dr. Wadenfield's remedy, with which a person is said to have cured 60 lunatick persons."

Sport of the Infant Japanese Girl.

Little girls make a play of one thing that in after years becomes labor, labor of love though it is. So soon as a girl is old enough, perhaps three or four, her dolly is tied to her back in the same way that she was fastened to her nurse's back when she was a baby. She carries this about while at play, and as she grows older a larger doll is used until she has grown accustomed to the weight and is able to carry her baby brother or sister, thus relieving her mother, who perhaps works in the rice fields or in a tea garden.—Laura B. Starr, in the Circle.

Siamese Object to Walking.

The Siamese, above all nations in the world, hate to walk; no such mode of progression is tolerated by a Siamese if he or she can by any means ride. A Venetian gondolier will walk sometimes; even a Hollander will ride on his rough cart; but a Bangkok man—not if he can help it. His family boat for him.—Windsor Magazine.

His Classification.

"Oh, I don't intend to be scrupulous about the way I get on," said the young lawyer, who thought himself the greatest ever. "I frankly intend to rent out my head to anybody who wants to make use of it." "Then, if you advertise it," replied his cynical friend, "they'll put you under the heading of Empty Flats."

LIFE-LONG CRIPPLE DIES AT ALMSHOUSE

ELMER KREGAR HAD BAFFLED PHYSICIANS BY HIS PECULIAR AFFLICTION.

Elmer Kreger, who had been a cripple all of his life, and whose case has baffled well-known doctors of this city, New Brunswick and New York, died at the Piscataway Almshouse Saturday. He was about the most remarkable inmate that the almshouse has ever had, excepting, of course, that famous old fellow, Noah Raby, who was cut down in his youth a few years ago at the age of 132 or thereabouts.

Kreger was eighteen years old, and was an inherited cripple, Superintendent Henry Hummer declares. He came from a family of cripples. For the first ten years of his life he was able to toddle around a little. The next five years of his life he was only able to sit in a chair and for the past three years and four months he laid in bed.

He had not been able in these three years to move a muscle of his body an inch, excepting his fingers, which he was able to twitch a little, and his eyebrows, which he was able to move. He was totally powerless and the township maintained a special nurse all of that time to take care of him. He was at the almshouse for thirteen years.

And in those years he never missed a meal and he never complained of his condition or his lot in life. He never spoke of his illness; never made a complaint that fate had used him roughly.

The only time that Superintendent Hummer heard him speak of his suffering was Saturday when he was dying.

"Oh, dear, Boss," he exclaimed, "I am choking."

The boy was buried yesterday afternoon at South Plainfield, where the Piscataway township has a plot for the burial of its poor. The boy has a sister residing in Plainfield.

Memorial Service at St. Stephens.

A memorial service in commemoration of the first communion service held at Jamestown, Va., in 1607, it being the 300th anniversary of that event, was observed at St. Stephen's church, yesterday, with a full choral service. Herbert Guinn was the precentor, and Charles Suhr presided at the organ. A feature of the services held in the morning and afternoon was the singing by Mrs. Edward Horton, of Roseville, who was the soloist for the day. Her selections were especially appropriate and her fine voice greatly enjoyed. It was expected that Canon Bryan, of the Diocese of Long Island, would be present to preach, but he was detained and the rector, Rev. A. S. Peck filleld the place.

EDITORS' ANNUAL OUTING

Newspapermen and Their Wives the Guests of the New Jersey Central.

AT ISLAND PARK

Sixth Annual Affair Proves to Be One of the Most Delightful Yet Given By the Road.

The sixth annual outing and complimentary dinner tendered to the editors along its lines in New Jersey and Pennsylvania by the New Jersey Central was given Saturday and proved a delightful affair for the editors and their wives. The day was perfect and the place selected, Island Park, Easton, is an ideal spot for such a gathering. The special vestibule train, with dining car attached, from Point Pleasant, Thomas Flanagan, conductor, stopped at Plainfield at 9:50 and A. R. Parkhurst and wife, of the Courier-News, H. H. Webb and wife, of the North Plainfield Weekly Review, and A. L. Force and wife, of The Daily Press, the invited guests from Plainfield, stepped aboard, and were cordially greeted by District Passenger Agent C K. Armstrong, of Newark; I. E. White, district passenger agent, of Asbury Park, and Arthur Tomalin, advertising agent of the road.

The run to Phillipsburg was made in one hour and ten minutes, including six stops for other editors and their wives. At Phillipsburg, the Easton Traction Company, owners of Island Park, placed a half dozen special trolley cars at the disposal of the party and soon they were on a delightful trolley ride across the Delaware river into the business section of Easton and thence along the Lehigh river to Island Park, about five miles west of Easton.

Arriving at the park about 11:30, all were made to feel the hearty greeting of the "Central's" officials—"It's All Yours, Step in and Help Yourselves." After renewing acquaintance with the Pennsylvania editors, who arrived about 12 o'clock on a special train from Scranton, dinner was announced and the whole party, about 200 in number, sat down in a large covered pavilion, "Henthorn's," where a full course dinner was served to the accompaniment of lively music by a fine orchestra.

After dinner, W. C. Hope, the genial general passenger agent of the road, mounted a chair and in well-chosen words welcomed all, closing his remarks after a favorite saying of President Roosevelt that he was "De-lighted" to see his friends the editors and their wives at this sixth annual outing. Mr. Hope read telegrams from Charles M. Burt and Mr. Hayden, regretting their inability to be present and also a letter of regret from Mr. Besler, full of good cheer for the editors and his earnest regret at being prevented from joining them at this outing.

P. Hall Packer, of The Seabright News, a jolly good fellow, and a typical toastmaster, was unanimously chosen to act in that capacity, and after a few well-chosen remarks, called on D. A. Miller, of The Allentown Call, who made a short speech before presenting a set of resolutions, thanking the "Central" for all they have been able to do for the editors in the past and predicting further success for the "model road" in the coming year. J. P. Correl, of the Easton Call, gave the editors some good and wholesome advice and said many pleasant things about the "Central," which called forth applause.

After dinner, dancing, rowing, sailing, pony-riding, merry-go-rounds, vaudeville performance, shooting galleries, coasters and many other attractions were thrown "wide open" to the party and enjoyed to the full, until 4:15, when the trip homeward was commenced, the Plainfield party arriving home about 6:20.

The railroad officials present at the dinner were W. C. Hope, C. W. Huntington, C. L. Merrill, H. E. Ruhe, I. E. White, C. J. Gummersbach, C. K. Armstrong and Arthur Tomalin, and many were the nice things, "said to their faces," by the editors and their wives for their "sixth annual."

The Columbia Phonograph Company furnished a man to operate one of its celebrated graphaphones on each train and the latest catchy airs were playing during the trip to the delight of all.

Those present from nearby towns were G. W. Day and wife, Dunellen Call; W. B. R. Mason and wife, Bound Brook Chronicle; W. Reiss and wife, Bound Brook Bote; D. D. Clark, Jr., and wife, Bound Brook State Centre-Record; C. H. Bateman and wife, Somerville Unionist-Gazette; E. W. Wight and wife, Somerville Democrat; J. H. Mattison and wifefi Somerville Messenger; Lloyd Thompson and wife, Westfield Standard; G. A. V. Hankinson and wife, Westfield Leader; J. A. Potter and wife and Mrs. Boice, Cranford Chronicle; J. E. Warner and wife, Cranford Citizen.

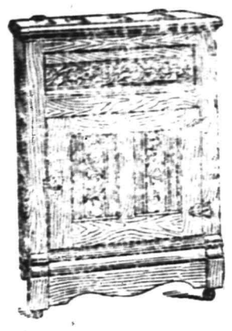
"Jewett" Refrigerators



We consider the "Jewett" the best refrigerator made—because they are made to stand hard service; they are the most economical in ice consumption; they give perfect service and are sold at popular prices. If we had not bought these refrigerators very early in the season we would have to charge from $2.50 to $5.00 more for them. In addition to the fact that we can save you money, is the satisfaction that you are getting a refrigerator that years of experience has proven to be all that we claim. The cool weather may have kept refrigerators out of your mind, but you'll be wise to make your selection now.

White Visitor Whacked Him.

Henry Lewis, colored was arrested Saturday night at his home on Arlington avenue. Policeman Messler, on complaint of his wife, who charged him with beating her. Henry told Judge Runyon in the city court this morning that he was the beaten one. He had a cut under his right eye and a moruning band about his othe optic to bear out the statement. He said he found a white man in his house when he came home, and both the visitor and his wife pounded him. He said he took a memorandum of the white man's name, but his wife jumped on him and took the paper from him. Judge Runyon suspended sentence. Henry said he wasn't going back to his home no more, as long as the world lasted.

Your Doctor Will Tell You That You Need A Natural Tonic

The majority of so-called "Spring" tonics supply a false stimulation to the body—but this is not the natural and most beneficial way of helping the system to overcome lassitude.

DR. D. JAYNE'S TONIC VERMIFUGE

tones and builds up the body in the natural way—through the stomach. A run-down condition of health is almost invariably due to a disordered stomach and digestive organs. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge tones the stomach and restores it to its normal healthy condition. Then the restored stomach does the building up and brings the body back to a state of perfect health. This is the natural way.

Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge is sold by all druggists, in three sizes, $1.00, 50c. and 25c.

EAST JERSEY TENNIS PLAY AT THE PARK CLUB

MATCHES ON THE COURTS FOLLOWED BY A DANCE.

All but two matches were completed in the first round of the mixed doubles championship under the auspices of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association, at the Park Club, Saturday afternoon, and one match in the second round was finished. It was a great day for tennis and the large number of entries guaranteed some fine playing. In all there were twenty-two entries and nearly all played. The scores throughout were very close.

The presence of the Misses Wildey from the Plainfield Country Club was attended with considerable interest for they have been playing exceptionally fast tennis this season. They sustained their reputation and in their matches played a brilliant game.

The two matches to be played in the first round are between Miss A. R. Robinson and Roger Black, Ilderan Outing Club, and Miss Marcus and G. B. Fielder, Danforth Tennis Club; Miss Edna Wildey and Wylie Brown and Miss Mnldred Wildey and Willard Wadsworth, Plainfield Country Club. It is expected that the tournament will be completed next Saturday afternoon.

Following Saturday's play there was a dance in the clubhouse, which was largely attended by the players, the members of the Park Club, the Plainfield Country Club and their friends. It was a delightful social function to a successful tournament on the tennis courts.

Preliminary round—Miss Anna Rankin and H. Glazebrook, Elizabeth and Town Country Club, defeated Mrs. Serrell and M. J. Serrell, Park Club, 6—1, 6—3.

Miss Janet Wildey and Howard Carter, Plainfield Country Club, defeated Miss Sarah Mae Howell and Roy Long, Park Club, 6—0, 6—3.

Miss A. R. Robinson and Roger Black, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Miss Thomas and N. F. Charlock, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 6—4, 10—8.

Miss Marcus and G. B. Fielder, Danforth Tennis Club, defeated Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver and William Barlow, Park Club, 6—0, 6—8, 6—0.

Miss Edna Wildey and Wylie Brown, Plainfield Country Club, defeated Miss Haines and R. A. West, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2.

First round—Miss Handy and E. S. H. Pendergast, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated Miss Ball and E. M. Daniel, Park Club, 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Elsie Gilmore and C. G. Lueder, Claremont Tennis Club, defeated Miss Edith Mellick and T. M. Day, Plainfield Country Club, by default.

Miss Woodruff and Mr. Miller, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Miss Anna Rankin and M. H. Glazebrook, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3.

Miss Schuyler and H. J. Cochran, Plainfield Country Club, defeated Miss Janet Wildey and Howard Carter, Plainfield Country Club, 6—3, 7—5.

Mrs. B. C. Edgar and H. Dunham, Ilderan Outing Club, defeated Miss Natalie Wildey and F. W. Goddard, Plainfield Country Club, 5—7, 6—2, 6—4.

Miss Caroline Bogert and W. P. Cragin, Jr., Elizabeth Town and Country Club, defeated Miss Barbara Fleming and Owen H. Fleming, Plainfield Country Club, 6—1, 6—4.

—The contractors have about completed the work of laying the sanitary sewer pipes through Arlington avenue, and in fact all of the sewer work in the southside of the city is well underway. The presence of considerable water in the trenches has nessitated a great deal of pumping.

IF A MAN WOULD SUCCEED.

He must not live on past successes.

He must not mistake egotism for originality.

He must be able to forget himself in his work.

He must ever set himself more difficult undertakings.

He must understand that every business has its trials.

He must study situations as they present themselves.

He must be more willing to grant favors than to ask for them.

He must know that struggle is the most valuable part of success.

He must know that the most fortunate of men have their trials.

He must learn to solve difficult problems quickly and still cautiously.

He must know that his two hands have been given him so that he may work.

He must learn that most things gained in a hurry are not worth the having.

He must be able to distinguish between a partial success and a total failure.

He must know most men suffer many a defeat before earning a single success.

He must not change his employment every week in the hope of finding something better.

He must know that the most golden opportunities are close at hand if he will study them.

JUST THOUGHTS.

The path of duty leads to happiness.

Fortune tellers are fortune swellers —for themselves.

Courtship is the juicy grape and marriage the appendicitis.

Judge no man's sincerity by what he says, but by what he doesn't.

Present a small boy with a watch and he'll have the time of his life.

When a man is looking for trouble few of his friends are too busy to assist in the search.

Did you ever notice how few people there are present when anyone happens to say nice things about you?

A successful financier is a man who can separate other men from their money without the aid of a sandbag.

MAXIMS FROM MEXICO.

There's no gain without pain.

To the hungry no bread is dry.

He who has little has little to fear.

Flies cannot enter a closed mouth.

It is good fishing in troubled waters.

No evil will endure a hundred years.

A frugal rich father and a spendthrift son.

If the pill were not bitter it would not be gilt.

When the river is passed the saint is forgotten.

No word is ill spoken if it is not ill understood.

A tongue may inflict a deeper wound than a sword.

MERE OPINION.

To a man wealth means power; to a woman the joy of being envied.

A man with a future and a woman with a past can generally be sure that they are being talked about.

The woman who fondles a dog to make a man jealous generally succeeds in filling him with disgust.

If it were considered fitting that wives should be older than their husbands marriage would become obsolete.

NOT AFRAID FOR HERSELF.

Child's Only Thought Was of Damage She Might Do Train.

One day last winter a Vermont girl named Rosa Hines, 14 years old and a farmer's daughter, drew her sled to the crest of a hill half a mile long and then took a slide. Just beyond the foot of the hill are railroad tracks, and as her sled got under motion she saw a train coming. She couldn't stop, and she saw that there must be an accident, so she waved her hood and shouted: "Get out of my way! Get out of my way, or you'll be run over!" The engineer saw the girl waving her hood, even if he didn't hear her words, and he brought a long train of freight cars to a sudden stop just in time to let her shoot by the engine. This is probably the first time in the history of railroading when a girl on a sled was given the right of way over a train. When she was afterwards scolded by her father she naively replied: "Oh, I wasn't scared for myself. I was afraid of bunting the train off the track."

DIDN'T THINK HELP NEEDED.

Simple Fisherman Had Heard of the Wonders of Science.

H. G. Wells, the novelist, spoke at a Boston club about the wonders of modern invention. "So thick and fast," he said, "these new inventions come, life grows rather confusing for plain and simple folk. There was an old fisherman rowing in his boat one day when an automobile canoe sprung a leak near him and immediately sank. To the indignation of the canoe's occupants, the old man paid no heed to them, but rowed calmly on his way, puffing an old clay pipe. However, the wrecked canoeists managed to swim to him, and as they clambered into his boat one spluttered angrily: 'Confound you, why didn't you lend us a hand? Didn't you see we were sinking?' The old man took his pipe out of his mouth and stared at them in astonishment. 'Blest if I didn't think ye wuz one o' them new-fangled submarines,' he said."

Were Superstitious, Too.

A woman who takes her superstitions seriously started to enter a big department store one morning last week when she noticed a porter on a tall stepladder that stretched directly across the doorway, says the New York Press. In spite of the fact that there were five women behind her eager to pass into the shop she came to a sudden halt, looked up at the ladder and cried out, "Oh, I'll never walk under that," saying which she turned and strode away. Before she had gone far her sense of humor rose superior to her fear of ladders, and she looked to see if her remark had had any effect on those who had been within sound of her voice. Walking directly behind her were the five women who had heard her exclamation.

Delivered the Goods.

The late Senator M. S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, kept all the letters his constituents wrote to him asking for favors, says the Saturday Evening Post. He had stacks of them when his last great fight for the senate came along. Then he sorted out the letters, eliminating those from people who were dead and on the back of each letter wrote: "Dear John or Bill: Do you remember when you wrote me this letter and do you remember that I did what you asked? I want your help now in my fight for the senate. Can I have it?" The politicians in Pennsylvania say those letters mailed to the original senders with Quay's request on the backs of them, had as much as any one thing to do with Quay's winning his fight.

Officer's Natural Anxiety.

Sir Douglass Straight told this tale at a recent dinner of the Journeymen Hairdressers' Trade society in London: When a young barrister he went into a barber's shop to be shaved and was a little startled to see the woman cashier behind the counter staring at him from time to time through the glass door. When he got outside the shop a policeman said: "I am very glad to find you have come out." The officer explained that he had been anxious because the barber had just come out of a lunatic asylum the previous week and his relatives were wondering whether they would have to send him back again.

First Requisite for Success.

At the annual convention of salesmen of a large corporation prizes were to be awarded to those who submitted the best reply to the query: "What are you going to do to increase your sales for the ensuing year?" After numerous comments and remarks had been made, a telegram was received from the one absent salesman whose attendance had been unavoidably prevented by pressure of business. On being read to the assembly he was unanimously voted first prize. The telegram read: "Shall hustle like the dickens."

An Ambassador's Butler.

The practice of tipping is not entirely bad; the recipients at least derive some benefit. A former butler of Mr. Choate, American ambassador to England before Mr. Reid, has built a large hotel on the coast on the tips he received from visitors to the American embassy, whose servants make more money than those attached to other embassies, chiefly because of the number of wealthy Americans who visit the ambassador and scatter tips with traditional generosity.

GOT THE WRONG BABIES.

Curious Mixup That Occurred Recently in French Hospital.

A curious mistake occurred yesterday at the hospital at Amiens, says a correspondent of the London Mail. Two young women had recently been attended there. One had given birth to a boy, and the other had given birth to a girl. Yesterday their babies were taken from them to be vaccinated. After the vaccination the babies, in their swaddling clothes, were returned to their mothers, who went away with them. Soon afterward one of the mothers returned to the hospital in tears. Her child was a boy, but on returning home she discovered that the nurse had handed her a girl. She insisted on her boy being returned to her. A scene of great confusion occurred, as nobody knew the address of the other mother. At last, toward nightfall, the other mother arrived, greatly excited, complaining that she had been given a boy in mistake for her girl baby. The change was duly executed, and the two mothers went away happy.

WOULD WORK EITHER WAY.

Practical Young Man Quieted the Fears of His Fiancee.

Not long ago a young man, most notably unblessed with worldly goods, met and won a girl whose decided personal charms were in no wise lessened by the fact of her possessing fully enough to at least keep the wolf howling at a distance. "Do you know, George," she one day said softly, "I am almost sorry that I have any money—not, of course, that I think you would love me the less, but—well—" "I am not, dearest," he replied, fondly stroking her soft, brown hair. "You know I'd love you if you had not a penny, but I'm glad you have. You see, I know that, should I die, you would be well provided for." "But suppose I should die?" she whispered. "Well, then I'd be well provided for, darling," he answered, for he is a practical young man.

Fine Health in Open Air.

The healthiest persons in the world are gypsies, and they live in the open air, but there is an erroneous idea that gypsies are people who defy the elements to destroy their health. On the contrary, they are very careful, indeed, of their health, even though living out of doors. They never go to bed with the draft blowing over them, but have free circulation around them, yet protected from rain and wind. While sometimes seemingly scantily attired, they always are warmly clothed beneath, wearing warm underclothing. The consumptives who go to places for their health are now living exactly as the gypsies, and because of the disease being considered contagious, they must live in tents. It is here that the efficacy of pure air is being fully demonstrated, for it often effects a cure if the patient is not too weak when the treatment begins.

Value of the Thumb.

"Solomon says thumbs up," because the thumb is said to be worth fully one-third the entire value of the hand. The different fingers are far from having all the same value before the eyes of the law. Much of the importance among them is the thumb, for without it the hand no longer is a pincers but merely a claw. The French court allows in damages 15 to 35 per cent. value for the right and ten to 15 per cent. for the left thumb. The Austrian schedule gives from 15 per cent. for the left to 35 per cent. for the right. In Germany 20 to 28 per cent., and even as high as 33.3 per cent., has been awarded. The percentage is based on 100 as the total value of the hand, industriously speaking, before the accident.

Before and After.

"There is a great difference between the actions of a woman before and after marriage," remarked the sad eyed man with the absent hair. "What's the answer?" queried the youth who was on the verge of graduating from a correspondence school. "Give a woman a five-dollar bunch of flowers before marriage," explained the party of the sad part, "and she will say: 'Oh, thank you, George! But, really, I cannot allow you to spend so much money on me.' After marriage when George hands her seven-eighths of his weekly salary she looks at it contemptuously and says: 'Is that all I get?'"

Future Looked Dismal.

Nelson, a child of five, was becoming acquainted with his Uncle Will. They were considering questions of earthly life, with its manifold perplexities and rules of conduct, and the life and hope in the hereafter. In an attempt to make the idea perfectly clear to the boy the uncle said: "Now, you know that your grandmother is dead and has gone to Heaven." After a minute or two of deep thought Nelson looked up into his uncle's face and said: "We'll never see her again, will we, Uncle Will?"

Good at Figures.

A lawyer in a seaport town advertised for an office boy. A lad applied for the situation who had hitherto been employed in the local fish market. The boy, on being asked if he was a good writer, answered in the affirmative. "And can you do mental arithmetic?" "I think so, sir." "Well, what would 36 pounds of salmon at one-half-cent a pound be?" "Bad, sir," was the quick reply.

The GIRL from TIM'S PLACE

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

CHAPTER I.

Chip was very tired. All that long June day, since Tim's harsh, "Come, out wid ye," had roused her to daily toil, until now, wearied and disconsolate, she had crept, barefoot, up the back stairs to her room, not one moment's rest or one kindly word had been hers.

Below, in the one living room of Tim's Place, the men were grouped playing cards, and the medley of their oaths, their laughter, the thump of knuckles on the bare table, and the pungent odor of pipes, reached her through the floor cracks. Outside the fireflies twinkled above the slow-running river and along the stump-dotted hillside. Close by, a few pigs dozed contentedly in their rudely constructed sty.

A servant to those scarce fit for servants, a menial at the beck and call of all Tim's Place, and laboring with the men in the fields, Chip, a girl of almost 16, felt her soul revolt at the filth, the brutality, the coarse existence of those whose slave she was.

And what a group they were!

First, Tim Connor, the owner and master of this oasis in the wilderness, 60 miles from the nearest settlement; his brother, Mike, as coarse; their wives and a half a dozen children who played with the pigs, squealed as often for food, and were left to grow up the same way; and Pierre Lubec, the hired man, completed the score.

There was another transient resident here, an old Indian named Tomah, who came with the snow, and deserted his hut below on the river bank when spring unlocked that stream.

Two occasional visitors also came here, both even more objectionable to Chip than Tim and his family. One was her father, known to her to be an outlaw and escaped murderer in hiding; the other a half-breed named Bolduc, but known as One-Eyed Pete, a trapper and hunter whose abode was a log cabin on the Fox Hole, ten miles away. His face was horribly scarred by a wildcat's claws; one eye-socket was empty; his lips, chin, and protruding teeth were always tobacco stained. For three months now, he had made weekly calls at Tim's Place, in pursuit of Chip. His wooing, as might be expected, had been a persistent leering at her with his one sinister eye, oft-repeated innuendoes and insinuations of lascivious nature, scarce understood by her, with now and then attempted familiarity. These advances had met with much the same reception once accorded him by the wildcat.

Both these visitors were now with the group below. That fact was of no interest to Chip, except in connection with a more pertinent one—a long conference she had observed between them that day. What it was about, she could not guess, and yet some queer intuition told her that it concerned her. Ordinarily, she would have sought sleep in her box-on-legs bed; now she crouched on the floor, listening.

For an hour the game and its medley of sounds continued; then cessation, the tramp of heavily shod feet, the light extinguished, and finally—silence. A few minutes of this, and then the sound of whispered converse, low yet distinct, reached Chip from outside. Cautiously she crept to her window.

"I gif you one hunerd dollars now, for ze gal," Pete was saying, "an' one hunerd more when you fotch her."

"It's three hundred down, I've told ye, or we don't do business," was her father's answer, in almost a hiss.

A pain like a knife piercing her heart came to Chip.

"But s'pose she run away?" came in Pete's voice.

"What, 60 miles to a settlement? You must be a damn fool!"

"An' if she no mind me?"

"Wal, thrash her then; she's yours."

"But I no gif so much," parleyed Pete: "I gif you one-feefty now, an' one hunerd when she come."

"You'll give what I say, and be quick about it, or I'll take her out tomorrow, and you'll never see her again: so fork over."

"And you fotch her to-morrow?"

"Yes, I told you." And so the bargain was concluded.

Only a moment more, while Chip sat numb and dazed, then came the sound of footsteps, as the two men separated, and then silence over Tim's Place.

And yet, what a horror for Chip! Sold like a horse or a pig to this worse than disgusting half-breed, and on the morrow to be taken—no, dragged—to the half-breed's hut by her hated father.

Hardly conscious of the real intent and object of this purchase, she yet understood it dimly. Life here was bad enough—it was coarse, unloved, even filthy, and yet, hard as it was, it was a thousand times better than slavery with such an owner.

And now, still weak and trembling from the shock, she raised her head cautiously and peeped out of the window. A faint spectral light from the rising moon outlined the log barn, the two log cabins, and pigsty, which, with the frame house she was in, comprised Tim's Place. Above and beyond where the forest enclosed the hillside, it shone brighter, and as Chip looked out upon the etheral silvered view, away to the right she saw the dark opening into the old tote road. Up this they had brought her, eight years before. Never since had she traversed it; and yet, as she looked at it now, an inspiration born of her father's sneer came to her.

It was a desperate chance, a foolhardy step—a journey so appalling, so almost hopeless, she might well hesitate; and yet, escape that way was her one chance. Only a moment longer she waited, then gathering her few belongings—a pair of old shoes, the moccasins Old Tomah had given her, a skirt and jacket fashioned from Tim's cast-off garments, a fur cap, and soft felt hat—she thrust them into a soiled pillow-case and crept down the stairs.

Once out, she looked about, listened, then darted up the hillside, straight for the tote road entrance. Here she paused, put on her moccasins, and looked back.

The moon, now above the tree-tops, shone full upon Tim's Place, softening and silvering all its ugliness and all its squalor. Away to the left stood Tomah's hut, across the river, a shining path bright and rippled.

In spite of the awful dread of her situation and the years of her hard, unpaid, and ofttimes cursed toil, a pang of regret now came to her. This was her home, wretched as it was. Here she had at least been fed and warmed in winters, and here Old Tomah had shown her kindness. Oh, if he were only in his hut now, that she might go and waken him softly, and beg him to take her in his canoe and speed down the river!

But no! only her own desperate courage would now avail, and realizing that this look upon Tim's Place was the last one, she turned and fled down the path. Sixty miles of stony, bush-encumbered, brier-grown, seldom-traveled road lay ahead of her! Sixty miles through the somber silence and persistent menace of a wilderness, peopled only by death-intending creatures, yellow-eyed and sharp-fanged!

With only a sickening, soul-nauseating fate awaiting her at Tim's Place, and her sole escape this almost insane flight, she sped on. The faint, spectral rifts of moonlight through interlaced fir and spruce as often deceived as aided her; bending boughs whipped her, bushes and logs tripped her, sharp stones and pointed sticks bit her; she hurried over hillocks, wallowed through sloughs and dashed into tangles of briers, heedless of all except her one mad impulse to escape.

Soon the ever present menace of a wilderness assailed her,—the yowl of a wildcat close at hand; in a swamp, the sharp bark of a wolf; on a hillside above her, the hoot of an owl; and when after two hours of this desperate flight had exhausted her and she was forced to halt, strange creeping, crawling things seemed all about.

And now the erratic, fantastic belief of Old Tomah returned to her. With him the forest was people by a weird, uncanny race, sometimes visible and sometimes not—"spites," he called them, and they were the souls of both man and beast; sometimes good, sometimes evil, according as they had been in life, and all good or ill luck was due to their ghostly influences. They followed the hunter and trapper day and night, luring him into safety or danger, as they chose. They were everywhere, and in countless numbers, ready and sure to avenge all wrongs and reward all virtues. They had a Chieftain also, a great white spectre who came forth

To Chip, educated only in the fantastic lore of Old Tomah, these terrors now became insanity breeding. She could not turn back—better death among the spites than slaving to the half-breed; and so, faint from awful fear, gasping from miles of running, she stumbled on. And now a little hope came, for the road bent down beside the river, and its low voice seemed a word of cheer. Into its cool depths she could at least plunge and die, as a last resort.

Soon an opening showed ahead, and a bridge appeared. Here, for the first time, on this vantage point, she halted. How thrice blessed those knotted logs now seemed! She hugged and patted them in abject gratitude. She crawled to the edge and looked over into the dark, gurgling water. Up above lay a faint ripple of silver. Here, also, she could see the moon almost at the zenith, and a few flickering stars.

A trifle of courage and renewal of hope now came. Her face and hands were scratched and bleeding, clothing torn, feet and legs black with mud. But these things she neither noticed nor felt—only that blessed bridge of logs that gave her safety, and the moon that bade her hope.

Then she began to count her chances. This landmark told her that five miles of her desperate journey had been covered and she was still alive. She began to calculate. How soon would her escape be discovered, and who would pursue her? Only Pete, her purchaser, she felt sure, and there was a possible chance that he might return to his cabin before doing so. Or perhaps he might sleep late, and thus give her one or two hours more of time.

And now cheered by this trifling hope and lessening sense of danger, her past life came back. Her childhood in a far-off settlement; the home always in a turmoil from the strange men and women ever coming and going; the drinking, swearing, singing, at all hours of the night, her constant fear of them and wonder who they were and why they came. There were other features of this disturbed life: frequent quarrels between her father and mother; curses, tears, and sometimes blows, until at last after a night more hideous than any other her mother had taken her and fled. Then came a long journey to another village and a new life of peace and quietness. Here it was all so different—no red-shirted men to be afraid of, no loud-voiced women drinking with them. She became acquainted with other children of her own age, was sent to school and taken to church. Here, also, her mother began to smile once more, and look content. For two years, and the only ones Chip cared to recall, she had been a happy schoolgirl, and then came a sudden, tragic end to it all. Of that she never wished to think. It was all so horrible, and yet so mercifully brief.

The one friend life held, her mother, had been brought home, wounded to death amid the whirring wheels of the mill where she worked; there were a few hours of agonized dread as her life ebbed away, a whisper or two of love and longing, and then the sad farewell made doubly awful by her father's frowning face and harsh voice. At its ending, and in spite of her fears and tears, she was now borne away by him. For days they journeyed deeper and deeper into a vast wilderness, to halt at last at Tim's Place.

Like a dread dream it all came back now, as she lay there on this one flat spot of security—the bridge—and listened to the river's low murmur.

All through her mad flight the wilderness had been ghostly and spectral in the moonlight; now it had become lost in inky blackness, yet alive with demoniac voices. All the goblin forms and hideous shapes of Old Tomah's fancy were rushing and leaping about. Now high up in the treetops, now deep in the hollows, they screamed and shrieked and moaned.

And now, just as this fierce battle of sound and spectral shape was at its worst, and Chip, a hopeless, helpless mite of humanity, crouched low upon the bridge, suddenly a vicious growl reached her, and raising her head she saw at the bridge's end two gleaming eyes!

CHAPTER II.

Martin Frisbie and his nephew Raymond Stetson, or Ray, were cutting boughs and carrying them to two tents standing in the mouth of a bush-choked opening into the forest. In front of this Angie, Martin's wife, was placing tin dishes, knives and forks upon a low table of boards. Upon the bank of a broad, slow-running stream, two canoes were drawn out, and halfway between these and the table a camp-fire burnt.

Here Levi, Martin's guide for many trips into this wilderness, was also occupied, intently watching two pails depending from bending wambecks, a coffee-pot hanging from another, and two frying-pans, whose sputtering contents gave forth an enticing odor.

"Supper ready," he called; and then as the rest seated themselves at the table, he advanced, carrying the pail of steaming hot potatoes on the hooked stick and the frying-pan in his other hand.

The meal had scarce begun when a crackling in the undergrowth back of the tent was heard, and on the instant there emerged a girl. Her clothing was in shreds, her face and hands were black with mud, streaks of blood showed across cheek and chin, and her eyes were fierce and sunken.

"For God's sake give me suthin' to eat," she said, looking from one to another of the astonished group. "I'm damn near starved—only a bite," she added, sinking to her knees and extending her hands. "I hain't eat nothin' but roots 'n' berries for three days."

Angie was the first to recover. "Here," she said, hastily extending her plate, "take this."

Without a word the starved creature grasped it and began eating as only a desperate, hungry animal would, while the group watched her.

"Don't hurry so," exclaimed Martin, whose wits had now returned. "Here, take this cup of coffee."

DIAMOND DUST.

"Hank" Mathewson is not quite fast enough yet for the Giants and Manager McGraw is giving him a chance to pitch for outside teams this season.

According to reports Jake Stahl, of the Washington Americans, has quit professional baseball for good. He has purchased the franchise for the South Chicago Baseball Club and will devote his time to the management of it.

The A. B. C. baseball team defeated the Norwood A. C. nine Saturday by a score of 9 to 8. Carlton Smith pitched a good game for the winning team and Anstett did good work behind the bat. Slocum and Rogers formed the battery for the Norwood A. C.

It is the wonder of the county fans how much longer Manager Burnham, of Newark, will permit the Elizabethport Stars to play big league clubs on Sundays, without a protest.

The Westfield Lackawanna League team is now playing fast ball and is gradually climbing up the ladder in percentage.

There was a report that Walter Nelson, of New Market, who is slated to catch for Y. M. C. A. after this week, intends to join a professional team in Connecticut. Captain Howard Craig believes that Nelson faithfully promised to catch for his team and he believes that he will keep his word.

Minford, the Y. M. C. A. twirler, has been suffering from a strain of muscles of the right arm, and has about recovered and is considered to be in the best of condition again.

It is a mystery to the fans why Manager Murray, of the Philadelphia Nationals, permitted McQuillan to go to Providence. He is rated as one of the best pitchers in the country and should prove a good man for the Quakers.

Ralph Schoonmaker, of the Y. M. C. A., is a general all around player and can fill in most any position creditably.

GOLF.

The players from the Metropolitan Golf Association who took part in the open tournament on Saturday at the Plainfield Country Club, were generous in their praise of the course and the reception accorded them by the club. It was undoubtedly one of the most successful events of the kind held here and no doubt will be an annual fixture.

Arthur Murphy is among the enthusiastic golf players who can be seen frequently at the Plainfield Country Club. He finds the game great exercise and he is constantly improving his playing.

Prominent golfers from the East will be found at Philadelphia the latter part of the week competing in the big tournament scheduled for the Quaker City. Among those who will compete is "Marty" O'Loughlin, the "pro" at the Plainfield Country Club.

It is the general opinion that the game of golf is largely responsible for the falling off in the attendance at local ball games. Many persons who were cranks on the subject of the National game, are now playing golf and seem to enjoy the exercise, rather than watch a game of ball.

Included among the local divines who have become greatly interested in the game of golf and who play it every week is Rev. L. R. Toward, of Hope chapel. Although among the latest enthusiasts from the ministerial profession he is rapidly improving his game and making low scores.

At the Park Golf Club clock golf, and approaching and putting competitions seem to be exceedingly popular with the women, more so than play in regular events. There is not so much walking and the fair sex get the exercise just the same.

The Westfield Golf Club is becoming a popular place for Sunday golfers who are not permitted to play on the local links. Many also visit the Baltusrol Golf Club, finding it a pleasant trip in an automobile or carriage.

It is noticed that a number of the young golfers who formerly were among the best players at the local clubs do not have as much time to follow the game as formerly and in consequence there is a difference in the scores.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM LOSES AND DROPS THE LEAD

BIG CROWD WITNESSES SCOTCH PLAINS BEST THE PLAINFIELDERS.

The largest crowd of the season witnessed the Y. M. C. A. team go down to defeat at Scotch Plains, Saturday afternoon, the home team winning by a score of 6to 5 in an interesting contest. As a result the association nine has lost first place and Scotch Plains holds the position by a narrow margin. The fine support given Frentz was largely responsible for the victory of the home nine, although the Plainfield boys outbatted them, securing eleven hits to nine for the opposing team.

The association aggregation was credited with six errors, which did not help matters much for them. Minford had a shade the better of the pitching, striking out eight men, while Frentz fanned five batsmen. It was in fielding that the 'Plains team excelled. In the seventh inning Pond, who tried to steal second, collided with Frentz, and was injured so badly that Dr. Hubbard had to take his place for the rest of the game. The score:

PERTH AMBOY TEAM PUTS UP POOR GAME

RARITANS FAIL TO SCORE AGAINST CLINTON AVENUES.

The baseball game on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon between Clinton Avenue and the Raritans, of Perth Amboy, was a disappointment to the crowd. The local team won the contest by a score of 9 to 0, and were able to score in every inning, except the last three. The visitors did not have even a look-in. Randolph allowed them but two hits, Barter and Golden each getting a single. There was nothing to it at all for the Raritans, in fact they might just as well have staid home.

The Clinton Avenues put up their usual good game. Eery member of the team but Barnes and D. Scott hit the leather good and proper. Brit. Martin, Emery, J. Martin and Randolph each got two hits. The fact that the Raritans are credited with seven errors, explains partially why they lost the game, while their inability to connect with Randolph's curves accounts for the poor showing in run-getting. The lineup and score by innings:

Raritans—McHose, ss-cf; Buckley, 3b; Hornsby, lf-p; Seaman, 1b; Bobedee, c; McCann, 2b; Barter, rf; Golden, p-ss; Olsen, cf-lf.

P. S. C. MEN PLAY BALL.

Plainfield Nine Wallops Team of New Brunswick Men.

A nine composed of Public Service Corporation employes in this city played a game of baseball with the P. S. C. men from New Brunswick, at the latter place, Saturday afternoon, and won out by a score of 14 to 10. Features of the contest were a home run by George Pope, a two base hit by Louis Bach and the stick work of Dan. Randolph, who secured three two base hits and one three-bagger, and struck out twelve men. The catching by Louis Bach and the work by W. Causebrook at second base were also features. The teams will probably play a return game here Saturday. The lineup:

After the game the home team entertained the visitors at dinner.

PARK GOLF PLAYERS COMPETE FOR POINTS.

Good Field Out Saturday Despite Counter Attractions In Tennis and Other Sports.

Notwithstanding the many counter attractions in golf and tennis there was a good field out at the Park Golf Club, Saturday afternoon, to compete for the President's, Golf Club and Hydewood Park cups, and just an even dozen posted their scores in these events.

Reuben Knox, Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Rev. C. L. Goodrich won points for the President's cup, and in addition they together with Alexander Gilbert and L. R. Thurlow won points for the Hydewood Park cup. Mr. McKelvey won first honors for the Golf Club cup, scratch event, Mr. Goodrich was second and Mr. Knox and Mr. Thurlow were tied for third honors. These scores were returned for the three trophies:

Will Protest Jump In Assessment.

A delegation from the Union County Board of Freeholders will go to Trenton tomorrow to appear before the State Board of Taxation, regarding the assessment on county property. The county board of taxation has raised the county assessment from $98,000 to $119,000 and the freeholders want to learn why such a jump was made. They propose to enter a vigorous protest against the action of the county board.

Plainfielders Win Again.

"Marty" O'Loughlin and Morris J. Dumont, of the Plainfield Country Club, defeated E. M. Wild and Milligan, of the Cranford Golf Club, at Cranford, yesterday, in a match, by 5 up and 4 to go.

SALT CELLAR OF LONG AGO.

Was Distinctive Mark of Caste in the Middle Ages.

"This is a medieval salt cellar," said the antiquary. "It is huge, it is shaped like a castle, it is solid silver and the price—but what is the use telling the price to you? Very magnificent, eh? In the middle age, you know, the salt cellar was the principal table ornament. Guests sat above or below the salt as they were prominent or the reverse. Where do you think you'd have sat, eh? Queer table manners they had in those days. The fastidious had individual knives, forks and spoons, but the common people ate with their fingers. You helped yourself from the general dish with your own spoon if you had one, but if you were very, very fastidious you licked the spoon clean first. The food was queer—rich, rank food—swans, herons, porpoises, garlic, verjuice, saffron. There was mead and wine in floods and ushers stood about whose duty it was to lead to convenient couches such guests as had dined too well. These ushers, being overworked, were continually striking for more pay. The hours were queer, too. Breakfast, dawn; dinner, ten o'clock; supper, four o'clock in the afternoon."

TAKING NO MORE CHANCES.

Keepers Had Special Cartridges For Poor Marksman.

Dr. Seward Webb at a dinner at Shelburne Farms, his great Vermont estate, said of a certain poor marksman: "Visiting his English brother-in-law, he shot the head keeper in the leg the first morning he tried pheasant shooting. The man limped away cursing horribly. Next day he had wretched luck, though the wounded head keeper without malice had assigned him to a fairly good place. Bang, bang, bang, went his gun every few seconds, but not a bird fell before it. He was much embarrased. It seemed, too, that at each of his misses the under keepers smiled at one another oddly. Finally his cartridges gave out. He hurried to the nearest keeper and demanded more. 'There ain't no more, sir,' the man answered. 'No more? Nonsense. Why, you've got at least 1,000 in that box' The keeper flushed and stammered: 'Ah, but them ain't for you, sir. They're for another gent. They've got shot in 'em, sir.'"

Extravagance in Dress.

Very few persons outside of the glittering circle of our enormously rich families, who constitute what is referred to as "the best society," can understand how any young woman in this or any other country can spend upon her wardrobe such vast amounts of money as are expended by the daughters of some of these families. The history of the world does not show such reckless extravagance in the way of dress. Nor, for the matter of that, does the history of the world show so riotous a use of money as that practiced by our very rich in their strictly social divertisements. Happy is the lot of the man or woman who is not tempted to such foolish indulgences, which take the edge from life's real joy!

Fled from Gas.

"I had a friend," said the bearded man, "who got out of paying a bill he owed in an original way. When the collector arrived he sent word to him that he would see him in a few minutes. Then he went into the parlor, shut the doors carefully, turned on every blessed burner in the chandelier, came quickly out, and had his man show the bill collector in the parlor while he hurried upstairs. Do you think that collector waited a few minutes for him to come down? Not on your photograph. He fled from that gas filled room in about two seconds by the clock. If he had stayed three he'd have been suffocated."

Good Enough for the Dog.

Bobby's mother was often distressed by her small son's lapses from correct speech, all the more because his reports from school were always so good. "Bobby," she said, plaintively, one day, "why do you keep telling Major to 'set up' when you know 'sit up' is what you should say?" "Oh, well, mother," Bobby answered hastily, "of course I have lots of grammar, but I don't like to waste it on Major when he doesn't know the difference, being a dog."—Youth's Companion.

Speaking of Fathers.

Two kids had been engaged in a heated argument over the respective merits of their sires, when Johnnie clinched his argument with the following: "Huh, that's nothing! My father was in the army, and once, when he was standing on a hill beside a cannon, a war came up the hill, and he fired the cannon and killed the whole war."—Judge's Library.

Hope.

"Woman is naturally more hopeful than man," began the moralist. "Yes," interrupted the plain man. "There's my wife, for instance; every time she has had occasion to buy fish since we started housekeeping she has asked her dealer if they were fresh, hoping, I suppose, that some day he'll say 'no.'"

Each to His Trade.

"I'm more useful than you are," boasted the collie. "Yes?" replied the bulldog. "You don't say?" "Yes. You should see me go for the sheep when they start to run away." "Well, just wait until some tramps come along here and when they start to run away watch me go for the calves."

TWO ATTEMPTS TO DIE

Miss Maggie Crowley First Tried Hanging and Then Gashed Her Wrists.

DISCOVERED IN TIME

Placed In Borough Police Station to Prevent Her Carrying Out Determination to Commit Suicide.

Miss Maggie Crowley, who says that she is an "English-born lady" was found in John Smalley's shed on Lincoln place, last night about 9 o'clock, making desperate attempts to kill herself. Mr. Smalley discovered the woman and he quickly summoned the police before she succeeded in taking her life. She first tried to hang herself with an apron and this method failing, she then endeavored to cut her wrist with a knife. Both attempts were very crude and bungling. The woman was locked up and upon the advice of Dr. A. H. Dundon, the borough physician, she will be watched for a few days.

Miss Crowley has been making her home with the late Mrs. Margaret Moran, of Lincoln place, and she nursed her during her last illness. In addition to worrying a great deal about Mrs. Moran, her sister, who resides in Plainfield wanted to send her to her native home in England. The ticket was purchased and it was understood that Miss Crowley would sail at the appointed time. It was afterward learned that she refused to go home and it is the belief that rather than do so she determined to kill herself.

After the police were summoned last night Dr. Dundon was sent for. He found the woman suffering from a high state of nervousness and an examination showed that the attempts to cut her wrist had caused no serious consequences and that with proper treatment she would recover. It was the opinion of the police and the physician that Miss Crowley had also been drinking to some extent and this together with the other troubles had upset her mind. So far as can be learned Miss Crowley's sister in Plainfield is the only relative she has in this country.

REAPPOINT CLERK.

North Plainfield School Board Acts Under the New Law.

The North Plainfield Board of Education authorized the building and grounds committee, at an adjourned meeting, last night, to make a number of repairs to the schools during the vacation. The manual training school is to be repainted.

Acting under the new law, which requires the Board to appoint a district clerk for the year beginning July 1, Albert Steiner, the present clerk, was renamed. He will receive the same salary.

The commencement committee reported that all arrangements for the exercises at Y. M. C. A. Friday night were completed. It was announced that Rev. Dr. Parsons, of Grace M. E. church, would offer the prayer.

Promised to Stop Drinking.

William Jeroloman, of Somerset street, the borough, was arrested there last night for being drunk and disorderly. This morning he was given a hearing before Recorder Dolliver, who imposed a fine of $3 and five days in the borough lockup. But when Jeroloman promised to stop drinking in the future, the five days were held against him and after paying the $3 he was allowed to go.

The "Two Jones" Arrested.

The "Two Jones," colored, from Plainfield, were picked up in the borough last night on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, and they will be given a hearing before Recorder Dolliver, tonight. The condition of the men was such that it was impossible to get their first names and the court record fails to show whether they are brothers or not. The only information possible is that their last names are Jones.

Twenty-fifth Commencement.

The annual commencement exercises of Leal's School, will be held at the Casino, tonight, a feature of which will be an address by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Following the exercises there will be dancing. This will be the twenty-fifth commencement of Leal's School and the event will be appropriately observed.

TAX CASE DEFEAT FOR THE RAILROADS

ERRORS COURT SUSTAINS CONSTITUTIONALITY OF DUFFIELD ACT OF 1905.

The Court of Errors yesterday by a unanimous vote sustained the constitutionality of the Duffield act of 1905 providing for the taxation of second-class railroad property. The announcement was made by Justice Pitney, at Trenton, who said he would file an opinion later.

The Duffield act provided for the taxation of second-class railroad property at local rates instead of a uniform rate of one and one-half per cent., as was the case before the Duffield act was passed. Under a supplementary act introduced by Senator Minturn the railroads were enabled to pay on the basis of the old rate the taxes for that year pending a decision by the courts as to the constitutionality of the provisions for local rates.

If the opinion that Justice Pitney will file follows the lines that are anticipated, it will practically establish the right to fix the rate for this class of property, and it will then remain to be decided whether the subsequent law, known as the Perkins act, and providing that second-class property should be assessed by local assessors instead of by the State board, is constitutional in that respect. It is believed that, with the establishment of the right to fix the rate of taxation, the right to empower the local assessors to place the valuations on the property will follow.

Such a decision, it is anticipated, would almost certainly be followed by an affirmance of the right of the State to make a classification of first-class property, and to tax it as provided by the Perkins act relating to that class of property. This would establish the right of the Legislature to define what shall constitute main stem property for purposes of taxation, and to fix an average tax rate therefor.

As a result of the decision the various cities throughout the State will now receive their proportionate share of the tax. Plainfield's share will be about $2,063. Elizabeth will receive about $17,000.

CHARGES PREFERRED AGAINST SOMERVILLE COP.

Town Commissioners Will Hear Complaints of Citizens next Tuesday Night.

The charges made against Officer Robert Henderson of the Somerville police force will be heard by the Committee on Police of the Somerville Board of Commissioners on Tuesday, June 25, at 8 p. m., in the engine house at Somerville. Aaron Meserole and George C. Mundy charge Policeman Henderson with conduct unbecoming an officer, while on duty. Mundy has made a specific charge against Henderson of drinking beer at the bar in John Maurer's saloon while in uniform on the night of June 6 and with assaulting him while intoxicated later in the night.

Meserole also charges Henderson with drinking beer in Germania Hall while in uniform on May 26 and with assaulting him on the same night.

Officer Henderson has retained lawyer Azariah M. Beekman to defend him and Counselor Clarence E. Case represents the young men who make the charge. Much interest is manifested in the outcome of the trial. Lawyer Case has filed supplementary charges and has also asked that certain witnesses be subpoenaed to give testimony when the hearing takes place.

Officer Henderson has been on the force for six years and has always proven a most exemplary policeman. His hosts of friends scout the idea of his being guilty of the misconduct charged.

Led Big Cotillion.

Mrs. Ella C. Westcott, the dancing instructor of Somerville, who formerly had a class in this city, has returned to her home from Reading, Pa., where she attended the twenty-fourth annual convention of the National Association Masters of Dancing of the United States and Canada. Mrs. Westcott was re-elected vice president, an office which she has held for the past ten years. The cotillion in the auditorium was attended by 1,200 people and was the big event of the convention. It was led by Mrs. Westcott, who introduced a new cotillion figure, "The Reading," named after the city. After it was over she was twice obliged to respond to encores.

Strawberry Festival.

The Christian Endeavor Society and Aid Society of Warren chapel will hold a strawberry festival at Fairview avenue and Somerset street, Wednesday afternoon and evening, June 26. A band will furnish music. Home made cake and candy will be sold. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the new chapel furnishing fund.

OPENING OF LEGISLATURE

Final Session of the Term Began at 10:30 This Morning.

BACKE'S REPORT READY?

Governor's Message Which Will Be Received Is Said to Contain 4,000 Words.

The final session of the one hundred and thirty-first legislature convened at 10.30 o'clock this morning, at which hour President Minch in the Senate and Speaker Lethbridge in the house both brought their gavels down and the session was on.

One of the first resolutions sent to the desks of both houses was for the appointment of committees to wait on Governor Stokes and announce that both houses were in session waiting for business from him.

The committee were appointed and waited on the governor, when they received his thanks and the assurance that he would quickly communicate with both houses. After the committees reported back to their respective chambers, Secretary Gray appeared with the message of the governor, and that message will be read this afternoon.

Besides the message there will be the vetoes of his excellency presented to the respective chambers where they originated, and after that point no one knows to the present time what will happen, outside of concurring in all of the vetoes of the governor by the Senate as loyal support of his administration.

Whether or not the report of the Hahn investigation committee will be ready, cannot be stated at this hour. Counsel Backes was hammering it into shape all day yesterday, but the committee members did not see it. Certain it is that unless the report, as hammered into shape by Counsel Backes, Police Commissioner LaBarre and John H. Brooke, is not satisfactory to all the committee members it will not be signed in full. The Republican members believe in a report which will state in full what abuse there have been found by the committee.

As a certainty that the Republicans want a fair and impartial report, free from political bias, Senator Hutchinson has already drawn an amendment to the fish and game commission act, which forbids any commissioner to hold two offices at the same time, and which makes disbursements by warrant of the comptroller.

Senators Lee and Colby and Assemblymen Moxon and Lane were in the State house yesterday, but none of them would say that they liked liked coming to Trenton this hot weather. All of them said that a short session would be preferable.

Governor Stokes' message is said to makes 4,000 words. It is his last say to the legislature before the gubernatorial campaign, and it is important in that it may point the way to another Republican victory next fall.

Secretary to Leave.

E. O. Andrews, assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who has been serving temporarily, will leave for New Haven, where he is to be permanently employed in Y. M. C. A. work the end of this month. Mr. Andrews had the position in New Haven when he came here, coming to this city to help the local association with its office work until the summer lull should give the officials a chance to arrange for filling the vacancy without undue haste. Mr. Andrews is a valuable worker, and the association regrets its inability to keep him.

Usher at Society Wedding.

Robert E. L. Lewis, of Central avenue, will be one of the ushers at the wedding of Lewis Livingston Hyde, of New York, and Miss Leila Moss McGuire, which will take place in Christ church, Winchester, Va., on Saturday afternoon. Miss McGuire is on the maternal side a granddaughter of John Randolph Tucker, and Henry St. George Tucker, president of the Jamestown Exposition, is her brother.

District Court.

Only one case was disposed of in in the District Court this morning. Jacob Sachar secured possession of the premises occupied by Thomas Kennedy on Essex street in a landlord and tenant action. W. L. Hetfield, Jr., was Sachar's lawyer and V. W. Nash, Jr., represented the defendant.

Seniors Defeated the Sophs.

The seniors of the Plainfield High School defeated the sophomores in a baseball game yesterday on Crescent Oval by the score of 10 to 6. The game was snappy throughout, few errors being made. Van Deventer and Douglass formed the battery for '07, and Loizeaux and Doane for the sophs.

QUIET WEDDING IN GRACE CHURCH AT NOON

UNITED MISS LOUISA LAMSON AND HORACE HOLLEY SMITH.

Miss Louisa W. Lamson, sister of Mrs. Howard C. Tracy, of Prospect avenue, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Lamson, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Horace Holley Smith, also of Salt Lake City, were married at 12 o'clock noon today at Grace church, in the presence of a number of relatives from this city and distant points. Rev. Prescott Evarts, of Cambridge, Mass., a cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride, gowned in white silk velour, princess style, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Howard C. Tracy, as matron-of-honor, whose gown was of white mousseline. She carried white daisies. The best man was Howard C. Tracy. The bride's trousseau was also notable for the fact that she wore a tulle veil which was used by her mother and her sister at their weddings.

Both the bride and groom are well known in Salt Lake City, and their families are prominent there socially. Mr. Smith is a clerk to United States Senator Surtherland, of Utah, and is preparing for the practice of law. The bride received a great many gifts of use and value.

Among the guests at the wedding and at the reception, which was held afterward at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy, were A. W. Evarts, Miss Evarts, and Mrs. C. C. Beaman, of New York; Mrs. Henry Wardner and Miss Ellen Steele, of Windsor, Vt.; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ames, Jr., of Staten Island; Mrs. John Doull Miller, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Mrs. R. B. Corey and Miss Corey, of this city. The couple will enjoy an extended wedding trip before returning to their home.

Old Love Flames Anew.

Camden, June 18.—Material for a modern novelist is provided by the marriage of William Burch and Mrs. Edith Thursby. Both are nearly sixty years old. Thirty-five years ago they were married and were divorced after a union of four years. Both remarried and lost their partners by death. By their first marriage they had a daughter. Last week Burch visited the daughter in Baltimore. The wife he had not seen since his divorce was also visiting the daughter. The old love was rekindled at the meeting. Several days later they returned to Burch's home here, where they were married.

PRIZE SPEAKING AT LEAL'S

Exercises This Morning in Connection With the School's Closing.

A VARIED PROGRAM

Judges Award First Honors to Clarence Lawrence and the Second to Charles Hyde.

In connection with the twenty-fifth annual commencement of John Leal's School, at the Casino, tonight, exercises, including prize speaking, were held this morning at the school. There was a large attendance of parents and friends of the pupils and the program was received with much enthusiasm.

Opening, interspersing and closing the program were selections by an orchestra, violin, mandolin and piano, and violin solos by Clarence Lawrence. The program of prize speaking was as follows:

"Fort Wagner," Dickinson, Thomas Day; "The Victor of Marengo," Anon, Thomas Foote; "Anthony's Speech to Roman Citizens," from Julius Caesar, Shakespeare, Donald Fullerton; "The Revenge," Tennyson, Reginald Gough; "A Race for Life," from "The Last of the Mohicans," Cooper, Richard Depew; "The General's Client," Allen Randolph; "Waterloo," Headley, Clarence Lawrence; "Billy's Animal Show," Phelps, Charles Hyde.

After the speaking the judges consisting of City Judge W. N. Runyon and Messrs. Case and Woolston, retired to select the winners of the first and second prizes offered by Mr. Leal. In the interim there was music by the orchestra.

Judge Runyon presented the prizes with a few words, in which he congratulated the pupils and the school in general. The first prize was awarded to Clarence Lawrence and the second to Charles Hyde. The selections met with approval and hearty outburst of applause.

There are five young men to be graduated from the school, tonight, Francis L. Bergen, Leslie Brokaw, Ralph E. Hallock, Lawrence B. Smith and Otis Averill and all expect to continue their studies in college next year. In view of the fact that it is the twenty-fifth graduation exercises, Mr. Leal planned for a more elaborate time than usual. A feature of the exercises tonight will be the presentation by Thomas M. Day, president of the Yale Club, the handsome cup, offered by the club to the pupil showing the greatest efficiency in athletics and scholarship. The address of the evening will be delivered by Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church.

WAITING FOR THE KNIFE.

Mr. Listman Getting Himself in Condition for Operation for Appendicitis.

Physical Director Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., who has been ill for five days, is gathering strength for an operation. His illness has been diagnosed as appendicitis, and his physician has ordered him to husband his strength for the operation that will be necessary. The case is not acute, and surgery will not be necessary for a week or two.

In ignorance of the serious condition to which he was tending, Mr. Listmas left his sickbed Saturday afternoon to direct the meet of the S. S. A. A. at the Riding and Driving Club. His sustenance since Thursday forning had been two pieces of toast, but he stayed through the meet and then went to Scotch Plains to see the Y. M. C. A. nine play the Plains team. He is not confined to his bed, but he will have to take things easy until the doctors are ready to put him under the knife.

EARLY MORNING FIRE IN THE BUSINESS SECTION

FLAMES IN GEORGE VOEHL'S BARN THREATEN SURROUNDING BUILDINGS.

For the second time this summer the business section of the city was threatened with a serious conflagration, when fire was discovered in the hay-mow of George Voehl's bakery, on West Front street, at 2:18 o'clock this morning. The cause of the fire is a mystery, Chief Doane being unable to ascertain any reason for it. There was no new hay in the barn and spontaneous combustion is not considered at all. The loss was principally to the hay and straw, the damage to the building and flour being slight. It is estimated that $800 will cover the damage.

Besides seven horses, the bakery wagons, the hay and straw, there were fully one hundred barrels of flour stored in the barn. The prompt discovery of the fire by one of Mr. Voehl's bakers undoubtedly prevented great loss of property. He sent in an alarm from Box 12, and the department was quick in responding. Three streams from hydrants were used to extinguish the fire, while a stream from the chemical engine was used on the Endress building, adjoining, to prevent a spread of the fire. The flames were shooting out of the windows in the direction of Trinity Reformed church, close by, but the firemen carefully watched this structure and no damage resulted to it.

The damage to the flour was chiefly caused by water, the bottoms of a number of barrels being well soaked. The firemen were kept busy for over an hour before the fire was entirely extinguished. Mr. Voehl's entire night force performed heroic service in rescuing the horses and wagons before the fire reached the first floor of the barn.

Druggists Object.

James C. Field, of this city, was elected treasurer of the new association formed at the closing session of the convention of druggists held last week at Asbury Park. The purpose of the Association is to fight the Pure Food and Drug Bill passed last winter and upon which the Legislative Committee of the Pharmaceutical Association in the Asbury convention made a report with recommendations which were adopted. Among other objections, the new association objects to the new State law granting absolute power to the State Board of Health to fix a standard for a drug or food by simple resolution.

SMALL GIRLS GET DRUNK

STUPIFIED IN THE YARD

Neighbors, Seeing Them Stretched On the Grass, Think They Are Poisoned, and Excitement Follows.

Three small girls with infantile readiness to taste strange and forbidden things, and bottled beer that came to their hands, were responsible for a lot of excitement on Regent street, North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon. They drank the beer until their little heads were completely fuddled, and the people who saw them lying in the yard before their home, to where they staggered, thought they had been poisoned. As a matter of fact, the stuff did affect their heart action to such an extent that but for energetic action by Dr. A. H. Dundon, borough physician, serious and perhaps fatal results would have followed.

The girls are the daughters of William Johnson, who moved to 14 Regent street, with his family, about three weeks ago. The oldest of the girls is eight, the next six, and the youngest three years of age. Mrs. Johnson went out yesterday afternoon, leaving them alone in the house.

They rambled about the place in search of amusement, and finally went into the cellar. There they found the beer, in bottles, carefully set in a cool corner by Pa Johnson, who likes a cold glass with his dinner. They looked, and yearned and tasted. They did not like the taste, but it was remembered that grown-ups appeared to like the stuff, so they took long drinks on faith and general

In a very little while they felt queer, and their legs refused to act just so. The cellar seemed very stuffy, and they staggered up into the yard. There they fell to the ground, in stupor. Neighbors who saw them lying there never thought of beer. The heavy lids and the sterterous breathing suggested only poison, and the excitement, quickly bred, spread all about the neighborhood. Hurried calls were sent for the police and a doctor, and while Chief Weiss and Dr. Dundon were hurrying to the scene, a big crowd gathered. Fully 500 people were staring at the little forms in the yard when the officials got there.

A hasty examination was enough to give the physician a clue to the cause of the children's condition. He administered emetics at once, and the little girls responded to the treatment. With the intoxicant out of their systems they recovered their senses, and told how they had come to drink the beer. Dr. Dundon gave them mild "bracers" and put them to bed. They were weak, but his speedy action checked the alcoholic reaction, and he said this morning that no serious results were to be feared.

Pa Johnson has put his beer on the highest shelf in the house, and hidden the ladder.

Meet in Denver.

Charles B. Morse, of Franklin place, who has just returned from a trip to the West, met W. W. St. John, the former Plainfield editor, in Denver, to where the latter went early in the year, for the benefit of his health. Mr. Morse was the first Plainfielder Mr. and Mrs. St. John have seen in six months, and the meeting, in that faraway city, was correspondingly enjoyed. Mr. Morse spent a day with Mr. and Mrs. St. John, driving with them about the city. He was struck with the improvement in Mr. St. John's appearance. Mr. St. John said he felt better than he had in many months, and was confident of full recovery.

Three men were killed by the explosion, the engineer, fireman and a brakeman. Senator Silzer, of New Brunswick, is counsel for the plaintiff.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Seventeen automobiles passed the corner of Park avenue and Front street, Sunday afternoon, in twelve minutes. Some of them were flying thirty-five to forty miles an hour, paying no attention to the warning sign. Many of the residents just stand around Sunday afternoons watching the narrow escapes from head on collisions, as every one acquainted with the corner knows it is only a question of luck and time when there will be one that will mean more than wrecked cars.

Funeral services of Mrs. Lydia Ackerman, widow of the late Warren Ackerman, who died at her home early Sunday morning, will be held from the First Presbyterian church, Plainfield, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

There is altogether too much fault-finding with the umpires in the Inter-City Amateur League to benefit the sport. It is time that the officials get together and looked into the matter. If the umpires are not giving satisfaction the league has a remedy, and if the teams are too severe in their criticism there is a way to stop that. There has been a great deal of talk about Saturday's game at Scotch Plains with the Y. M. C. A. and the league officials should recognize the situation and take some action one way or the other.

It is to be hoped that Dunellen will take a brace soon and make it interesting for some of the other teams in the league. Manager Penny expects that with Peacock in the box, there will be a turn for the better.

Walter Nelson expects to be with the Y. M. C. A. team on Saturday when it meets Clinton Avenue at Crescent Oval. He should prove a valuable man to the nine.

Fred Tenney played his first Sunday game last Sunday.

The Chicago White Sox defeated the Elizabethport Stars, Sunday, by a score of 6 to 5, eleven innings. Linderman pitched a fine game for the Stars.

Catcher Cooney, now that he has completed his course of study at Princeton, is to turn "pro," it is said, and play the Zanesville Club, of the P. O. M. League.

The best work noted among the newcomers in the American League, especially on the part of pitchers, is that being done by Liebhardt, with Cleveland.

The New York Nationals were third this time a year ago, but much closer in points to the Cubs than now.

Jack Kleinow, of the Highlanders, doesn't make any fuss about his work, but in an unobstrusive sort of way is putting up a great game behind the bat.

The Clevelands are making a fine record on this eastern trip, and also are showing fine fighting qualities.

GOLF.

The total of entries for the national open golf championship to be played at Philadelphia Thursday and Friday, is seventy-four, against sixty last year at the Onwentsia Club. Jerome D. Travers, the Metropolitan and New Jersey State champion and nine other amateurs are entered, including Dr. Simon Carr and A. W. Tillinghast. Seven Philadelphia, six Boston and eight Chicago clubs will be represented by their professionals, while eighteen local players are on the list.

The open tournament at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday was such a great success that there is no doubt but that it will be an annual fixture. The competing players who had never been on the course before were delighted with it and promised to come again.

There will be an open tournament, a thirty-six hole medal play handicap, at the Wykagyl Country Club, New Rochelle, on Saturday, June 29. Competitors will be paired at the tee and they may start at any time from 9 o'clock to noon. There will be four handsome prizes, for the two best gross and net cards. All members of M. G. A. clubs who are rated on the general handicap list may make personal entry to James R. Turner, secretary of the club, at 25 Broad street. Members who are not so rated must enter through their club secretaries.

Prizes bristle on the program of the sixth annual tournament of the Hudson River Golf Association, July 11-13, at Poughkeepsie, as thick as strawberries in a June fruit garden. The first sixteen will qualify for the new championship cup, Gilman P. Tiffany having won the old one out last year. The winner will receive a gold medal besides a leg on the trophy, which is a three win one. The Duchess County Club gives a gold medal for the low score in the qualifying round and Frank Coykendall a cup to the championship runnerup. Floyd M. Johnson, and R. A. Kenworthy give cups for the winner and runnerup of the second and W. H. Young and George Seaman similar prizes for the third sixteen. Cups for the three defeated eights are the gifts of A. G. Smith, W. K. Gillette and J. E. Adriance. Horatio Nelson and Peter H. Troy give two cups for the handicap and Horatio W. Bain a cup for the best score made during the tournament.

The ninth annual championship tournament of the Connecticut League of Golf Clubs will be held at the Hartford Golf Club, July 10-13. Besides the championship set there will be match play cups for each sixteen to return cards and a full set of beaten eight cups.

That a Philadelphia course should be the scene of the national open championship is something new and it accentuates interest in the play at Wissahickon—St. Martin's green—on Thursday and Friday. Every one would wish to see a Philadelphia professional lead the seventy-four entrants. Will Anderson, of Ontwentsia, who has won four times, and Stewart Gardner, of Exmoor, were at Baltusrol yesterday as the guests of George Low, champion of the Eastern Professionals' Golf Association. Before packing their grips to go to the open the two had a round of the course together. Will Anderson did 72, Low 74 and Gardner 75.

The crowded condition of the course is apology for the request that that members as far as possible refrain from entertaining non-members on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. This courteous rendition of the rule that so many golf clubs have to enforce appears on the season's card of the Euclid Club at Cleveland, where the Olympic team match is to be played on July 8 and the national amateur championship on July 9-13. On the Euclid green committee, which will work with the U. S. G. A. committee, are Fred S. Barton, chairman; Wilbur H. Brooks and W. J. Fleming. Entries for the amateur championship close on July 1 with W. F. Morgan, secretary of the U. S. G. A., at Arch 5, Brooklyn Bridge, Manhattan. The bogey of the course, 38, 39—77, is only two strokes above the par, yet in an elimination match against bogey included in the Western Golf Association program of 1903 the winner held bogey level on only four holes. The cop bunkers are perpendicular and of proportions to often made is advisable to play back. All the traps are filled with loose lake sand and there are also water hazards. The playing length of the eighteen holes is 6,123 yards.

PLENTY OF CANDIDATES FOR SECRETARY'S JOB.

Row Between Col. Dickinson and Mayor Fagan Brings a Shower of Applications.

Trenton, June 18.—The recent trouble between Secretary of State Dickinson and Mayor Fagan, of Jersey City, which caused the Colonel to begin suit for $100,000 against the Mayor, has brought forth many candidates for the post of Secretary of State, in anticipation that Governor Stokes would request the Colonel's resignation.

The trouble was the outcome of the ambition of both men to become leader of Hudson county. Mayor Fagan made startling charges against the secretary. Governor Stokes asserted that if the Colonel did not prosecute the suit he would ask for his resignation. When the Colonel discontinued his suit applications for the place began to come in.

Among the names prominently before the Governor are those of Senator Wakelee, of Bergen; ex-First Assistant Postmaster-General William M. Johnson, of Bergen, whose father once held the post; Senator Thomas J. Hillery, of Morris; Senator William J. Bradey, of Camden; Vivian M. Lewis, Clerk in Chancery, of Passaic; Edward W. Gray, Governor Stokes' private secretary, of Essex.

It is said that Bradley and Hillery stand the best in the race.

Schmitz Formally Removed.

San Francisco, Cal., June 18.—Eugene Schmitz is no longer Mayor of San Francisco. He was formally removed from office yesterday afternoon by the Board of Supervisors, and James W. Gallagher, chairman of the finance committee, was named as acting Mayor in the place of the man in prison awaiting sentence on June 27 for extorting money from French restaurant keepers. It was recognized by the graft prosecutors that if the Mayor was permitted to transact official business at the county jail he would be able to make the claim that he is as well able to perform the duties of his office in prison as in any other place. For this reason the prosecutors asked the Supervisors to act at once.

To Devise New Steel Rail.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 18.—In the Duquesne Club here yesterday there was a conference which may have further weight on the steel rail business. Early yesterday morning Charles M. Schwab arrived in Pittsburg on his way to Cleveland to attend the wedding of his brother, but the wedding date did not prevent the head of the Bethlehem Steel Company from having a long talk at the Duquesne Club with high officials of the Carnegie Steel Company, who, like Mr. Schwab, are now much interested in the steel rail problem, as put up to the makers lately by the indignant railroads. It is believed that Mr. Schwab and the Carnegies are uniting on a rail which will be shown the railroad committee at a meeting to be called soon.

Big "Melon Cutting."

New York, June 18.—Announcement was made yesterday by Levi C. Weir, president of the Adams Express Company, of what, in the memory of the street, is the largest "melon cutting" on record by an industrial company. The company, in other words, intends to distribute $24,000,000 to its stockholders in the shape of collateral trust bonds. As there is $12,000,000 in stock outstanding the distribution amounts to $200 for every $100 share, or 200 per cent. The company established a precedent for this action in 1898, when it declared a 100 per cent distribution to its shareholders in 4 per cent debenture bonds as a special dividend. This amounted to $12,000,000. In conjunction with the new bonds this brings the total payments up to 300 per cent since 1898. It is understood that the step on the part of the Adams Express Company is due to a desire to enable the company's shareholders to obtain a direct benefit from its accumulated surplus. There was a general movement last August among stockholders of express companies, to force the concerns to increase dividends or in some other way distribute the large surpluses which were piling up.

Telegraphers May Not Strike.

New York, June 18.—Much secrecy was thrown yesterday over the sudden departure from the city of S. J. Small, president of the Telegraphers' Union, and there were rumors that the threatened general strike on the Western Union lines might not take place. None of the other officers would discuss the matter, but S. J. Konenkamp, of Pittsburg, a member of the executive board, said that the situation showed no new developments of an important character. Mr. Konenkamp, who is acting as president in the absence of Mr. Small, added: "The members of the Board have practically decided upon the details of the campaign to be waged, and what it is to be will be definitely announced before the end of the week. The companies have never replied to the communications sent them, nor have we received any word from Washington or elsewhere as to what course the national government may pursue. Arbitration has never been considered as the companies have not answered our requests. We do not anticipate a general strike."

Picture Upsets Pittsburg Society.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 18.—It has been discovered that one of the most popular pictures in the Carnegie Art Gallery, one which has been admired by thousands weekly, is the portrait of Florence Evelyn Nesbit, now Mrs. Harry K. Thaw, and socail Pittsburg, which for years has been turning up its nose at Mrs. Thaw, is angry at the alleged deception which has been practised on it. The painting is "Study in Black and Green," by John W. Alexander, a famous New York and Pittsburg artist. Mrs. Holman, mother of the young woman, admits that her daughter sat for the picture, and it is understood that in a letter here Alexander admits also that it was Evelyn who posed for the painting.

Autoist Fined, Sues Metuchen.

Albert Cheatle, of Newark, had a taste of the law as it is dealt out by the authorities of Metuchen, last Sunday week, while touring through that section in his Jackson car. Mr. Cheatle was hailed before the Metuchen officials for having his license number fastened beneath the body of his car in the rear and fined $5. The authorities claimed that the number should be placed on the back of the tonneau, in spite of the fact that it was fastened just below the body. Mr. Cheatle paid the fine, but on his return reported the matter to the New Jersey Automobile and Motor club with the result that a suit has been started against the Metuchen authorities.

Death Ends Child's Mission.

Chicago, Ill., June 18.—Mrs. Mary Rodriguez's in fant child is dead here while her husband is in a San Francisco hospital. Mrs. Rodriguez is the daughter of a wealthy resident of Portugal, and when she married against his will he refused to have anything more to do with her. Misfortune overtook the young mother and her husband in San Francisco. With her infant child the mother started to Portugal, thinking that the sight of it would melt her father's sternness, but the child died as the mother reached here. Now she is heartbroken and will likely return to San Francisco.

Oldest Engine Driver Killed.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 18.—Samuel Wagner, eighty-thre years old, who, until his retirement, was the oldest locomotive engine driver in point of service employed by the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company, was struck and killed yesterday by a Reading train. It had been Wagner's custom nearly every day since his retirement to visit a roundhouse, because, as he said, he "loved to be near the engines." He was returning home from his customary call when he stopped for a moment on the track and was struck by a train.

Up-State Reporters Busy.

Elmira, N. Y., June 18.—After an exciting chase through the business streets a newspaper reporter yesterday morning outdistanced the police and captured Calvin Updike, a paroled inmate of Auburn prison, wanted for four burglaries committed within a week. Another reporter about the same time stopped a lively runaway.

"Jewett" Refrigerators

We consider the "Jewett" the best refrigerator made—because they are made to stand hard service; they are the most economical in ice consumption; they give perfect service and are sold at popular prices. If we had not bought these refrigerators very early in the season we would have to charge from $2.50 to $5.00 more for them. In addition to the fact that we can save you money, is the satisfaction that you are getting a refrigerator that years of experience has proven to be all that we claim. The cool weather may have kept refrigerators out of your mind, but you'll be wise to make your selection now.

Hoists Green Flag.

New York, June 18.—While a green flag waved over police headquarters yesterday on the order of Police Commissioner Bingham, hundreds of citizens called up on the telephone to learn why the Stars and Stripes had been hauled down. For a time the police were kept busy explaining that the green banner bore the coat of arms of the city of New York and was one of the new flags recently purchased by the Police Department. Many thought it was an Irish flag, and there was corresponding jubiliation and indignation.

Elizabeth, June 18.—Detective Novello brought to headquarters yesterday Mrs. Amelia Veania, who has been a fugitive since June 6, when she sho t and seriously wounded Samuel Hall, an itinerant umbrella mender, on the stairs leading to her room, at 704 Third avenue. Upon report that Hall, whose condition has improved to the extent of enabling him to be up, had disappeared from the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Detective-Sergeant McGrail made complaint against the Veania woman, charging her with atrocious assault, to which she pleaded guilty. IN THE SEWING ROOM.

"You are a pushing sort," said the Scissors to the Thimble.

"Yes," replied the latter, "but I'd like your life better. It's just ripping. And you?" to the Needle.

"Well," replied the latter, "my life is just sew-sew. But then though not a blunt individual, I generally come to the point."

"Oh, you have an eye to things," interposed the Pin, "but I generally control matters by my head work."

"I am sorry," remarked the Spool, "that I can't be serious, for I'm in a continuous round."

But here the seamstress appeared, and soon all felt themselves in pretty much of a box.—Baltimore American.

Rubbing It In.

"I hear your firm discharged you."

"Yes, but I wouldn't mind that so much if they hadn't added insult to injury."

"How?"

"They advertised for a boy to fill my place."

NOW FANCY THAT.

Gwendolyn—Tell me, dear, did Cholly kiss you very hard?

Geraldine—Not exactly. He hardly kissed me.—Chicago Daily News.

Advantages of Being Twins.

"To be twins," said the man, "must be great,
And a kind dispensation of fate,
When together indeed
No mirror you'll need
To see if your hat is on straight."
—Judge.

Plenty at Hand.

Mrs. A.—What have you there, my dear?

Mrs. Z.—A list of summer fiction. I always start buying early so I will have plenty to read when I go away on vacation.

Mrs. A.—I never buy any summer fiction.

Mrs. Z.—You don't? Then where do you get it?

Mrs. A.—Oh, I read my husband's letters from town.—Chicago Daily News.

Doubtful Compliment.

Stippler—Did Miss Kitts admire your paintings?

Dobber—I don't know.

Stippler—What did she say about them?

Dobber—That she could feel that I put a great deal of myself into my word.

Stippler—Well, that's praise.

Down in Coralville.

Old Nepune had just purchased a handsome automobile of coral and pearl.

"Gracious!" exclaimed the inquisitive mermaid. "What kind of a wagon do you call that?"

"Why, a water wagon, of course," laughed Neptune, as he tried to run down a sea horse.—Chicago Daily News.

Scientifically Explained.

Student—Doctor, why is the itch so much longer in running its course than are other diseases?

Doctor—Well, because it is so handicapped. You see, no matter how much of an advantage other diseases are given, itch always has to start from the scratch.—Judge.

Hard Word to Spell, Too.

Junior Partner—Does she? Well, if she does, it's about the only word she can spell, so far as my observation goes.

Young Husband—Why, I did break him only last night.—Chicago Daily News.

Prisoner—Generally they does, only they hurts my feelin's by their lack of confidence. They won't let me have a latch-key.

What We Are Coming To.

Long Island R. R. Strike.

New York, June 18.—Trains of the Long Island Railroad will practically cease to run today unless the demands of the collectors and brakemen for wages on a mileage instead of a time basis are granted. This is the threat of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which has prepared and delivered an ultimatum to the railroad company through Val. Fitzpatrick, second vice grand master of the brotherhood. That the company is fully aware of the serious character of the situation is evidenced by the complete preparation it has made to meet the conditions of a strike. The railroad is now operating between seven hundred and eight hundred trains daily on all is divisions. Before the first of next month it had been planned to put into operation the summer schedule, which carries about twelve hundred trains. To meet the worst conditions a strike would bring about there has been prepared an emergency schedule, carrying less than one hundred trains a day for all divisions. The effect on the tens of thousands of workers in New York who live on Long Island if they have only that many trains for their accommodation may easily be imagined.

James B. Duke Wins Divorce Suit.

Trenton, June 18.—The Court of Errors and Appeals yesterday affirmed the opinion of Vice Chancellor Pitney in deciding for James B. Duke, the Tobacco Trust magnate, in his suit for divorce against his wife, Mrs. Lillian B. Duke. Major Frank T. Huntoon, a New York clubman, was named in the suit. The court also sustained the court below wherein Huntoon sought to escape the payment of costs in the case.

WOMEN LEARNING TO FIGHT BULLS

TROUPE OF DARING FEMALE PERFORMERS TRAINED AT BARCELONA, SPAIN.

PRACTICE ON DUMMY ANIMAL

Metadoras as Expert With the Sword as Male Rivals—Feminine Toreadors Sometimes Receive Serious Injuries in Ring.

Madrid.—Women appear to have invaded every known calling of man from steeplejack to deep sea diver, yet it will be news to most to hear that there is a cuadrilla of lady bullfighters in Barcelona—the only troupe of its kind in the peninsula. The writer came upon them rehearsing one afternoon in the great silent bull ring at Barcelona, under the superintendence of their business manager, Senor Totti. Totti had undoubtedly struck a gold mine in his cuadrilla de senoritas toreras, or group of wonian bullfighters.

They have now been at work four or five years and have performed not only all over Spain, but also in France and South America. In this as in other matters the work of innovation was difficult. Spain's principal matadors ungallantly sought to drown the lady bullfighters with ridicule, but without success. Even their practice in the empty arena was enough to draw a crowd and Senorita Lolita, the first of the two matadoras, is as skillful a hand with the deadly short sword as any crack espada from San Sebastian to Algeciras.

Lolita was capering about and trying to plunge the regulation sword into a dummy made from a large pair of real bull's horns surmounting a wooden face roughly painted with tar and adorned with two ferocious white eyes. His back was a wooden plank in which was a square hole two inches across, situated just where the most vulnerable point would be in the real animal and where a good matador always tries to strike. This imitation bull was mounted on a kind of gocart and was trundled about rapidly and in as realistic a manner as possible by a youth, while Lolita did her best to drive the bullfighting sword straight into the hole.

She was wearing skirts during this practice, but when in the arena Lolita and her comrades in arms put on the regulation dress of the male bullfighter. These women toreadors occasionally meet with serious injury. Lalita's dark face bears a long white scar stretching from mouth to ear. She was terribly gored at Saragossa last year and nearly lost her life.

"It was my fault," she said, "for I let my capa fall just when I needed it most. You may be sure," she told me, "I need all my nerve to deal a good clean blow at the end and my greatest safeguard lies in always keeping as cool as possible."

Both Lolita and Angelita, the other matadora, are from Catalonia, and, like most Spanish girls, were enthusiastic followers of bullfighting from earliest childhood. They often sighed that they were not boys and regretted being precluded from taking up the national sport. One of the girls in the cuadrilla comes of a family of toreros. Her brother is a very expert man in the bullring and the girl herself was early initiated into the dangers of the arena.

It is a profession which must be taken up young, while the joints are still supple. All the men who are good at it show what they are made of before they are 20. Lolita began at 16 and her sister principal at 17. At present these women bullfighters content themselves with killing two-year-old bulls, and so far their manager has deemed it imprudent to allow his charges to tackle the bulls of six or seven years.

At the same time, the women perform many feats not attempted by the men. There is, for instance, the business of jumping over the bull's back by means of a pole, and both "leading ladies" tackle the bull on horseback with a long lance.

Senor Totti himself superintends the practice in the empty arena, placing the girls in strategic positions, while the young man with the wheeled dummy runs hither and thither, first at one and then at another. If one of the cuadrilla is inattentive to the performance the master of ceremonies rebukes her severely.

After this practice has gone on for half an hour or so an exhibition of pole jumping is given and this concludes the day's exercise. Next day, it may be, the lady bullfighters give a real exhibition and attract the whole town. Thousands turn out who would not in the ordinary way attend a bull fight and bets are made as to the ability of the respective matadoras. In nearly all respects the carrida of these women bullfighters is the same as that of the men, and the time-honored state entry, strategic distribution of forces over the arena, entry of the bull and miscellaneous play thereafter are all closely followed.

Naturally now and then one of the girls grows timid before an unusually determined charge and takes to her heels with a stifled scream. The audience roars with laughter, even though her life may be in serious danger. Truth to tell, however, these young bulls, known as novilles, have little of the true fighting spirit.

The pay of the women is very small as compared with that of the first-rate male bullfighter. Lolita herself seldom receives more than $30 for killing six young bulls, while the rest of the troupe account themselves lucky if they get five dollars for their share of the entertainment.

MAN IS BALD-HEADED; THINKS HE'S BALD EAGLE

SITS IN TREETOPS AND SWOOPS DOWN ON PREY—RELATIONS SAY HE IS INSANE.

Jermyn, Ia.—When Dick Bemick was arrested for stealing a lamb he astonished Judge Foley by gravely announcing that he was a bald eagle and the lamb was his lawful prey. Dick is bald-headed.

Bemick seems to be insane, and his brother told the court that he had been acting strangely ever since a desperate battle with a bald eagle along the Mississippi bluffs.

Finding an eagles' nest Bemick tried to capture the young ones, but was attacked by the parent birds. Before he had succeeded in driving them away he was covered with deep wounds inflicted by talons and beaks.

Evidently a poisonous virus entered his system, for his whole nature is seemingly changed. He makes unprovoked attacks on nearly every person he meets; he sits for hours in tree tops screaming like an eagle, descending only to make a swoop on a chicken or a rabbit.

His arrest came when he caught the lamb in a field and, after slaying it, tried in vain to soar into the sky by waving his arms as if they were wings.

Women Fight With Hymnals.

Portsmouth, O.—Men and women were knocked down and trampled and women fainted during a pitched battle in the Free Will Baptist church here.

Hymnbooks were hurled back and forth and the pews and other church property were demolished. The police finally quelled the riot after a number of persons had been badly hurt.

Women started the hymnbook hurling, but when the men clashed in a hand-to-hand conflict some of the women were knocked down, while others fled screaming.

The riot was the result of one faction bringing Rev. George Vance, of Galford, to conduct the services. His appearance was the signal for the women followers of the regular pastor, Rev. Freeman Chase, to begin battle.

Sneezes Himself to Death.

Meeteetse, Wyo.—Henry Goodmiller, a sheep herder, began to sneeze a few days ago and he continued to sneeze almost uninterruptedly until he fell over dead. The bursting of a blood vessel, caused by the violent attacks of sneezing, was the immediate cause of death.

Goodmiller had contracted a severe cold which had settled in his head. He sneezed much for several days and the attack which resulted in his death came on a few minutes after he arose from the breakfast table early in the morning. He was powerless to check it and as he was at a ranch house it was impossible to summon a physician. He sneezed constantly for more than half an hour and then he fell over and died.

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

Soon the food vanished and then the girl arose. "Sit down again, my poor child," entreated Angie, who had observed the strange scene with moist eyes, "and tell us who you are and where you came from."

"My name's Chip," answered the girl, bluntly, "an' I'm runnin' away from Tim's Place, 'cause dad sold me to Pete Bolduc."

"Sold—you—to—Pete—Bolduc," exclaimed Angie, looking at her wide-eyed. "What do you mean?"

"He did, sartin," answered the girl, laconically. "I heerd 'em makin' the bargain, 'n' I fetched three hundred dollars."

Martin and his wife exchanged glances.

"Well, and then what?" continued Angie.

"Wal, then I waited a spell, till they'd turned in," explained the girl, "and then I lit out. I knowed 'twas 60 miles to the settlement, but 'twas moonlight 'n' I chanced it. I've had an awful time, though, the spites hev chased me all the way. I was jist makin' a nestle when I seed yer light, an' I crept through the brush 'n' peeked. I seen ye wa'n't nobody from Tim's Place, 'n' then I cum out. I guess you've saved my life. I was gittin' dizzy."

It was a brief, blunt story whose directness bespoke truth; but it revealed such a pigsty state of morality at this Tim's Place that the little group of astonished listeners could scarce finish supper or cease watching this much-soiled girl.

"And so your name is Chip," queried Angie at last. "Chip what?"

"Chip McGuire," answered the waif, quickly; "only my real name ain't Chip, it's Vera; but they've allus called me Chip at Tim's Place."

"And your father sold you to this man?"

"He did, 'n' he's a damn bad man," replied Chip, readily. "He killed somebody once, an' he don't show up often. I hate him!"

"You mustn't use swear words," returned Angie; "it's not nice."

The girl looked abashed. "I guess you'd cuss if you'd been sold to such a nasty-looking man as Pete," she responded. "He chaws terbaccer 'n' lets it drizzle on his chin, 'n' he hain't but one eye."

Angie smiled, while Martin stared at the girl with increased astonishment. He knew who this McGuire was, and something of his history, and that Tim's Place was a hillside clearing far up the river, inhabited by an Irish family devoted to the raising of potatoes. He had halted there once, long enough to observe its somewhat slothful condition, and to buy pork and potatoes; but this tale was a revelation, and the girl herself a greater one.

This oasis in the wilderness was fully 40 miles above here, its only connection with civilization was a seldom-used log road which only an experienced woodsman could follow, and how this mere child had dared it, was a marvel.

But there she was, squat on the ground and watching them with big black, pleading eyes. There was but one thing to do, to care for her now, as humanity insisted, and Angie made the first move. It was in the direction of cleanliness; for entering the tent, she soon appeared with some of her own extra clothing, soap, and towels, and bade the girl follow her up the river a few rods.

The moon was shining clearly above the treetops, the camp-fire burned brightly, and Martin, Ray and Levi were lounging near it when the two returned, and in one an astonishing transformation had taken place.

Angie had gone away with a girl of ten in respect to clothing, her skirt evidently made of gunny cloth and reaching but little below her knees, and for a waist, what was once a man's red flannel shirt, and both in rags. Soiled with black mud, and bleeding, she was an object pitiable beyond words; she returned a young lady, almost, in stature, her face shining and rosy, and her eyes so tender with gratitude that they were pathetic.

Another change had also come with cleanliness and clothing—a sudden bashfulness. It was some time ere she could be made to talk again, but finally that wore away and then her story came. What a tale it was—scarce credible.

It was a fantastic, weird, almost spookish tale,—the spectres she had seen were so real to her that the telling made them seem almost so to the rest, and beyond that, the girl herself, so like a young witch, with her shadowy eyes and furtive glances, added to the illusion.

But now came a diversion, for Levi freshened the fire, and at a nod from Angie, Ray brought forth his banjo. It was his one pet foible, and it went with him everywhere, and now, with time and place so in accord, he was glad to exhibit his talent. He was not an expert,—a few jigs and plantation melodies composed his repertory,—but with the moonlight glinting through the spruce boughs, the river murmuring near, somehow one could not fail to catch the quaint humor of "Old Uncle Ned," "Jim Crack Corn," and the like, and see the two dusky lovers as they floated down the "Tombigbee River" and feel the pathos of "Nellie Grey" and "Old Kentucky Home."

Ray sang fairly well and in sympathy with each theme. To Angie and the rest it was but ordinary; but to this waif, who never before had heard a banjo or a darky song, it was marvelous. Her face lit up with keen interest, her eyes grew misty at times, and once two tears stole down her cheeks.

For an hour Ray was the center of interest, and then Angie arose.

"Come, Chip," she said pleasantly, "it's time to go to bed, and you are to share my [illegible]"

"I'll [illegible] the girl replied bluntly. "I ain't fit. I kin jist ez well curl 'longside o' the fire."

But Angie insisted and the girl followed her into the tent.

Here occurred another incident that must be related. Angie, always devout, and somewhat puritanical, was one who never forgot her nightly prayer, and now, when ready for slumber, she knelt on the bed of fir twigs, and by the light of one small candle offered her usual petition, while Chip watched her with wide and wondering eyes. As might be expected, that waif was mentioned, and with deep feeling.

"Do ye s'pose God heard ye?" she queried with evident candor, when Angie ceased.

"Why, certainly," came the earnest answer; "God hears all prayers."

"And do the spites hear 'em?"

"There are no such creatures as 'spites,'" answered Angie, severely; "you only imagine them, and what this Indian has told you is superstition."

"But I've seen 'em, hundreds on 'em, big and little," returned the girl, stoutly.

Angie looked at her with pity.

"Put that notion out of your head, once for all," she said, almost sternly. "It is only a delusion, and no doubt told to scare you."

And poor Chip, conscious that perhaps she had sinned in speech, said no more.

For a long time Angie lay sleepless upon her fragrant bed, recalling the waif's strange story and trying to grasp the depth and breadth of her life at Tim's Place; also to surmise, if possible, how serious a taint of evil she had inherited. That her father was vile beyond compare seemed positive; that her mother might have been scarce better was probable. No mention, thus far, had been made of her; and so Angie reflected upon this pitiful child's ancestry and what manner of heritage she had been blessed or cursed with. Some of her attributes awoke Angie's admiration. She had shown utter abhorrence of this brutal sale of herself, a marvelous courage in endeavoring to escape it. She seemed grateful for what had been done for her, and a partial realization of her own unfitness for association with refined people. Her speech was no worse than might be expected from her life at Tim's Place. Doubtless, she was unable to read or write. And so Angie lay, considering all the pros and cons of the situation and of this girl's life.

There was also another side to it all, the humane one. They were on their way out of the wilderness, for a business visit to the nearest settlement, intending to return to the woods in a few days—and what was to be done with this child of misfortune?

Most assuredly they must protect her for the present. But was there anyone to whom she could be turned over and cared for? It seemed possible this brutal buyer of her would follow her out of the woods, to abduct her if found, and then the moral side of this episode with all its abominable possibilities occurred to Angie, who was, above all, unselfish and noble-hearted. Vice, crime, and immorality were horrible to her.

Here was a self-evident duty thrusting itself upon her, and how to meet it with justice to herself, her husband, and her own conscience, was a problem. Thus dwelling upon this complex situation, she fell asleep.

The first faint light of morning was stealing into the tent when Angie felt her companion stir. She had, exhausted as she doubtless was, fallen asleep almost the moment she lay down; but now she was evidently awake.

Curious to note what she would do, Angie remained with closed eyes and motionless. From the corner of the tent where she had curled up the night before, the girl now cautiously crept toward the elder woman. Inch by inch, upon the bed of boughs, she moved nearer, until Angie, watching with half-opened eyes, saw her head lowered, and felt two soft, warm lips touch her hand.

It was a trifle. It was no more than the act of a cat who rubs herself against her mistress or a dog who licks his master's hand, and yet it settled once for all that waif's fate and Angie's indecision.

CHAPTER III.

Levi was starting a fire, Ray washing potatoes, and Martin, in his shirt-sleeves, using a towel vigorously near the canoes, when Angie and Chip emerged that morning; and now while breakfast is under way, a moment may be seized to explain who the people were and their mission in this wilderness.

Many years before, in a distant village called Greenvale, two brothers, David and Amzi Curtis, had quarreled over an unfortunate division of inherited land. The outcome was that Amzi, somewhat misanthropic over the death of his wife, and of peculiar makeup, deserted his home and little daughter Angeline, and vanished. For many years no one knew of his whereabouts, and he was given up as dead.

In the meantime his child, cared for by a kindly woman known as Aunt Comfort, had grown to womanhood. About this time a boyhood sweetheart of Angeline's, named Martin Frisbie, who had been gathering wealth in a distant city, invited a former schoolmate, now the village doctor in Greenvale, to join him on an outing trip into the wilderness.

Here something of the history of a notorious outlaw named McGuire became known to Martin, and more important than that, a queer old hermit was discovered, dwelling in solitude on the shore of a small lake. Who he was, and why this strange manner of life, Martin could not learn, and not until later, when he returned to Greenvale to woo his former sweetheart once more, did he even guess. Here, however, from a description furnished by a village nonedscript,—a sort of Natty Bumpo and philosopher combined, known as Old Cy Walker, who had been Martin's youthful companion,—he was led to believe that the queer hermit and the long-missing Amzi were one and the same.

Another trip into this wilderness with Old Cy, taken to identify the hermit, resulted in proving the correctness of the surmise. Then Martin set about making this misanthropic recluse more comfortable in all ways possible; and then, leaving Old Cy to keep him company, he returned to Greenvale and Angie.

A marriage was the outcome of his return to his native village, and then, with his nephew, Ray, and long-tried guide, Levi, as helpers on this unique wedding trip, the hermit was visited.

"I Never Had Nothin' But Work 'n' Cussin'."

It was hoped that meeting his child once more would result in inducing him to abandon his wildwood existence and to return to civilization; and it did—partially. He seemed happy to meet his daughter again, consented to return with them when ready, and after a couple of weeks' sojourn here, the canoes were packed and all set out for civilization and Greenvale once more.

But "home, sweet home," albeit it was, as in this case, a lonely log cabin in a vast wilderness, proved stronger than parental love or aught else; and sometime during first night's camp on the way out, this strange recluse stole away in his canoe and returned.

"It's natur," Old Cy observed when morning came, "an' home is the hardest spot in the world to fergit. Amzi's lived in that old shack all 'lone for 20 years. He's got wonted to it like a dog to his kennel, an' all the powers o' the univarse can't break up the feelin'."

It seemed an indisputable, if disappointing, fact, and Martin led his party back to the hermit's home once more.

Another plan was now considered by Martin—to buy the township, or at least a large tract enclosing this lake, build a more commodious log cabin for the use of himself and his wife, and spend a portion of each summer there. There were several reasons other than those of affection for this decision.

This lake, perhaps half a mile in diameter, teemed with trout. The low mountains enclosing it were thickly covered with fine spruce and fir, groves of pine with some beech and birch grew in the valleys; deer, moose and feathered game abounded here, and best of all, no vandal lumbermen ever encroached upon this region.

It was, all considered, a veritable sportsman's paradise. Most likely a few thousand dollars would purchase it, and so, for these collective reasons, Martin decided to buy it.

Old Cy was left to keep the hermit company; Martin, his wife, and Ray, with Levi, started for civilization to obtain needed supplies, and had been four days upon the way when this much-abused waif appeared on the scene. The party were journeying in two canoes, one manned by Ray, who had already learned to wield a paddle, which carried the tents and luggage; while the other was occupied by Martin, his wife, and Levi. The only available seat for the new arrival was in Ray's canoe, and when breakfast was disposed of and the voyagers ready to start, she was given a place therein.

FRESH AIR MEETING.

Held at Truell Inn In the Interests of Netherwood Home.

The third parlor meeting in the interest of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home was held at Truell Inn, yesterday afternoon, instead of at the home of Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman. The change was made owing to the death of Mrs. Warren Ackerman. The meeting was well attended by those who have been interested in the work at the home. Rev. Dr. Rodman, president of the association, was in charge and he made a few remarks explaining the work and what has been accomplished at the home.

Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Home, was present, with a number of children. She made a short address and the children recited and sang much to the pleasure of the audience. A feature of the meeting was the violin selections by Miss Cornelia Hyatt, who was accompanied on the piano by Miss Mary Hubbell.

There were reassurances of continued support of this worthy charity and those in charge felt much encouraged over the interest and sympathy shown by those present.

"Special Soda Day" Nets $200.

The Faith chapel building fund has been increased $200 as a result of the effort on the part of L. W. Randolph, the druggist, on Saturday last, when he gave the entire receipts of his soda fountain to the fund. The scheme was more successful than even anticipated. Over 2,000 special tickets were sold for that day only and in addition there was a considerable received at the fountain from persons who did not buy tickets. A meeting of the committee was held at the chapel, last night, when reports were received and the exact profit determined. Several special gifts have been received since then for the work at the chapel.

OFFICEHOLDERS WON'T PAY.

Refused to Take Bonds of Newspaper "New Idea" Captured.

New Brunswick, June 18.—Robert Carson, collector of the port of Perth Amboy, and Charles W. Russell, postmaster of this city, were made defendants yesterday in two suits for $500 each, brought by the New Brunswick Publishing Company, which publishes the Daily Press.

It is alleged that the officials, who are also Republican politicians, signed an agreement to buy $500 of bonds of the company, provided an issue of $5,000 was sold, and that they have failed to live up to that agreement.

It is said that they and several other prominent Republicans, including Congressman Howell, took bonds with the idea of using the paper as a Republican campaign sheet, but that Charles A. Bloomfield, who is a "New Idea" Republican, secured the controlling interest in the paper. It is claimed that all have stood to the agreement excepting Carson and Russell, and M. Bloomfield declares that he will fight the case through all of the courts of the State if necessary.

Surprised Harold Hansen.

A surprise party was given to Harold Hansen at his home on West Front street, last night, in honor of his departure for Europe on July 4. There were about thirty-five guests and all had a jolly good time. There was instrumental music, singing and games. B. A. Paroubek gave several violin solos and Mrs. William S. Cubberley and son, George Cubberley, rendered mandolin solos. Refreshments were served during the evening and Mr. Hansen was wished bon voyage.

FERDIO HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

Sticks to Story That He Feared Rash Meant to Attack Him.

Elizabeth, June 18.—Charles Ferdio, who on Friday night shot and killed Frederick Rash, nineteen years old, of 836 Garden street, was held by Police Justice Mahon, last night, without bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The prisoner persists that he shot Rash while under the impression that he was about to be attacked. He had just emerged into Garden street from a vacant lot when he saw Rash running toward him and pulled his revolver and fired. Rash had been running ahead of his father and mother, with whom he had been out visiting, so as to have the front door opened when his parents arrived.

Three Miles of State Roads.

PROBERS FILE REPORT

State Investigating Committee Severe in Condemnation of Some Things.

'DAN' VOORHEES RAPPED

Also Declares People Have Been Defrauded By Collusion of Architect and Contractors.

Sweeping changes of the most drastic character in the management of State affairs are recommended in the report of the Assembly investigating committee, which will be submitted to the Legislature today. It was originally intended to submit the report yesterday, but owing to the absence of committeeman Mark A. Sullivan, of Hudson, it was deferred. The report is based upon the evidence adduced by the committee at its sittings during the last six weeks under the Wright resolution.

The document gives a comprehensive review of the main facts in the testimony, and then makes the recommendation which, it is claimed, will correct the evils uncovered. The chief recommendations are as follows:

That the Banking and Insurance Department should make weekly remittances to the State Treasurer; that the funds may be deposited and draw interest, also that the bond of the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance be increased from $20,000 to $75,000; that a law be enacted requiring all public funds to be deposited in banks paying 2 per cent interest or more; that all State departments be required to turn over all their income to the State Treasurer monthly, and their expenses paid by the Treasurer only on the warrant of the Controller; that absenteeism on the part of well paid State officials should be stopped.

This absenteeism, the report says, warrants the most severe condemnation of the Legislature, and speaks of it as a "patent case of nonfeasance." The "deplorable condition wherein a State official may hold more than one office" should be corrected, the report adds, and the offices of State curator, chief of the State census bureau and the teachers' information bureau, now all held by Silas R. Morse, of Atlantic City, a member of the State Board of Education, and his son, should all be abolished and the work transferred to the State Department of Public Instruction.

The report takes a rap at "Uncle" Dan Voorhees by recommending the enactment of a law prohibiting dual officeholding. It contains a strong recommendation for the abolition of the system of patronage in public office and the establishment of Civil Service under a Civil Service commission. The committee holds that the State Department of Motor Vehicles should be consolidated with the State Road Department. Continuing, the report recommends that the State bureau of labor and statistics and the State Department of Labor be combined. The State Board of Assessors is severely censured.

"The assessors do no assess," says the report. It recommends the consolidation of the State Board of Assessors and the State Tax Board. It is recommended that the State Sewerage Commission and the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission be abolished and this work combined with a reorganized board of health. The report holds that the health matters in the State have become of such importance that a State board of health of three members, who shall be paid suitable salaries, should be created. The present board serves without remuneration. The report declares emphatically for the abolition of the State Board of Arbitration. It recommends that the State Voting Machine Commission should be abolished.

Taking up the construction of State buildings, the report says unequivocally that the State has been systematically defrauded by the collusion of Lewis Lawton, of Trenton; George J. Tobin, the favored plumber, and George E. Poole, now the State architect. The alleged destruction of Lawton's books gets the severest censure.

Another recommendation is that the State Fish and Game Commission should be dissolved and a new bureau established having control of fish, game and oysters. The report declares the present commission is a scandal and a disgrace. The report speaks for the abolition of all the oyster commissions, and recommends the creation of one bureau with one chief to manage this work. The useless multiplication of offices comes in for a hard knock. The committee says this should be stopped at once. Petty graft in the legislative incidental bills is shown up and roundly denounced. The report recommends that all legislative supplies be purchased by the State House Commission under competitive bidding.

HOLY CROSS CHOIR MUSICALE A SUCCESS

DELIGHTFUL PROGEAM WELL RENDERED BEFORE LARGE AUDIENCE.

The second annual musicale by the choir of Holy Cross Protestant Episcopal church, for the benefit of the choir outing fund, was held at the parish house last night. It was largely attended and much enjoyed. The platform was prettily decorated with flowers.

John Bland, of New York, a tenor; Mrs. G. A. Warner, violinist, and Miss Gertrude Lohrke, of East Orange, soprano, assisted the choir. H. Raymond Loder was the pianist and Mr. Philip Schlich was director.

The program was a delightful one, all the numbers being pretty and well rendered. The choir sang splendidly, and the soloists all won sustained applause.

The program:

Choir chorus—By Babylon's Wave (sacred anthem), Gounod; tenor solo—(a) Ridi Pagliacci, Leoncavello; (b) Harfenmadchens, von Housegger; (c) Als die Alte Mutter," Dvorak, John Bland; choir chorus—Sweet and Low; soprano solo—With violin obligato—(a) Thou'rt Like a Flower, Paul Ambrose; (b) Dreams, Streletzki, Miss Gertrude Lohrke; choir chorus—The Spider and the Fly; violin solo—(b) Ave Maria, C. Gounod, Mrs. G. A. Warner; tenor solo—(a) I Know a Lovely Garden, D'Ardelot; (b) Mother O' Mine, Tours, John Bland; choir chorus—The Miden of the "Fleur De Lys;" soprano solo—(a) When I Am Dying, Norden; (b) Open Secret, Woodman, Miss Gertrude Lohrke.

The program was unexpectedly augmented by the singing of Mr. Byard, who consented to appear almost on the spur of the moment. Mrs. Warner made a change in her number, rendering an air of Tchaicowski's instead of the Mazurka of Wieniawski.

MISS DORA A. BENNETT BRIDE OF WILL S. KENNEY.

Gathering of Guests from Many Places Witness the Ceremony at Her Home.

Miss Dora A. Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Bennett, of Clinton avenue, and Will Smock Kenney, also of this city, were married Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents at 5 o'clock. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, performed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white net and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and lilies-of-the-valley. Both the bride and groom were unattended. The wedding marches were played on the piano by Miss Edith M. Redpath and Percy E. Hand. The ushers were William LaTourette and Charles F. Windham.

There were guests present from Hartford, Conn.; East Orange, Jersey City, Raritan, Whitehouse, Stanton and this city. The bride received a number of gifts, among which was a china closet filled with Limoges china, from the employes of the Fruit Dispatch Company, of New York, by whom the bride was employed for six years. The couple left on a wedding trip, and upon their return will reside here.

DR. GARDNER ACCEPTS.

Will Succeed Rev. Frank Fletcher As Pastor of New Market Church.

After a successful pastorate extending over a period of six years, Rev. George H. Gardner, pastor of the Baptist church, Plantsville, Conn., and a member of the Connecticut Assembly from the town of Southington, has sent his letter of resignation to the trustees of that church and has accepted the call to the New Market Baptist church, to succeed Rev. Frank Fletcher, resigned.

Mr. Gardner went from Deep River, Conn., to Plantsville six years ago, and his last pastorate there has been marked by success, financially, numerically and spiritually. Last year he was elected representative from Plantsville in the face of strong opposition and since then has been a wide-awake man for the town's interests. His date of resignation has not yet been named. Recently Mr. and Mrs. Gardner visited New Market to get acquainted with conditions and they were favorably impressed.

P. H. S. A. A. Seasons Ends.

A meeting of the athletic association of the Plainfield High School was held at the assembly exercises this morning. The treasurer's report showed that the season closes with a balance of $45 on hand.

—This is the season when those delicious Jersey strawberries at Neuman Brothers are best appreciated. They are received at the store strictly fresh each morning. The assortment also includes the celebrated Senator Dunlap variety, grown by Rouch & Parks.

HAUGHTY SENIORS UNBEND

Class Day Exercises Marked By An Unusually Clever Program.

A BACKWARD PROPHECY

Scene to Represent Assembly Room in the Morning—Principal Travell In Caricature.

The senior class day exercises at the Plainfield High School, held in the auditorium last night were marked by a program which sparkled with wit and originality. The prophecy, written by Weston Gavett, was the notable feature, the writer departing from the usual custom and taking a look backward from the year 1927.

The morning assembly in the high school was represented, where "Principal I. W. Tarbell" officiated. He was impersonated by Adelbert Van Brakle, who was made up for the occasion. He bore a striking likeness to Principal I. W. Travell. Assuming the customary attitude and gestures of the principal, all of which were easily recognized, "Mr. Travell" announced the morning song, which was "The Two Teachers," written by J. DeLancey Ferguson, and set to the music of "The Two Grenadiers."

The speaker of the morning was an old "grad" of the class of '07, now president of the New York Stock Exchange, in the person of Joseph N. Van Deventer. He was cleverly made up. After one or two pointless jokes the old "grad" spoke about the class in which he graduated. Various views of the old school and the faculty, taken by Joseph Osgood, were thrown upon the screen and the lecturer made appropriate remarks concerning them. The last picture was the class of '07. The lecturer requested that it be enlarged. The screen was withdrawn and the real class appeared seated on the stage in full view of the limelight. With a long pointer the old "grad" indicated the different people and told what they had been doing for the last twenty years. That was the prophecy. It touched on the foibles or the characteristics of the seniors with humor and wit. It aroused much laughter and applause.

The class history, written by Miss Helen Johnson and read by Miss Mildred Berry, showed that '07 has done as much for the P. H. S as any class in the past and has an exceptionally good record in all lines. Songs written by J. DeLancey Ferguson and William Osgood were sung.

The presentation of the class gift to the school, $75, was made by the president, William C. Douglass. The class statistics showing the personal qualities of the members were awarded as medals by "Mr. Tarbell." The statistics are as follows:

Most popular, Helen Johnson, William Douglass; most executive ability, Helen Johnson, Weston Gavett; class fatty, Helen Johnson, J. De Lancey Ferguson; class skinny, Cornelia Lounsbury, Bertram Leggett; sportiest, Florence Prior, Gertrude Abbott, Edgar Freeman; best poet, Miram Carman, J. DeLancey Ferguson; biggest eater, Helen Johnson, Victor Todd; best singer, Queena Tillotson, Stanley Fisher; most athletic, Gertrude Moodey, William Douglass; prettiest girl, Florence Prior; handsomest boy, William Osgood; best actor, actress, Queena Tillotson, Adelbert van Brakle, Joseph Van Deventer; best artist, Ethel Van Zandt, Weston Gavett; most bashful, Ethel Van Zandt, Ethan Rogers; teacher's curse, the Kanen Twins, Joseph Van Deventer, Edgar Freeman; done most for P. H. S., Gertrude Moodey, William Douglass; best naturer, Cornelia Lounsbury, William Douglass; biggest feet, Gertrude Moodey, William Osgood; most soulful expression, Gertrude Moodey, Ro-lin Williams; done most for 1907, Helen Johnson, William Douglass; most class spirit, Queena Tillotson, William Taylor; biggest fusser, Florence Prior, Victor Todd; most likely to marry, Mildred Elizabeth Berry, William Crawford Douglass; most scholarly, Rose Siegal, Frederick Smith; quietest, Mabelle Cubberley, Ethan Rogers.

Complain of Practice.

The constant dumping of the contents of vauls and cesspools on the farm land owned by Poole Voorhees, located in North Plainfield Township, just outside the borough limits, is a source of much complaint on the part of other residents in that vicinity. It is said that the township committee has given Mr. Voorhees permission to have the refuse dumped on his land. Those who complain about the nuisance say that the stench is worse than that arising from the sewer beds, and they cannot understand why the practice should be allowed. Mr. Voorhees is himself a member of the township committee and secretary of the township Board of Health.

PLANNING FETE FOR FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Y. M. C. A. WILL DEVOTE A WEEK TO JUBILATION IN NOVEMBER.

Plans for the observance of the fortieth anniversary of the Y. M. C. A. are being made by the Board of Directors. The celebration will not take place until November, but the observance is to be so elaborate that the directors feel they are none too early in getting arrangements started.

General discussion of plans was held by the Board and the Women's Auxiliary at a joint meeting this week. It was decided at once that the celebration be carried on for a week. The whole Y. M. C. A. building will be given over to the fete. "The building will be festal from garret to cellar," said Secretary Robbie yesterday.

Details of the celebration will be shaped as rapidly as possible. Committees are to be appointed at a meeting of the directors and the executive committee of the Women's Auxiliary. One of the features of the observance definitely decided on is an anniversary dinner. Prominent men will speak at it.

GETS YALE CLUB CUP OFFERED TO HIGH SCHOOL

WILLIAM C. DOUGLASS RECEIVES IT FROM HANDS OF PRESIDENT DAY.

The cup which was offered by the Yale Club of Plainfield, to the student of the Plainfield High School who excelled both in athletics and scholarship for the entire four years' course, was awarded to William C. Douglass. The presentation was made by Thomas M. Day, Sr., president of the Yale Club, this morning.

Mr. Day said there was no discrimination as to the college to which the student goes, simply that he combine mental and physical characteristics of strength. He declared it a matter of gratification that the winner had thoroughly fulfilled the ideal.

P. H. S. insignies were awarded by Principal I. W. Travell who said this was the first year when no students had been restricted from any of the athletic teams because of scholarship. Those who received insignias were Stanley Fisher, John Dutcher, Russell Morris, Allen Snyder, Edgar Freeman, Dudley Wilcox, Moses Rubenstein.

TROUBLE OVER A HORSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Drake Get Into Court Over Its Ownership.

"Family jars" between Charles Drake and his wife, of the borough, were aired at a session of Justice Mundy's court, last night. The trouble arose over a horse, said to be the property of Mrs. Drake. The husband appropriated the animal and his spouse immediately secured a search warrant to recover it. Being successful she then sold the horse to Edward Vanderhoff, of the borough, for $90.

Hearing of the sale Mr. Drake went to Mr. Vanderhoff's stable and took the horse to his home. Again Mrs. Drake obtained a search warrant and Mr. Drake was made to appear before Justice Mundy for a hearing. It did not take long for the Justice to get at the bottom of the trouble and he promptly turned the horse over to the rightful owner when it was proved that it originally belonged to Mrs. Drake and a receipt was produced showing that Mr. Vanderhoff had bought the animal. It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Drake do not live together.

WATER DAMAGES HOUSE.

Valve On Top Floor Burst and Flood Almost Wrecks Interior.

A valve in a water pipe on the top floor of Charles Schanz's house on East Front street, burst last night, and the torrent that poured down through the ceiling beams and floorings almost wrecked the house. It was a half-hour before a plumber could be secured to stop the flow, and by that time the house was dripping from top to bottom. The general effect was as if the fire department had been fighting a hot blaze.

A number of valuable ball dresses brought from Germany by Mrs. Schanz were ruined. The total of damage, with the clothing and ornaments spoiled, will be close to $500.

ANNIVERSAAY OF W.C.T.U.

Observed Last Night With Special Service at Seventh Day Baptist Church.

MEMBERSHIP INCREASE

Roll Has Swelled From Seventy-five to Two Hundred—Address by Mrs. L. J. Ellis, of Washington.

The thirtieth anniversary of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, of this city, which occurs today, was appropriately celebrated in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night, the features being an address by Mrs. L. J. Ellis, of Washington, and a report covering in general the past three decades. The meeting was largely attended, chiefly by women, including the members of the local union and their friends.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, as president of the union, presided, and seated with her on the platform were Mrs. E. A. Parse, honorary president; Mrs. L. J. Ellis, Mrs. T. C. Bodine, secretary, and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, who conducted the devotional exercises. There were also several selections by the church choir.

Mrs. Bodine's report showed that the local union was organized thirty years ago today with a membership of seventy-five, and today it numbers 200. Of the thirty-two departments of work carried on by the National Union, the local organization has taken up eleven departments, including the Loyal Temperance Legion and legislation. Considerable has been accomplished in every department. The union has had six presidents, Mrs. Strawbridge, now of California, being the first. She was followed by Mrs. Ryder, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Miss Sue Peck, Mrs. E. A. Parse and Mrs. Tomlinson, who is now acting in that capacity. The union was complimented and congratulated for its excellent work since the organization.

This report was followed with one by the treasurer, Miss May E. Howlett, who stated that all the dues have been paid, that there is no indebtedness and a balance is on hand.

Following the reports, Mrs. Ellis made the address of the evening. She is the representative of the National W. C. T. U. at Washington, the greater part of her duties being to look after legislation in Congress pertaining to temperance. She talked in an interesting way of the fight made against the seating of Reed Smoot from Utah, the efforts in behalf of the Pure Food Laws and the continued campaign of education in favor of the abolition of the canteen in the army. Mrs. Ellis related many personal incidents showing some of the "inside" of political affairs at Washington and she declared that the Congressmen, or the more thoughtful ones, at least, were with the temperance women in their fight for righteous laws.

Mrs. Ellis congratulated the local union upon the completion of its thirty years and she wished that it might go on accomplishing even greater things in the future.

Funeral of Old Railroader.

The funeral of Jeremiah Harrington, sixty-five years old, was held today in Somerville. He was for many years an employe of the New Jersey Central Railroad Company and for over ten years was flagman and gatetender at the Washington avenue crossing in Dunellen. Death was due to a complication of diseases, from which he had suffered for a month. A widow, four sons and two daughters survive.

PUBLIC PRESENTATION OF THE BUSINESS COLLEGE

MAYOR FISK PRESIDES AND W. L. SAUNDERS MAKES PRINCIPAL ADDRESS

A large and appreciative audience representing Plainfield, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan, Westfield, and a wide stretch of surrounding country were present last evening at the public presentation of the Plainfield Business College in its new home in the Woodhull & Martin building. Mayor Fisk presided and every part of the excellent program passed off in the delightful and interesting manner such as was expected from the array of exceptional talent that graced it.

Mayor Fisk, after welcoming the guests and congratulating the citizens of Plainfield upon the finely equipped and reputable commercial school the city now has in the Plainfield Business College, strongly urged his hearers to consider carefully the matter of preparation for business and good citizenship. He then introduced former Mayor Saunders, of the borough, as the principal speaker of the evening, and who returned from his vacation in Vermont for this special purpose. Mr. Saunders spoke in his usual entertaining and forceful way on "Business Opportunities" for young people who are properly trained. His splendid address was interspersed with rounds of applause.

Prof. H. C. Krebs, superintendent of Somerset County Schools, held the rapt attention of the audience during his address on "The Value of Training." This most instructive address was replete with sound reasoning, earnest appeal, and humor and left a deep and favorable impression.

William Holmes sang in rare voice and received encore after encore from his delighted hearers. The program was interspersed with excellent music rendered by Suhr's orchestra.

At the close of the program, the audience called for "that master of wit and eloquence," S. S. Swackhamer, who convulsed his hearers with his humor, and stirred them with the force of his eloquent appeal for "The Proper Care and Training of the Boy." Mayor Fisk then voiced the sentiment of all present in expressing his great satisfaction with the arrangements and excellent appointments of the college.

MR. AND MRS. TOWNSEND TENDERED A SURPRISE.

Friends Assist Them in Observing Golden Wedding Anniversary

In response to invitations, a number of Plainfield people went to Bound Brook yesterday, where they surprised Mr. and Mrs. David Townsend at "Stone Crop," their summer home, the event being the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. Mrs. W. B. R. Mason, their daughter, planned the affair, which was carried out most pleasantly, thanks to the weather man.

The ceremony of fifty years ago was performed by Rev. H. G. Mason, then pastor of the Second Baptist church of Plainfield, at the home of Andrew Manning, father of the bride. Those present yesterday were Joel D. Manning and daughters, the Misses Sarah and Harriet Manning, Mrs. Isaac F. Randolph and son, Howard, Mrs. Jeremiah Manning and daughter, Katherine, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Manning, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Manning, Miss Lizzie Manning.

Dr. and Mrs. N. W. Currie, of Central avenue, are among the guests at the annual reception of President Demarest and Miss Demarest at Rutgers college, this afternoon.

LEAL'S SCHOOL EXERCISES

GIFT FROM ALUMNI

In Behalf of 115 Graduates Assemblyman Finch Presents Mr. Leal With $500 Purse.

The twenty-fifth annual commencement of John Leal's School for Boys, held at the Casino, last night, was one series of surprises and proved to be a delightful affair. Before the exercises were concluded an alumni association was started, the Plainfield Yale Club, through its president, Thomas M. Day, presented the cup, offered by the club to Otis Averill, the pupil attaining the highest standard in athletics and scholarship; a purse of $500 in gold was presented to Mr. Leal by the former graduates of the school and Mr. Leal presented a cup to Russell Phillips for special distinction in his work during the year.

The Casino was attractively decorated for the occasion with college flags, while the stage was made a scene of beauty through an arrangement of flowers, palms and ferns. Interspersing the numbers on the program an orchestra enlivened the occasion with popular airs, and altogether the affair was the best in the history of the school, marking as it did the completion of twenty-five years of teaching by Mr. Leal.

The address of the evening was made by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, who was warmly greeted by the audience. While the address was filled with timely advice to the graduates in particular and everyone in general, there was a pleasant vein of wholesome humor which all enjoyed. Among other things Dr. Zelie said:

"When I was invited to speak here tonight there kept running through my mind the remark made by a high school girl who had assigned to her the honor of writing an essay for the graduating exercises. She took the honor very seriously and finally confided to a friend that she was much troubled because the times were so unsettled that she really didn't know quite what advice to give the country. The times are certainly unsettled but there is one thing with regard to which they are rapidly coming to an agreement and that is that we do not care to hear much more about the 'Strenuous Life.' So in chosing my subject for tonight I imposed upon myself just this one condition that I would keep as far away from that subject as I possibly could.

"And therefore tonight I have nothing to say which makes it necessary to key yourselves up to some unusual pitch of resolution and although commencements are seldom times of relaxation and reflection I do not know why they should not be once in awhile. Therefore I am going to speak of three of those silent and less generally advocated forces in life and character and ask you rather to notice how they work rather than to exhort you at all costs to put them right into operation tonight.

"And the first of those forces which in the long run will always be found taking their place in any life which is greatly worth living is 'Memory.' The very sound of the word will make you feel that I am striking rather below the usual commencement pitch for this seems to be a time when we want to hear something about the future. It is the man who can most quickly recall how things have gone a thousand times before in his own life and the life of other men who will act most efficiently in his present situation. With the best of intentions men go on failing through their life for no other reason than that their moral memory is untrained or inactive while the one who stands firmest in the presence of a sudden emergency or temptation is pretty sure to be the one by a sudden flash of recollection can see straight back through his past and realize that this temptation is not a new thing, but the same old thing which has undone him a hundred times before.

"It is memory that makes a man go on and makes him dare to. And it is the one in the face of some fresh crisis which tries his courage has the most power to say 'I was helped far back in that struggle of long ago and the power that helped men then must help me still. I will try it again.'

"And then there is another quality in life about which I want to speak. And that is poetry. Someone said of the Emperor William that one of the reasons why he was so practical was because he loved poetry. There in a word you raise the whole issue of what is practical so that you can hear one and another good honest soul saying 'All bosh.'

Mrs. Ella Fellman, of Sioux City, Ia., decided to go to the high school with her son just to prove to him that the work might be more interesting than he thought it to be. She keeps up with him and hires someone to do her housework while she is taking the course.

Italy's tragedian, Tommaso Salvini, has got ready for himself a magnificent walnutwood coffin. Salvini has just been into Florence to assist in varnishing his coffin, which, after his death, will be sealed inside an enormous solid block of marble in the family mausoleum at Porto Santo Cemtery, in Florence, with the simple epitaph, "Tommaso Salvini, nineteenth century actor."

About fifty years ago one out of every 538 of the population of Great Britain was insane; now the proportion is one out of every 285, the increase being most marked in the last few years.

Mr. Rockefeller, who is giving away $43,000,000 while he is being indicted some 4,300 times, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, is a charitable man, but he labors under a delusion that he was appointed by Providence to collect all the money from the original owners and distribute it among persons who seem to him to be in need.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The amateur league schedule for Saturday will bring Y. M. C. A. and Clinton Avenue together at Crescent Oval, and Dunellen and Scotch Plains together at the 'Plains. Bound Brook will have an off day.

Now that Scotch Plains leads in the amateur league by a small margin, over the Y. M. C. A. nine, the latter team will make every effort to regain the lost position. It may not occur this week, as Dunellen is quite likely to be defeated on Saturday by Scotch Plains, but Clinton Avenue is only waiting for a chance to square accounts with the down-the-line team.

Lew Moran, of the Philadelphia Nationals pitching staff, may rightfully be considered one of the few star boxmen of the big leagues. He let Pittsburg down on Monday with five hits and held them safe at all stages. He has been one of the most successful finds of the season.

Burch, of St. Louis, formerly a member of the Westfield team, is putting up a strong game this season in all departments. He is now covering center-field and is rated as one of the swiftest in the National League.

The Brown University team has one more game to play with Alabama before closing the season and if it wins that contest it can lay claim to the championship among the college teams of the country, for it has not lost a game this year.

Despite the fact that the big league managers are hot-foot after Heyniger, the crack pitcher of the Princeton College team, there is very little prospect of his entering the professional ranks at present, if ever. He is now a junior at college and will not leave there to play ball for money.

It has been a disappointment to the admirers of Leal's School athletics that the school has not turned out a strong baseball team this season. Nearly all of the interscholastic games scheduled went by default because the local school did not have a team strong enough to meet its opponents.

Lou Wiltse is now pitching winning ball for the Johnstown Tri-State Leage team, having regained perfect condition of his right arm.

GOLF.

The mixed doubles tennis tournament under the auspices of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association, which was started at the Park Club last week, will be completed on the club courts Saturday afternoon. The play will be followed with social festivities in the clubhouse.

The tennis schedule at the Plainfield Country Club calls for mixed doubles on the club courts Saturday afternoon, prizes being awarded to those who make the greatest progession during the tournament.

Philadelphia is the centre of attraction for all eastern golfers this week and the outcome of the national open tournament will be watched with more than ordinary interest. The fact that "Marty" O'Loughlin will be one of the contestants lends additional local interest.

The Cranford Golf Club course of nine holes is considered one of the most difficult, on account of its length, and it requires exceptionally good golf to make a low score there.

One noticeable feature of the open tournament at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday was the uniformity of the number of strokes for each hole among some of the best players. There were instances where contestants would not exceed four strokes on a hole for several holes and it proved that it is consistent golf of this kind that wins every time.

The members of the Plainfield Country Club will return to the regular schedule on Saturday, with play for the Golf Committee cup, and in addition there will be a four-ball four-some commencing at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

The events at the Park Golf Club on Saturday will include the weekly competition for the President's, Golf Club and Hydewood Park cups. The competition for the last named cup will extend to and including July 4, and that for the scratch cup to Election Day. The President's cup play will run all summer.

There are any number of big tournaments scheduled for this season and it will keep the amateurs and "pros" very busy if they intend to compete for the many prizes offered throughout the country by various golf clubs. Among the amateurs Plainfield is not very largely represented at these gatherings for the reason that it takes considerable time and besides great distances have to be covered between the tournaments.

Tom McNamara, the professional of the Fall River Golf Club, recently made a new course record of 65. He went out in 35 and back in 30, where his card showed four 3s and a 2. McNamara, who is a homebred, has entered for the national open championship tournament to be held at Philadelphia this week.

It would appear as if the Hudson River Golf Association and the Connecticut League of Golf Clubs had selected an unfortunate week for their championship tournaments. The Hudson River tournament is to be held at Poughkeepsie July 11 to 13, while the Connecticut gathering is scheduled for July 10 to 13. Both conflict with the national amateur championship at Euclid.

The debarring of Alec Smith from the Scotch team in the coming match between Scotland and England was an act in accordance with the rule which provides that only resident professionals shall play. Because Smith is a Scotchman by birth some persons thought he would play with his countrymen.

Will You Buy Silk Dresses at Half?

Of course any woman knows that she cannot buy such silks as are employed in the making of these dresses and take them to any kind of a dress maker and have them made for a price anything like as low as we are offering them at. Therefore, it is only a question of whether you want a new silk dress for summer wear and whether you are willing to pay about half what it is worth to get one.

It took a lot of coaxing to get dresses made just as we wanted them of the right sort of silks at as low a price as we wanted to pay. But our coaxing was supported by our tremendous all-the-year-round trade with the biggest makers, and it pulled the plums we were seeking.

We've been selling these dresses just as fast as we could have them made, and we expect to be able to supply the demand so long as the maker's surplus lots of silks hold out. Five charming new models are here to choose from. They are made of plain silks, neat checks, wide and narrow stripes and polka dot foulards. Some of them have broad bands on the bottom of skirts, and all are right up-to-the-minute in style, and they are dresses that you'd expect to pay fully twice as much for; but our price, while we can get them, will be only $10.50

When Well-Known Plainfield People Tell It So Plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representative citizen of Plainfield the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every backache sufferer, every man, woman or child with any kidney trouble will find profit in the reading.

Andrew Mattis, carpenter, of 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have been troubled for years with dull backache and pain in the back of my head, caused by kidney complaint. I was hurt severely some time ago by falling from a scaffold and the physicians thought my spine was injured. I think that fall injured my kidneys. As nothing else that I tried seemed to help my back or kidneys, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and got a supply at Randolph's pharmacy. I have now taken nearly three boxes, and find that the backache and headaches have disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Mr. Leonard is now a teacher in the English department of the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, and has been very successful. He expects to return there next fall.

The Hudson River tournament is to be held at Poughkeepsie July 11 to 13, while the Connecticut gathering is scheduled for July 10 to 13. —I wish to state that my son, John Coleman (Postman) was brought home from the hospital unconscious on April 26, and he never regained consciousness from his fall on the ice Feb. 12. After having the very best medical attention and specialist, all gave him up as incurable. Some neighbor friends came and said Dr. Hallock, the Osteopath, had done great things for them, and wished us to give him charge of the case. I can not express my gratitude for their kindness in advising us to try Osteopathic treatment. My son commenced to improve from the first treatment and after every treatment we could see improvement. He had very few treatments, and was restored to consciousness and mind, and is able to walk to Dr. Hallocks office, 160 Summit avenue, and has for some time. Wishing all who want to get cured of any disease to call on Dr. Hallock, and thanking you for yourkindness, I am, sincerely, HENRY COLEMAN, 83 A Boyd avenue.—Jersey City Journal, June 15, 1907. Dr. Hallock comes to this city every Thursday from 1 to 9 p. m. Hotel Kensington.

THE GOVENOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor Stokes' message of 4,000 words, submitted to the reconvened Legislature yesterday, was decidedly mild under circumstances existing at present and in many respects was disappointing. It was thought that some indignation would be expressed relative to the House investigating committee, but it fails to grasp the situation that has arisen since the regular session was adjourned. The disclosures brought about by Mr. Backes and his colleagues has made a deeper impression on the public mind than the chief executive is probably aware of and his attitude fails to relieve the situation or carry any particular weight. A few vigorous suggestions regarding the Hahn investigation and its disclosures would have been appreciated much more than all the 4,000 words that he penned.

After commending the Legislature for inaugurating the "reform" of adjourned session to await Executive's action on bills and announcing disapproval of fifty-one bills, the Governor reiterated the necessity of acts providing for:

Improved methods of drawing grand juries.

Better and more efficient civil service.

Prohibition of ballots outside polling places in order to prevent bribery.

Passage of bill to have all the revenues and disbursements of State institutions pass through the hands of Treasurer, on audit of Comptroller.

Recommends common secretary for all the State licensing boards, with headquarters in State House.

Advocates provision for a commission, at call, appointed every three or five years by chief justice to investigate State affairs and make recommendations.

Extension of this plan to counties and municipalities.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company has again demonstrated the fact that streets can be dug up and pipes or conduits put under ground without leaving the thoroughfare in a deplorable state. The deep trench on Park avenue, now being closed up and rolled down by that company, is certainly deserving of a complimentary notice.

Charged with Assault.

Cranford, June 19.—Henry Robertson, Kenyon Schuyler, Harry M. Kohl and Warren Gevathney, all colored, were arrested yesterday in Summit by County Detective John Gallatian, charged with being the assailants of Policeman Adolph Poole. They were brought to Cranford and locked up. Last night Justice of the Peace W. W. Mendell held them in $300 bail each to await the action of the grand jury in default of which they were taken to jail.

TRINITY JUNIORS END MEETINGS FOR THE SEASON.

Reports Show That Year Just Closed Has Been One of the Best the Society Has Enjoyed.

Reports showing the past year has been the banner one for the society were presented at the last meeting of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, of Trinity Reformed church, yesterday afternoon. This was the closing meeting for the summer and there was a good attendance of members.

Miss Katie Layton, treasurer, presented her report, showing that the receipts for the year from all sources were over $90. This is the largest amount ever raised by the members in one year. Out of this sum there was disbursed $14 to the Arabian Mission, $17 to the Indian Mission at Colony, $12 to the Japan Mission for Miss Winn, $10 for the Children's Home in Amoy, China, and $2 for the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

Harold E. Storr, as secretary, presented his report. This showed that the society resumed its meetings on October 3 last with a membership of fifty-six and the present membership is sixty. The report continues as follows: "Mrs. Tunison and Mrs. Kriney have been faithful superintendents, and Miss Edna Oliver, who is chairman of the prayer-meeting committee, has given very interesting reports each month of the weekly meetings.

"The following committees have also reported, namely, lookout, scrapbook, music, social and missionary. There have been thirty-eight meetings held during the year, including missionary meetings and the Juniors informed of the work in the different fields. As the objects of our organization are that we may be witness-bearers for Curist let us remember to be faithful and loyal in all things and God's blessing will rest upon us in our endeavor to serve him. May the coming year be one of greater service for our Lord and Master Jesus Christ."

Following the presentation of the reports and transaction of routine business the young people remained for a social hour, during which refreshments were served by the social committee from the society. Much credit is due Mrs. Cernelious Schenck for her untiring efforts in behalf of the society.

NEW JERSEY'S SHARE OF MILITIA MONEY.

State Military Board Seeks Changes in Military Bill.

Brigadier-General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, attended the meeting of t heState Military Board in Trenton, yesterday. He declared today that the board had decided that there would have to be some important changes in the military bill to be presented to the next legislature if the State is to secure its share of the $2,000,000 voted by Congress to be distributed for the benefit of the militia of the various States.

The bill providing for the appropriation makes the National Guard or militia of the United States an auxiliary of the regular army, and no State may claim a share of the appropriation unless its militia is placed on the same footing with regard to officers and men as the regular army.

The militia of this State will receive about $50,000 if the provisions are complied with and the State board is very anxious to secure the necessary legislation early in the session as the time limit for all changes comes in January next.

Mason Killed by Fall.

Elizabeth, June 19.—Meeker Cree, a mason, of this city, was fatally injured late yesterday afternoon while at work on a bufilding here. An iron girder fell from the top and striking a scaffold on which were McCree and another mason of the name of McCormick, knocked them both to the ground. Cree had his skull fractured and died several hours later in the Alexian Hospital without regaining consciousness. McCormick escaped with slight contusions on his back. The dead man was forty-eight years old, resided at 1186 East Grand street, and leaves a family.

But I am quite sure that more lives than we have any idea of have waned in power and lost in happiness for no other reason than this. You may almost say that victory belongs most to him who can give the right name to the situation before him. And poetry gives the right name.

"And last of all now I come to the third of those silent forces and that is religion. I need not say anything about the necessity of having one for all men have one whether they will or not and whether they know it or not. The great question is simply what kind of religion it is, whether it is good or bad. It may be our comfort or our curse, the thing that gladdens us or something that only succeeds in souring us.

"Some day the temporal one will slip out of your hands, well finished no doubt, but the greatest satisfaction one can have in it will be the feeling that it was only a part of one which is to go on forever. In making up our judgments about success we often attribute to mere talent what was really due to something far deeper than that. And any triumph that we may secure in life will be but a poor and disappointing thing unless we have so connected ourselves with others of our fellow-men that it is as much to them as it is to us or still more unless and even more deeply truly the human applause and recognition may be there, but the achievement will be unsatisfying and empty unless there gathers around it the favor and the approval which comes down from above.

"And now let me conclude by speaking of what is in all your hearts and thoughts tonight. It is the twenty-fifth anniversary of this school and this school-master. But sad to say it is the first commencement. There are old school boys who have been waiting twenty-five years for an occasion like this and they feel that it is high time that Leal's School had a commencement. The closing of twenty-five beautiful and successful years is a triumph in a man's life. There is nothing more than anyone can look forward to than this. And certainly there is no lack of that thing which makes the very heart of a victory, I mean, the presence of others to rejoice in it with him who wins. Some of you could speak out of twenty-five years of personal friendship and obligation while I must speak out of my briefer four years which have been enough to put me in accord with all that any old graduate might wish to say. For some of us have learned a great deal from your schoolmaster that has made life different from us without ever having sat on the literal benches of his school-room.

"I have sat with him for four years in what is called the Church session. Session is a word derived as you know from a Latin word sedeo, to sit. The session is a body therefore that sits. Sometimes they sit upon the affairs of the church. We have occasional meetings of great interest when they sit on each other and others still more piquant when they sit on the minister. And I am sure that every old school boy here will heartily join with me in saying that if we have to sit upon there is no one we would rather have to do it than Mr. Leal, he does it so Christianly. Probably each one of you has had at some time or other your private session with him about something or other and without knowing anything more about it than I do it is safe to assert that everyone of you came out of it ready to say with the Psalmist, 'Let the righteous smite it: it shall be a kindness: and let him reprove me: it shall be an excellent oil which shall not break my head.

"One fault your old pupils have to find with Mr. Leal and that is with the narrowness of your first commencement program which leaves no place for your old alumni to appear. They attribute this to the fact that you are not accustomed to such exercises and therefore do not know what is proper at such a time. Therefore they have asked me to remedy this defect and to ask you to suspend your order of exercises for a little right here that they may show that Leal's School is not simply you nor the graduating class, but a lot of others who now insist on being heard.

At this point W. Lester Glenney, a former graduate of the school, was given the opportunity to say a few pleasant words on behalf of the graduates and to compliment Mr. Leal, adding that it was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the alumni and not Mr. Leal. He then introduced former Assemblyman Edward R. Finch, of New York, who is also an alumnus of the school, and who came to Plainfield to join in the festivities.

Mr. Finch reviewed the early history of the school, relating some interesting incidents, and then announced that plans were being perfected to form an alumni association of the school graduates to perpetuate the memory and pleasant days spent at the school.

The second surprise of the evening was then disclosed when Mr. Finch on behalf of the 115 graduates presented to Mr. Leal a purse of $500 in gold, which he described as a personal gift, showing the appreciation and high esteem in which Mr. Leal is held by those who have been associated with him in the past. This announcement brought forth enthusiastic applause.

In responding Mr. Leal said that he was not in the habit of being interrupted in that way. In speaking of the school he remarked that its fruitage cannot be seen at once, that he always felt that he had the support and loyalty of the boys in school and of the people in Plainfield. It was of little consequence who secured the results so long as they were obtained. He said that he thought the graduates might have let him into the game of forming an association. He welcomed the idea. As to the purse of money he said that he had not had time to plan how it could be used in the school. "I wish to extend my strong personal thanks," said Mr. Leal. "I can say no more and I would be ashamed to say less."

After a selection by the orchestra, Thomas M. Day, president of the Plainfield Yale Club, was introduced, and he presented the handsome cup offered by the club to the pupil in the school attaining the highest standard in athletics and scholarship during the year. Similar cups will be presented to pupils at the Plainfield High and North Plainfield High Schools this week.

Mr. Day explained the purpose of the offer, it being to stimulate greater effort in study and physical development, whether a boy intended entering Yale or some other college. He also explained that in addition to these three cups the club has also in the past offered two prizes to the boys who pass the best entrance examination in the academic or scientific departments at Yale.

Mr. Day then announced the winner of this year's cup as Otis Averill, one of the five graduates. The young man received a great ovation over his success and in responding he thanked Mr. Leal and Mr. Day and hoped that the cup would prove an incentive to honest endeavor in the future.

Mr. Leal then read the names of the boys who were entitled to special mention for excellent work in the junior department. The list is as follows: Geometry—Alan Randolph; algebra second, J. C. Martin; algebra first, Lyman Campbell and W. W. Wilson; arithmetic, Clifford A. Hall; rhetoric, R. H. DePew, Jr.; English history, Lyman Hubbard; English grammar, R. H. DePew, Jr., and Clifford A. Hall; Latin lessons, Clifford A. Hall; Caesar, W. W. Wilson; Virgil, Alan Randolph. Announcement was also made that Russell Phillips was the winner of a cup presented by Mr. Leal for distinction in all around work, Edward Stevenson being a close second. The cup will be given later as it did not arrive in time for the exercises.

Following a few closing remarks by Mr. Leal, the formal program came to an end and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. During the social festivities refreshments were served. The affair was very largely attended, those present including a majority of the former graduates of the school, as well as its many friends. The class of '07 includes Francis L. Bergen, Leslie Brokaw, Ralph E. Hallock, Lawrence B. Smith and Otis Averill.

WANTED HUBBY CAPTURED.

Woman Asks Police to Nab and Tie Elderly Truant.

A woman, rather well-known in this city when she lived here because of her tendency to fly to law with family troubles, telephoned to police headquarters yesterday from her new home in Brooklyn. She wanted her husband, who is old enough to be her father, arrested and held until she could come to Plainfield. She intimated that he had run away on a trip of which she didn't approve. Acting Chief Frederickson decided that hubby was quite old enough to know what he was doing, and no hurry calls for his apprehension were sent out. If the wife wants to curb his holiday she will have to stalk and capture him herself.

It was said at police headquarters that the elderly truant was seen here several days ago. He seemed noticeably chipper and coltish as to mien. It is presumed from wifey's appeal for capture that hubby would flit to another holiday scene if he saw his wife coming with the domestic halter.

Freshmen Had a Spread.

The freshmen class of the Plainfield High School treated themselves to a spread this morning in the high school, to celebrate the conclusion of a successful year.

The cords of a window that Mrs. Rosie Blumm was lowering at her home, 452 West Second street, Monday afternoon, broke and the window came down with a rush. Mrs. Blumm made a quick grasp at the frame, miscalculated, and thrust her hand through the pane. She was so severely cut that loss of blood weakened her almost to the point of fainting before medical assistance was secured. Dr. N. W. Currie dressed her injuries.

THE RICKSHAW AND DANDY.

Primitive Modes of Travel in Hill Country of India.

In the mountain districts of India the principal vehicles of passenger conveyance are the 'rickshaw and the "dandy," with which Rudyard Kipling has made us familiar. United States Consul Gen. Michael, of Calcutta, writes thus about these vihicles: "The rickshaw is pushed and pulled through the streets and on the roads leading out into the country by four coolies, and the 'dandy' is carried on the shoulders of four and sometimes six coolies. Saddle ponies are also used to some extent but most of the inhabitants and quite all visitors used the 'rickshaw and 'dandy.' The latter is constructed on the plan of a sleigh box, but longer. A pole is attached fore and aft, which is long enough to give a springy motion when the coolies are walking and trotting. A cross-piece rests on the shoulders of the coolies and is shifted now and then from one shoulder to the other for rest. By the command of the coolie in charge this shift is made simultaneously. As a rule, both the 'rickshaws and the 'dandies' are heavier than they need to be, and they are generally lacking in finish. Yet these vehicles cost as much as light and strong ones well finished should cost. The writer would like to place alongside of the 'rickshaws and 'dandies' in use in India some samples manufactured in the United States after designs made by an American designer. The samples would attract orders."

HIS DUTY AS HE SAW IT.

Had Been Told to Carry Out the Provisions, and He Wanted Them.

The widow of a village grocer was industriously placing the large, rosy-cheeked apples on the top of the diminutive shriveled ones in the barrel when Farmer Giles entered the establishment, according to the Rochester Herald. "I want that tub o' butter," he said, "an' those hams, and that lot o' sugar, and—" The shopkeeper rubbed her hands together with delight. "Yes, sir," she beamed, "delighted to serve you, I'm sure. And what else may I supply you with?" "Well," went on Mr. Giles, "there's all them bottles of tomato sauce, and them boxes o' biscuits an'—an' all that other stuff," he concluded, vaguely, sweeping his hand around the shop. "Good gracious!" exclaimed the widow, now rather alarmed, "whatever do you want with all them goods?" "I dunno, I'm sure," was the farmer's puzzled reply, but I'm the executor of your late husband's will, an' the lawyer's just told me it's my duty to carry out the provisions. So come on, I've got three carts waitin' outside!"

The Infant Terrible.

A mother had just sought to punish her youthful son—and the son, to escape, had crawled under a bed—when a woman friend called at the apartment. "What a lovely place you have here!" the caller remarked. "So pretty—and so bright and clean. You must give more personal attention to things than I do." At this moment the small boy crawled out, scenting safety. "Say, mamma, was his greeting, "I don't get under any more beds in this house. Look at me. I guess when you sweep you never sweep under there. The dirt's an inch thick." The caller looked off into space and the mother exclaimed, enthusiastically: "Oh, let me show you my new hat, my dear!"

In Darkest Asia.

Mr. E. L. Harris, United States consul at Smyrna, makes an interesting report on conditions in Asia Minor, and in regard to electricity, says: "The city of Smyrna, with nearly 400,000 population, has no electric railway, electric light or telephone. There are cities all over Asia Minor varying in size from 20,000 to 50,000 inhabitants where there are opportunities of getting concessions for electric light and traction. It is strange for American electrical concerns to turn their backs on this field, with the excuse that nothing under a $1,000,000 concession would attract them.

Not a Reading Community.

The town of Charleroi, Pa., has a Carnegie library in which there are several thousand volumes and the town is roundly taxed to support the institution. Last year, according to a report by the librarian just made public, there was one solitary patron of the library. The librarian expressed the opinion that the people of the town were so much interested in roller skating, baseball games, bridge whist and poker that they had no time for books.

Company Breeds Appetite.

"I think the reason you can eat so little and live," said the woman who eats to the woman who doesn't, "is because you are by yourself so much. Now, I am different. I work in a room with a lot of people. They absorb my vitality to such an extent that I am hungry all the time. Regularly I eat breakfast, lunch and dinner and sometimes when I go to the theater I have a supper afterward. Yes, I suppose it is a good deal cheaper to be by yourself."

'Twas Ever Thus.

"I thought you called up information for the number," said he. "Why did you quit and ring off?" "Information had either dropped dead suddenly or gone off to dinner with a friend," she replied. "I waited and waited and waited, and all I could hear was some blooming phonograph playing away."

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an Ordinance, entitled "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield with Permanent and Durable Brick Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council to be held in the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock p. m., on Monday, the first day of July A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Seven, at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.
J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., June 10, 1907.

Somerset Street, from the northerly side line of Front Street to the bridge over Green Brook;

Watchung Avenue, from the southerly side line of East Front Street to the southerly side line of East Fourth Street, exclusive of the portion of said Watchung Avenue already provided with brick pavement;

Sec. 3. That for the purpose of obtaining money by the sale of bonds hereinafter specified for the permanent improvement of said streets and parts of streets as aforesaid, in advance of the collection of assessments for benefits, the Common Council of the city do hereby, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, authorize the issuing of forty coupon municipal bonds of the City of Plainfield, of One Thousand Dollars each, amounting in all to Forty Thousand Dollars, which bonds shall bear interest at the rate of four and one-half per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, and be payable as follows, that is to say, on the first day of September of each of the years 1910 and 1911 four bonds of $1,000 each and on the first day of September of each and every year from 1912 to 1918 both inclusive, two bonds of $1,000 each, and on the first day of September of each and every year from 1919 to 1924 both inclusive, three bonds of $1,000 each, which bonds may severally or collectively be sold for an amount not less than par value, and there shall be raised by tax in each year hereafter such sum of money as may be necessary to pay the interest on all outstanding bonds, and the principal of such bonds as may mature during that year, and the money derived from the assessments upon the property benefited shall, when collected, be held as a fund toward the payment of said bonds.

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

The river at this point was broad and of slow current, only two days' journey was needful to reach the settlement, and no cause for worry appeared—but Levi felt otherwise.

"You'd best hug the futher shore," he observed to Ray quietly when the boy pushed off, "an' don't git out o' sight o' us." "I ain't sartin 'bout the outcome o' this matter," he said to Martin later. "I know that half-breed, Bolduc, and he's a bad 'un. From the gal's story he paid big money fer her. He don't know the meanin' o' law, and if he follers down the tote road, as I callate he will, 'n' ketches sight o' her, the first we'll know on't 'll be the crack o' a rifle. The wonder to me is he didn't ketch her 'fore she got to us. He could track her faster'n she could run. I don't want to 'larm you folks, but I shan't feel easy till we're out o' the woods."

It wasn't reassuring.

But no thought of this came to Ray, at least, and these two young people, yielding to the magic of the morning, the rippled river that bore them onward, the birds singing along the fir-clad banks, and all the exhilaration of the wilderness, soon reached the care-free converse of youthful friends.

"I never had nothin' but work 'n' cussin'," Chip responded, when Ray asked if she never had any time she could call her own. "Tim thinked I couldn't get tired, I guess. He'd roust me up fust of all 'n' larrup me if he caught me shirkin'. Once I had a little posey bed back o' the pigpen. I fixed it after dark an' mornin's when I ketched the chance. He ketched me thar one mornin' a-weedin' it 'n' knocked me sprawlin' an' then stomped all over the posies. That night I went out into the woods 'n' begged the spites to git him killed somehow. 'Nother time I forgot to put up the bars, an' the cows got into the taters. That night he tied me to a stump clus to the bars, an' left me thar all night. I used to be more skeered o' my dad 'n I was o' Tim, tho'. He'd look at me like he hated me, an' say, 'Shut up,' if I said a word, an' I 'most believed he'd kill me, just fer nothin'. Once he said he'd take me out into the woods at night 'n' bait a bear trap with me if he heerd I didn't mind Tim. I told Old Tomah that, an' he sid if he did, he'd shoot him; but Old Tomah wasn't round only winters. I hated dad so I'd 'a' shot him myself, I guess, if I cud 'a' got hold o' a gun when he wa'n't watchin'."

"It's awful to have to feel that way toward your own father," interrupted Ray, "for he was your father."

"I s'pose 'twas," admitted Chip, candidly, "but I never felt much different. I've seen him slap mother when she was on her knees a-bawlin', and' the way he would cuss her was awful."

"But you had some friendship from this old Indian," queried Ray, who began to realize what a pitiful life the girl had led; "he was good to you, wasn't he?"

"He was, sartin," returned Chip, eagerly; "he used to tell me the spites 'ud fix dad 'fore long, so he'd never show up agin, 'n' when I got big 'nuff he'd sneak me off some night 'n' take me to the settlement, whar I could arn a livin'. Old Tomah was the only one who cared a cuss fer me. I used to bawl when he went away every spring, an' beg him to take me 'long 'n' help him camp 'n' cook. I'd 'a' done 'most anything fer Old Tomah. I didn't mind wearin' clothes made out o' old duds 'n' bein' cussed fer not workin' hard 'nuff. What I did mind was not havin' nobody who cared whether I lived or died, or said a good word to me. Sometimes I got so lonesome, I used to go out in the woods nights when 'twas moonlight 'n' beg the spites to help me. I used to think mother might be one on 'em 'n' she'd keer fer me. I think she was, an' 'twas her as kept me goin' till I found you folks' camp. I got awful skeered them nights I was runnin' away, an' when 'twas so dark I couldn't see no more, an' heerd wildcats yowlin', I'd git on my knees 'n' beg mother to keep 'em away. I think she did, an' allus shall."

A more serious subject was under discussion in the other canoe, meantime, as to the future disposition of Chip herself.

"I feel it my duty to take care of her," Angie said, after relating her conversation with Chip and that morning's incident. "She is a homeless, outcast waif, needing education and everything else to Christianize her. We must bring her to the settlement, but to turn her adrift might mean leaving her to a life of vice, even if she escapes her brutal father and this worse half-breed. Then, again, I am not sure that her parentage will bear inspection. She has told me something about her earlier life, and about her mother, who evidently loved her. One course only seems plain to me,—to take care of and educate this unfortunate."

"We must take the girl back with us and begin her reformation at the camp. If she shows any aptitude and willingness to obey, we will take her to Greenvale. If not, you must arrange to get her into some institution."

"And suppose the half-breed finds where she is, what then?" inquired Martin.

"What do you say, Levi?" he added, turning to his guide, "you know this fellow; what will he be apt to do?"

"I s'pose you know what a panther'll do, robbed of her cub," Levi answered, "an' how a bull moose acts in runnin' time, mebbe. Wal, this Pete is worse'n both on 'em biled into one, I callate. If you're goin' ter take the gal back, you've got to keep her shady, or some day you'll find her missin'. Besides, Pete, ez I told ye, don't know the meanin' o' law and is handy with a gun."

But Martin did not quite share Levi's fears, and so Angie's decision was agreed to. Levi's advice to "keep shady" was accepted, however, and all through that summer's somewhat thrilling experiences it was the rule of conduct.

When supper was over came the lounging beside the cheerful fire, and as the shadows thickened, forth came Ray's banjo once more, and with it the light of admiration in Chip's eyes.

All that day he had been her charming companion; his open, manly face, his bright brown eyes, had been ever before her. His well-bred ways, so unlike all the men at Tim's Place, had impressed her as those of a youth of 18 will a maid of 16; and now, with his voice appealing to the best in her, he seemed like Pan of old, once more wooing a nymph with his pipes.

No knowledge of this was hers, no conciousness of why she was happy came to her. She knew what spites were; but the god Pan and Apollo with his harp were unknown forms.

Neither did she realize that born in her soul that day, on the broad shining river, was a magic impulse woven out of her heart throbs, and destined to mete out to her more sorrow than all else in her life combined.

She had entered the wondrous vale of love whose paths are flower-strewn, whose shores are rippled with laughter, and whose borders, alas! are ever hid in the midst of tears.

CHAPTER IV.

A week was spent by Martin and his party at the settlement, during which he acquired the title to township 44, range 10, which included the little lake near the hermit's hut, and made a four-square-mile tract about it.

Chip, thanks to Angie, secured a simple outfit of apparel and—surprising fact—evinced excellent taste in its selection, thereby proving that eight years of isolation and a gunny-sack and red-shirt garb had not obliterated the deepest instinct of woman.

To Levi, Martin's woodwise helper, was left the selection of fittings for the new camp. A couple of husky Canucks were engaged to bring them in in a bateau, and then the party started on its return.

Only one incident of importance occurred during the wait at this village known as Grindstone. Angie and Chip had just left the only store there, in front of which a group of log-drivers had congregated, when Angie, glancing back, saw that one of the group was following them. She quickened her pace, and so did he, until just as they turned into a side street, he passed them, halted, and turned about.

"Wal, I'm damned if tain't Chip, an' dressed like a leddy," he exclaimed, as they drew near.

"Hullo, Chip," he added, as they passed, "when did you strike luck?"

Chip made no response and he muttered again, "Wal, I'm damned, jest like a leddy!"

It was annoying, especially to Angie, and neither of the two realized how soon this blunt log-driver's discovery would reach Tim's Place.

And now, leaving the bateau to follow, the party started once more on their journey into the wilderness. No sight or sign of pursuit from the half-breed had been thus far observed. A few idle lumbermen in the village—the only visible connection between the vast forest and a busy world—were little thought of, as their canoes crept slowly up the narrowing river and gave no hint of interference from this slow brute to anyone except Levi.

He, however, seldom speaking, but ever acting, kept watch and ward continually. At every bend of the stream his eyes were alert to catch the first sight of a down-coming canoe in time to conceal Chip, as he decided must be done. When night camps were made, a site at the head of the lagoon or up some tributary stream was selected, and while not even hinting his reason for this, he felt it wise. As they drew near to Tim's Place, it began to occur to Martin that Chip's presence had best be concealed until that point was passed. He also desired to learn the situation there. He had always halted at this clearing in all his up-river journeys, so far, usually to buy pork and potatoes, and he now intended to do so again. He also felt it imperative to conceal Chip in Ray's canoe, before they reached Tim's Place, and let Ray paddle slowly on while the halt was made. But Levi dissented.

"Tain't best," he said, "to let Tim know there's two canoes of us and one not stoppin'. It'll make him s'picious o' suthin', 'n' what he 'spects, Pete'll find out. I callate we'd best pass thar in the night, leave the wimmen above, 'n' you 'n' I go back 'n' git what we [illegible]

TWO BILLION NEW TREES.

Pittsburg Agitates Scheme to Prevent Recurrence of Floods.

Pittsburg, June 19.—Under the direction of the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce, a movement is on foot here to have the city, state and national government take up the formidable task of relieving Western Pennsylvania, especially this city, of the annual inundations from the rivers in this neighborhood.

The great flood of March this year has aroused lively interest in the project. The plan of the chamber is to plant trees on the watersheds at the head waters, and rear immense forests which will utilize large quantities of moisture and prevent sudden thaws of vast areas of snow. Millions of dollars will be required to carry out the work, and a campaign will be begun to arouse interest and obtain the necessary funds. Unofficially, it is announced by specialists on rivers that at least 2,000,000,000 trees must be planted. The scheme entails an immense amount of labor, and even then will not accomplish any material good for at least fifteen years, according to the experts. The combined basins of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers cover nearly 20,000 square miles in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Western New York and Maryland.

During the last session of Congress $25,000 was appropriated to make the initial experiment, under the auspices of the forestry bureau. Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture has commissioned William L. Hall, in charge of the Appalachian Mountain Forest Reserve, to investigate the matter and report on the feasibility of the experiment.

Magnate's Daughter.

"Your father's wealth," said he,
"As great as it may be,
Serves not to lend to you
A single charm! The blue
Of your deep, soulful eyes,
The rosy tinge that lies
Upon your cheeks; the rare,
Soft richness of your hair,
Your wondrous, matchless grace;
The beauty of your face—
For these rich charms alone
I'd claim you as my own.
As high as he may be,
Your father's wealth has not
A single charm for me.
If it had been your lot,
To have to toil, I vow,
As I love you now,
I'd love you still. His gold
Adds nothing to your charms,
Though he were poor, I'd fold
You gladly in my arms—
Aye, were he plunged in shame,
I still would kneel to claim
The love that I implore,
And ask for nothing more.

The maiden heaved a sigh
And pondered for awhile,
And then, disdaining guile,
Vouchsafed this sane reply:
"You're dotty, or you lie."

MRS. ACKERMAN'S FUNERAL.

Simple Service Conducted in First Presbyterian Church.

The funeral of Mrs. Lydia P. Ackerman, widow of Warren Ackerman, who died on Sunday at her home, "Lyde Park," Scotch Plains, was held this morning at 11.15 o'clock from the First Presbyterian church, of which she was a member for many years. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, a former pastor, and now of Freeport, L. I., conducted a very simple service.

During the service there were two selections, "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me," and "Abide With Me," by Miss Anna Case, soprano; Miss Jasamine Burd, contralto; Elmer D. Cutting, tenor, and William N. Runyon, bass.

There was a very large number of very beautiful floral tributes from relatives, friends and neighbors, the casket being almost hidden from view by them. The remains were placed in the family mausoleum at Hillside cemetery.

DEPUTY SHERIFF RESIGNS.

Somerset Official, Convicted on Jury Tampering Charge, Quits His Position.

Somerville, June 19.—John J. Anderson last night handed in his resignation as deputy sheriff of Somerset county to Sheriff Cooper. The resignation was accepted by Sheriff Cooper and Anderson will soon retire as keeper of the Somerset County Jail, a position which he has held for six years.

Deputy Sheriff Anderson was recently convicted on a charge of tampering with a jury in the interest of William H. Skillman, former president of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, charged with forgery. He was sentenced by Judge Theodore Booraem to pay a fine of $500 and to serve thirty days in the jail of which he was formerly keeper. He is now out on bail pending appeal from Judge Booraem's sentence.

TO FIGHT FOR CIVIL SERVICE.

Philadelphia Association Elects Local Man to Watch City Hall.

In preparation for its crusade against violation of Municipal Civil Service regulations in City Hall, the Civil Service Reform Association, of Philadelphia, induced into office yesterday a new secretary, who will give all his time to the work. Robert D. Jenks, who held the office before in addition to carrying on his own law practice, will now act as counsel to the Association. The new secretary is Fullerton L. Waldo, of this city.

The selection of a man from out of town, it is announced, was because the association wanted a stranger to the conditions in Philadelphia and one who could have no possible sympathy one way or the other. The new secretary is a graduate of Harvard University, class '98. He has spent some time in Panama investigating the conditions under which the diggers of the canal work, and has written his results for magazines.

AFTERNOON WEDDING IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

Ceremony United Miss Mary Wearren and John Flynn, Both of This City.

Miss May Wearren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wearren, of Rock avenue, and John Flynn, of Clinton avenue, were married this afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Mary's church in the present of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Father Bogan, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine, trimmed with lace and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by Miss Anna Flynn, sister of the groom, who wore a gown of pink silk and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The best man was Patrick Wearren, brother of the groom.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents and later the couple left for Washington to spend their honeymoon. The bride received many handsome gifts. The groom is employed as a foreman at the Manganese Steel Safe Works and both he and his wife are popular in a large circle of friends. Among the guests was John Wearren, a brother of the bride, who is a plumber on the Battleship Kansas, which was put in commission on April 18.

DAINTY CUSHIONS.

Linen pincushions for summer use will be greater favorites this year than they were last, for they are made in such practical but artistic designs that they will be equally serviceable on an elaborately appointed dressing table or on a plain bureau. Another advantage these cushions have over the ordinary silk, satin, etc. varieties is that they may be washed when soiled and after a tubbing will look just as fresh as when new.

Fortunately for women whose incomes are limited these decorative and useful cushions are quite easy to make at home.

The round one is, of course, simpler to make than the oblong cushion, for the former consists of a linen bottom and one flounce that extends two or three inches beyond the top. The circular ruffle is stoutly sewed to a round bag filled with sawdust, cotton or whatever filling is desired.

The top of the cushion is also round, with dainty featherstitching on the edge as a finish. This upper portion is held in place around the filling and attached to the bottom by a ribbon draw string tied in a double bowknot. Directly in the centre of the top an embroidery wreath could be worked in any floral device that would be in harmony with other decorations in the bedroom. Wild roses, forget-me-nots, poppies, pansies, sweet peas are blossoms that look attractive on white linen, and if done in silk of their natural colors are decidedly effective.

Rest From Food Demonstration.

Miss Frances Clarkson, of East Second street, has returned home after a six months' trip through the West and South with a demonstrating force employed by a breakfast food company. She will make a round of the summer resorts next month and August, engaged in the same work.

GRAMMAR GRADUATION

Fifty-eight Young People Receive Coveted Diplomas from School Board Head.

DR. CHAMBLISS SPEAKS

Before a large audience of parents, friends and school children, the graduation exercises of the Plainfield grammar schools were held yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the High School. Fifty-eight earnest and triumphant young people received diplomas to mark the completion of the last step that divided them from the highest rungs of the educational ladder. The girls, massed on the platform, made a pretty picture in their white gowns, and the boys, seated together, facing the audience from the front seats on the floor, made a no less interesting picture.

The exercises opened at 3 o'clock with an invocation by Rev. George A. Warner, of Holy Cross church. Next came a chorus by the graduates, "Lovely Appear," then an essay, "Colonial Days In Old Virginia," by Anne Ramsay Johnston; "The Yeoman's Wedding Song," another chorus by the class, followed, which was followed in turn by a recitation, "The Search for Happiness," by Dorothy Shreve Merrill. After splendidly executed cornet solos by Percy Mygrant, accompanied by Miss S. Louise Mygrant, an essay, "From Indian Trail to Modern Transit," was read by Maud Kathryn Sminck. The girls sang "The Blue Waltz" and "To April," and then came the address of the day, by Rev. Dr. John H. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church.

Dr. Chambliss, with his usual grace of manner and diction, commanded the instant attention of the young people, and held it closely throughout. His theme was "Foundation Building." Taking the care with which the contractors are making the foundation for the great Singer building as a text, he pointed out how important it was to get the basic things right. Laying foundations was the work in which principals and teachers were engaged, but their responsibility only went part way. The rest of it was the pupils'.

The latter were the foundation builders of their own lives. Others might help, but after all, it was their own work. Among the things the young people needed in their foundation building were a sense of responsibility and the habit of overcoming difficulties courageously. As to responsibility, it was to be said that there was no such thing as an irresponsible age, except for babies. Young people could not look forward on entering into life, because they had already entered upon it. Conscience, honor, integrity, all were as much a part of young people's lives as of their elders', and they were responsible.

In closing Dr. Chambliss made a strong plea for the cultivation of good habits. Life, he said, was largely a bundle of habits, and those who gave themselves over to bad ones would find themselves in the position of one chained to a rock in the sea with the tide rising steadily to overwhelm them.

"Damonen Tanz," a piano solo, by James Simpson Vail, followed the address. Then Superintendent Henry M. Maxson made his customary address to the graduates, complimenting them on the success of their school year, and urging them to high ideals as they go onward. "The call to Arms," a chorus by the class, preceded the presentation of the diplomas.

Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the School Board, who presided over the exercises, made the presentations. Following the distribution of the diplomas, the exercises closed with a general chorus of "America," the audience standing.

POPULAR NEW MARKET GIRL BECOMES BRIDE

MISS ESTELLE MAY SOFIELD WEDDED TO WILLIAM HENRY TABB.

Miss Estelle May Sofield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Sofield, and William Henry Tabb, son of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Tabb, were married at the home of the bride in New Market, last night. A large gathering of friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony. The house was prettily decorated with potted plants and flowers, green and white being the prevailing tones.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Fletcher, former pastor of the New Market Baptist church, at 8 o'clock. The words were spoken beneath an arch of spring flowers. The Tannhauser wedding march was played by Mrs. Charles Day, on the violin, as the wedding party approached the minister.

The best man was Franklin B. Sofield, of Port Richmond, S. I., cousin of the bride, and Miss Iva Dayton, of Piscataway, was maid of honor. The Misses Alice Apgar, Ethel Garretson and Lilian Fedderman, of Dunellen, and Mrs. Frank Quaas, of Plainfield, were ribbon girls.

The bride was dressed in point lace over silk batiste and carried white bride roses. Miss Dayton's dress was silk mull with lace trimmings; she carried carnations.

A reception followed the ceremony. The wedding cake served at it was baked by the fair hands of the bride. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Tabb left on a honeymoon trip. They will live at Port Richmond, S. I., where the groom is employed by the American Linseed Company.

A quilt made by Mrs. J. T. F. Adams, of this city, an 80-year-old aunt of the bride's father, was among the gifts. There was a large array of usual wedding gifts, including china, cut glass, silver, and furniture. The bride's gifts to the maid of honor and ribbon girls were hat pins. The groom gave the best man a silver cigarette box, with his initials engraved on it.

GOOD NATURED "ROASTS" FOR N. P. H. S. SENIORS

NO ONE ESCAPED AT THE CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

The class day exercises were held at the North Plainfield High School, last night, and like all previous affairs of this kind, it was a great success and largely attended by the members of the school and their parents. There were the usual good natured "roasts" for the members of the graduating class, the proverbial class history, prophecy, interspersed with music and the presentation of the epitaph on Shakespeare's tomb, handsomely framed, to the school by Miss Edith GaNun, on behalf of the class.

The program opened with a musical selection, "Medley," by the class. Miss Florence Smalley read the class history, and Miss Lavinia Hand gave a history of the class historian, which all enjoyed because of the personal "hits." "What's the Use," was the subject of a recitation by Miss Elsa Schwed. The class prophecy was presented by Miss Lavinia Hand, while Miss Florence Smalley gave a prophecy of the class prophet. Part one of the program concluded with a song by the class.

Miss Ethel Most read the class will, in which everything belonging to the class was generously distributed to the incoming seniors. A vocal solo, "My Dreams," by Miss Hazel Walter and a recitation, "Advice to Juniors," by Miss Myra Emmons, preceded the reading of the class poem by Miss Edith GaNun. There was the usual presentation of gifts, all of an amusing character and which caused no end of fun. Miss Aimee Emmons gave a recitation, and was obliged to respond to an encore, when she recited "Her Graduating Day." The exercises closed with a parting song. The music was under the direction of Stanley Lloyd, music teacher at the school.

The commencement exercises will be held tomorrow night at the Y. M. C. A., when Prof. Francis H. Green, of the State Normal School at Westchester, Pa., will make the address of the evening and the usual awards will be announced.

SIGNS OF A DEADLOCK

Republican Senate and Democratic Assembly at Odds About Legislation.

THE PROBE AN ISSUE.

The State Department Investigating Body Is One of the Bones of Contention.

The Democrats of the Legislature decided yesterday afternoon on a plan of action while the session lasts. The Steering Committee, which is evenly divided politically, tried in vain to agree as to the course to be followed for the remainder of the term. It is the desire of the Republicans controlling the Senate to get away as soon as possible, while the Democratic Assembly desires to consider new measures.

The Republicans want to make the present Democratic investigating committee, which has been probing into State affairs, a joint committee, with the number of Republican members equal to that of the Democratic representation. In addition the Republicans desire that Attorney-General R. H. McCarter act as counsel. To this the Democrats of the Conference Committee will not agree.

In the first place they want the Investigating Committee to go on as at present constituted, a partisian lawyer as counsel. They will not have any joint committee.

The Democratic members of the Conference Committee say that if the Republicans insist on new legislation along the recommendations of Gov. Stokes, then they will insist on putting in the following bills: A Public Utilities measure, similar to the New York law; a bill to abolish the State Board of Arbitration, a corrupt practices act, a measure to give the people the expression of choice in the selection of United States Senators, two amendments to the Railroad Commission act by providing Democratic minority representation on he commission and empowering the commission to fix all rates; to impeach State Banking and Insurance Commissioner David O. Watkins for malfeasance in office, in that they charge him with taking moneys from a bank in which interest was allowed the State and putting it in a bank in which he was personally interested and where the State gets no interest; a single-headed Fish and Game Commission and a single-headed Oyster Commission.

It is likely the Republicans will endeavor to counteract the effect of the Democratic investigation by authorizing a probing of Democratic counties where political corruption is alleged to exist.

The Senate in executive session received the following nominations from Gov. Stokes: Commissioners under the Railroad Commission act—Joseph W. Congdon, Paterson, six years; Edmund Wilson, Red Bank, four years; Borden D. Whiting, Newark, two years; Board of Medical Examiners, William P. Watson, Jersey City (reappointed); State Board of Education, Dr. Leslie C. Love, of Montclair, succeeding Everett Colby; Board of Managers of the Tuberculosis Sanitarium, John E. Heck, Somerville; succeeding Dr. Charles J. Kipp; Chester N. Jones, Summit, succeeding Dr. Austin Scott. John C. Slate was nominated a member of the Atlantic County Tax Board.

The Senate yesterday sent a challenge to the Assembly to play a game of baseball for a Trenton charity. The game will be platey at Trenton today. Governor Stokes has consented to act as umpire.

Following the Democratic probe Committee's majority report the Republican minorty members made public their report today. They take issue with the statement of the majority that extravagance and indifference exist in State offices, and while agreeing with some of the majority's recommendations the minority declares the majority's deductions are unfair and not according to the evidence.

Work on Sebring Building Resumed.

The mason work on the Sebring building on West Front street, will be resumed on Monday morning after a tie-up of four weeks, caused by a misunderstanding between the members of the Bricklayers' and Masons' International Union. The local union has instructed the mason contractor, John Smalley, of Bound Brook, to proceed with the brick work on Monday, and the building will now be completed at the earliest possible date.

BOROUGH GROCER FINED FOR SELLING BUTTERINE

FLEMING'S DEFENSE FAILS IN JUSTICE MUNDY'S COURT; WILL APPEAL.

With the faulty complaint that necessitated a discontinuance of the former action corrected, the State Board of Health pressed its case against Robert Fleming, the Somerset street grocer charged with selling butterine illegally, to a successful conclusion yesterday afternoon. Fleming was fined $100 by Justice S. C. Mundy.

It was charged, as in the two cases on this side of the brook, that the grocer sold the stuff without the warning as to its character required by the law. The sale was made on April 9, to George McGuire, head inspector for the State Board. Fleming's defense was that the oleo was marked by a printed wrapper. The State, represented by Josiah Stryker, submitted testimony to prove that the wrapper was covered, and that, further, the warning was in the name of the former owner of the store, which, in itself, it was held, was an infraction of the law. The statute requires the actual owner of the shop to put his name on the package.

S. S. Swackhamer appeared for the defense. He said after the trial that the case would be appealed.

RECEPTION AND SUPPER TO CARNIVAL WORKERS

HELD BY KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS AT THE CASINO LAST NIGHT.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, tendered an entertainment and supper to the committees and all those who assisted in making the recent carnival a success. The affair was held at the Casino, and more than 250 guests enjoyed it.

There was an unusually good program of entertainment. The entertainers were all professionals, including Billy Redmond, the singer; Gallando, rapid-fire modeller; Al. Woodruff, monologist; and Seltzer Waters, the funny man. It was a high-grade vaudeville bill in every particular, and won much applause. The entertainment was followed by a supper. The menu was a delightful one, perfectly prepared and served by Mrs. Henry Johnson.

A dance followed the supper. The members of the carnival executive committee and auxiliary committees made up the committee in charge. Theodore Shirley was head of it.

TWO NEW INDUSTRIES FOR THE EAST END

WORK COMMENCED ON CONSTRUCTION OF FACTORY BUILDINGS.

Work has been started on the erection of thefirst of several buildings to be built on North avenue, adjoining the Vacuum Cleaning Company plant, for the manufacture of rubber goods of all kinds. William J. Courtney, of Wall street, New York, is the proprietor of the concern. Dodge & Morrison, of New York, are the architects; Titus Laury the mason and William Grier, of White Plains, N. Y., the carpenter.

The building will be 40x74 feet, one story, sixteen feet high. The other buildings proposed will be erected on the same lines. The concern will employ chiefly skilled labor and business will be conducted on an extensive scale.

Another important industry soon to be located in the East End of the city, is that of the Manufacturers' Brass Company, where all kinds of brass fixtures and fittings will be made. The company will erect its building on Berckman street, near the railroad, and will be 40x79 feet, one story in height. The Lewis Parker Building and Construction Company, of Newark, has the contract for the work. George W. V. Moy, of this city, is president of the company, and F. A. Pope also of this city, is secretary of the concern.

Escaped Exile to Speak.

A Russian revolutionist will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting July 7. His name was not known at the Y. M. C. A. office this morning, but he was described as an escaped Siberian prisoner. He will tell his experiences.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE DESTROYS COMMERCIAL MILLS

TOTAL LOSS $25,000

Entire City Department Works Eight Hours Before Recall Is Sounded—Insurance Only $7,000.

The Commercial Mills on South Second street, owned and operated by A. L. Cadmus for the past quarter of a century and one of the oldest industries in the city, was totally destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning. The loss to Mr. Cadmus will reach $25,000, with an insurance of about $7,000 on building and contents. V. W. Nash, Sr., and L. A. Rheaume, dealers in coal, who occupied room for their coal yards close to the mills in sheds owned by Mr. Cadmus, suffered minor losses. All of the horses owned by Mr. Cadmus, Mr. Nash and Mr. Rheaume and which were stabled on the property, together with wagons were rescued before the fire reached the buildings.

How the fire started and what caused it is a mystery. It was exactly 3:01 o'clock this morning when Daniel Guinee, of the Public Service Corporation, notified fire headquarters by telephone that the mills were on fire. Some say that the blaze started in the sheds in the yard nearest to the Potter Press Works, while others say that it looked as though the blaze first came from a point near the engine room. However, when the fire department arrived the mill proper and the adjoining frame structures were ablaze and burning briskly. There was some trouble with the fire alarm and only two blows from the whistle sounded at first. The whole town was awakened a few minutes later when the whistle on a passing Jersey Central engine screeched furiously. By that time the entire city fire department was at the scene of the fire and six streams of water were pouring into the burning buildings from all sides.

Some delay was caused in starting up the steamer because it had to leave headquarters with cold water in the boiler, there being only a call engineer, Louis Feiring, on duty, and he did not learn of the fire until later in the morning. Charles Smith and John Kline were pressed into service. But no time was lost in connecting with the hydrants in the vicinity. Two lines of hose were stretched across the railroad tracks, and later put under them to allow trains to get by, while the remaining four lines were attached to hydrants on the southside of the railroad.

Soon after arriving at the fire Chief Doane had box 45 pulled to bring out the call men, and nearly everyone responded. Upon the arrival of the department every effort was directed toward confining the fire to its exact locality, and word was sent to nearby residents to keep their windows and doors closed.

Although the sheds about the mill have been on fire many times, this is the first that the mill itself has been affected. It is a three-story brick structure, and surrounding it is a kindling wood plant beneath a frame shed. The mill was heavily stocked with grain, oats, hay and straw, only a few days ago two carloads of flour and two carloads of oats, representing an outlay of about $4,000, being placed there. The fire having plenty of material to work on rapidly worked its way through the entire structure. The illumination was so bright that it could be seen a distance of many miles. All of the properties in the nearby vicinity were closely watched to prevent a spreading of the flames.

The firemen performed heroic service and had the fire under control soon after reaching the scene. Close to the mill stands a large frame building covered with corrugated iron, and it was here that the horses and wagons were kept. Streams of water were frequently put on this structure and it was saved from any damage. Some of the horses escaped and ran wild through the West End until finally captured.

The firemen found it extremely difficult to extinguish the fire in the large quantities of hay and straw and it was not until 11:20 o'clock this morning that Chief Doane officially declared the fire out and the recall was sounded.

Mr. Cadmus has not yet decided on his plans for the future and he cannot tell whether he will rebuild or not, but in case he decides to do

FAREWELL ADDRESS TO P. H. S. GRADUATES

SUPT. MAXSON TELLS THEM TO SEEK RATIONAL HAPPINESS.

Superintendent Henry M. Maxson made his farewell address to the Senior class of the Plainfield High School at the morning assembly today. Mr. Maxson said that although he had not had the opportunity to come in personal contact with the members of the class as much as Principal Travell, he had been watching them throughout the year. They had been a good, successful class, he said. They had met their responsibilities and, above all, had been preeminently happy. This ability for mingling happiness with good work, Dr. Maxson said, contributed greatly to the success of the class. He said there would always and ever be around them an occasion of happiness.

Speaking of happiness, Dr. Maxson said it did not depend on wealth, power, health, or presence of friends. Happiness depended on character and outlook on life "so fill your mind with pleasant memories," he advised. Have simple tastes, take joy in the little things of life, and in the happiness of others. Preserve your faith in your fellow men. Have courage—don't be a weakling. Serve your fellow men; the surest way of obtaining happiness for yourself is by making happiness for others."

Dr. Maxson concluded by caying that the class has been of great enjoyment to him, and that he is satisfied with its efforts and results.

The commencement exercises will be held at the First Baptist Church tonight. The winners of the scholastic prizes will be announced, and the rewards distributed. Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, of the North Reformed church, Newark, will be the spaker of the occasion.

Under the auspices of the Silver Cross Circle, King's Daughters, a charming luncheon and sale of candy and useful articles was held at the Park Club, yesterday afternoon, to replenish the fund which goes toward the support of the city nurse. The affair was largely attended, in addition to the seventy-five persons being at the luncheon, there were many others who dropped in during the afternoon to patronize the sale. The decorations consisted chiefly of daisies, this flower being used in profusion about the hall and on the numerous small tables.

The luncheon was arranged by the entertainment committee of the circle, consisting of Miss Helen Phillips, Mrs. H. E. Butler, Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver, Miss Marion McCutcheon, Miss Margaret McCutchen and Mrs. A. M. Abbott. Miss Margaret Long and Mrs. George Worth presided at the cake table and Mrs. H. C. DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Clark T. Rogers had an odd adventure with a turkey, last week. He found the bird setting on some eggs in a field and allowed her to nest there. After the proper time he went out to see if there was any sign of young turkeys. The old bird was apparently still hatching, and Mr. Rogers stooped over to pick up what appeared to be an odd stone beside her. The stone proved to be a young turkey, and as Mr. Rogers bent over it the mother bird made an excited attack on him. One of her beating wings struck him a hard blow across the side of the head, and dazed him. It was several seconds before he recovered himself and he had quite a tussle beating the enraged turkey off.

TO REMOVE WALLPAPER.

Provide yourself with a pail of soft lukewarm water and several large, clean sponges, and soak off the paper by dabbing it, a small space at a time, until it is wet through, and may be peeled off in strips. Then wash the exposed wall with warm suds to get off the clinging paste. Finally, rub dry.—Chicago Housewife.

THE PASSING SHOW.

The United States is advancing so rapidly in the production of iron that it promises soon to lead all the rest of the world combined. In 1905, the latest year for which complete figures were available, the following were the respective quantities for those countries whose annual production exceeds 1,000,000 tons: United States, 22,992,380 tons; Germany, 10,987,823 tons; England, 9,592,737 tons; France, 3,076,550 tons; Russia, 2,765,000 tons; Austria-Hungary, 1,514,840 tons; Belgium, 1,310,290 tons. Sweden, which is celebrated for the quality of iron, produced only 527,300 tons.

B. P. Cheney, of Boston; J. P. Morgan and other New Yorkers are members of the Wootten Land Company, which has just bought an immense tract of land on the Colorado-New Mexico line for a game preserve and hunting park. The tract will be at once enclosed with a barbed wire fence which will hold deer, bear and other wild game, number of which are roaming through it. More game will be added.

A German scientist has declared that every metal has its characteristic odor. Not every one can detect the odor of cold tin, copper or aluminum, but when pieces of such metal are heated to a moderate degree they give off strong smells, distinguishable by anybody. At higher temperatures metals lose all trace of a smell, but again give off an odor on being heated after a lapse of several hours in a cold state.

There are 200 dukes, 900 marquises and thousands of counts in Spain, according to a recent account. Legitimate Spanish, or, better, aristocracy, is called the grandezza, in English the grandees. It was instituted by Emperor Charles V. in 1520, so that Spain could be just like other countries in one respect.

If your dwelling is electrically lighted never place wood, clothes, or other inflammable material against the wires, meters or switches; never use an electric wire as a clothesline, and see to it that your dwelling is kept free from rats, as these pests often gnaw the insulation from the wires.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

Dainty and very becoming are the colored fabrics for children, and especially is this true of the neat checked dress goods. The prettiest wash materials are very reasonables in price, and the patterns this year so simple and becoming that these little frocks are very easily made. The zephyr ginghams are so attractive with their neat checked colors, and this material is very pretty fashioned in the long one-piece dresses which are pleated from the shoulders to the waist line, where a belt gives shape to the loose garment. It can be fashioned in a variety of styles by making lace or embroidery yokes, long or short sleeves, and by the arrangement of caps over the shoulders.

The finest white dresses are fashioned of deep French embroidery. Waists, skirts and sleeves are cut from embroidery widths and this is very neat, since garments do not need to be hemmed on the skirts, yokes or sleeves, the notches forming beautiful edges. The corset cover embroidery of fine pattern is frequently used for party dresses where ribbon is run through the eyelets. But the plainer fabrics are more in favor. The neatest dresses are those which are made from hemstitched handkerchief linen, a tiny embroidery design being woven in the fabric above the deep hem for a trimming. It is exceptionally beautiful and so sheer that pretty skirts are very noticeable beneath.

Fancy shaded plaids are all the rage for young girls, and they are made in blouse effect with colored collars, cuffs and belts. It is a serviceable school dress and can safely be laundered.

White jackets for children are made of white corduroy, pique and linens. While very simple, these little affairs are really very expensive, but at the same time cheap if made at home. They are trimmed with gold od brass buttons.

PLANTS AND FLOWERS.

Redeem your back garden by growing shrubbery to hide the ugly fences. Try hydangeas along the fence, with perennials before them. In city yards it is hard to make anything grow along the fences. Honeysuckle and hardy althea bushes and the tough ailanthus trees seem to withstand the hard conditions beseting vegetation in the average city yard. In towns and suburb there is more sweep of air, fewer very high board fences and wider lots.

Clothe your poles that are used on wash days with vines and put long artistic hooks out to hold the lines away from them; or have an arbor and hang the clothes parallel to it from hooks on projecting arms and do away with separate posts, running lines across the yard for the large pieces that would swing against the arbor in the wind, such as sheets. Any way, it is better to send your sheets to the laundry or a washerwoman for a trifle and have the foliage than to value bedclothes above a pretty back yard. Clematis and honeysuckle are nice for posts and arbors.

Willard Wadsworth, of West Eighth street, will sail for Europe early in July to join his parents who have been travelling abroad.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

Roger Bresnahan, the crack catcher for the Giants, who was knocked insensible by a pitched ball on Tuesday, is recovering and it is expected will be able to play soon.

The game at Crescent Oval Saturday between Clinton Avenue and Y. M. C. A. should be one of the best of the season. Both teams are now in the best of condition and the contest should be close.

Minford should have no trouble in putting them over Saturday if Walter Nelson is there to catch him, and Randolph will probably show a varied assortment of puzzling curves to fool the association boys.

Dunellen will journey to Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon and make a big effort to stop the 'Plains team in its race for the pennant. It is probable that Jack Peacock will pitch for Dunellen, and if he does it will make it interesting for the 'Plains.

"Rube" Oldring, who is playing a field position for the Philadelphia Athletics, is hitting the ball pretty hard these days and helping to win games.

The position which the Newarks hold in the second division is not likely to be improved very much for the present, judging by the kind of ball the leaders are playing.

There is a strong probability that the Elizabeth Atlantic League team will be transferred to Paterson soon. It will take at least $5,000 to put the grounds in shape at Paterson and it is now being planned to play the first game there a week from Sunday with Newark. The transfer is nothing more than was expected sometime ago. Under the present circumstances it is a surprise that the team has staid so long in Elizabeth.

Reading still leads in the Atlantic League pennant chase with twenty-four victories and ten defeats. Allentown is second with twenty victories and twelve defeats, and Brooklyn holds a close third with twenty victories and fourteen defeats. Easton is in last position with eight victories and twenty-four defeats.

GOLF.

Aleck Smith, the American open golf champion, in the first round of the qualifying stage for the British championship at Hoylake Tuesday did the course in 79. The leading score was that of Alexander Herd, 71, which equals the record for the course. Smith did the second round in 79, making a total of 158 for the day. Massey, the French champion, led with a total of 147 in this round.

Mixed foursomes, the first of the season, will be included among the events at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday and it should attract a large field.

Thus far this season the Plainfield Country Club has had unprecedented success with its fine attractive schedule. In addition to the open tournament, there have been a number of strong attractions for the members and their friends. The same can also be said of the tennis events at the club.

There will be continuation of play for the June cup at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday. This course is now one of the most popular in the Metropolitan district, especially on Sunday.

The Park Golf Club course is more popular than ever this season and a number of the members find time to visit there during the week and play the game, as well as take part in the Saturday competitions.

Frank O. Reinhart's best net score of 70 in the open tournament showed that this popular member of the club has not forgotten any of the fine points of the game. It was a rather peculiar coincident that he should make the best net score and tie with Findlay Douglass for the best gross score of 73. Although he could not receive the best net score prize, he gets the credit for it and besides received the second gross score prize.

Today the national open tournament will begin in Philadelphia and the result will be watched with interest. "Marty" O'Loughlin, the only Plainfield representative, is scheduled to start at 11:35 o'clock this morning with George Thomson, of Wee Burn. "Marty" has been playing his best game this season and being in such good condition should be able to get in the money.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

A pretty novelty for desert is a charlotte russe decorated with violets and angelica. To do this the flat sides of the ladyfingers must be iced and decorated with a candied violet and a stem cut from a candied angelica root; this looks like green citron. It will soften and cut better if it is soaked ten minutes or a bit longer in boiling water. Put one candied violet and its stem on each ladyfinger. The mold after being lined and filled must be chilled quickly to keep the ornaments in the best condition.

The filling may be made as usual and candied violets scattered over the heaped-up surface of the top. If desired, it may be made with grape juice, lemon juice, gelatine and whipped cream. For an ounce of gelatine softened in a half cup of grape juice allow three-fourths of a cup of hot grape juice to further dissolve it. Then add the juice of one lemon and three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and stir these until the sugar is well dissolved. When it has been strained and put in a pan set into ice water; it must be stirred until it begins to thicken. A pint of cream must be already whipped. From this take the thick part and fold it into the gelatine gradually.

June.

Upon the breast of smiling June
Roses and lilies lie;
And around her yet is faint perfume
Of violets, just gone by;

Green is her gown, with 'broidery
Of blossoming meadow grass,
That ripples like a flowing sea
When winds and shadows pass.

Her breast is belted by the blue
Of succary, like the sky,
And purple heart's-ease clasp her too,
And larkspur growing high;

Laced in her bodice, green with vines
And dew the sun has kissed,
Jewels her scarf that faintly shines,
In folds of morning mist!

The buttercups are fringes fair
Around her small white feet,
And on the radiance of her hair
Fall cherry-blossoms sweet;

The dark laburnum's chains of gold
She twists about her throat;
Perched on her shoulder, blithe and bold,
The brown thrush sounds his note!

And blue of the far dappled sky
That shows at warm, still noon,
Shines in her softly smiling eye—
Oh! who's so sweet as June?

COMMERCIAL MILLS BURNED

so the mill will have to be built along different lines. Fortunately, all of his books were saved, including his accounts and other valuable papers and it will not be so difficult to settle up the loss.

Joel Pennington, one of the callmen, was considerably burned about the hands, arms and shoulders, but Dr. C. B. Lufburrow, the city physician, was at the fire and gave him prompt treatment. The injuries are not serious. Although the firemen were several times threatened with injury by falling walls they narrowly escaped. Chief Doane gave explicit instructions to every man to take no risk and to work only at safe distances from the blazing structures.

V. W. Nash, Sr., stated today that his direct and indirect loss will amount to about $500, chiefly due to the fact that he will be obliged to have coal removed to another point and he estimates a loss of at least fifty cents a ton for this work. The loss to L. A. Rheaume will be about the same, his condition being almost identical with that of Mr. Nash. The latter carried no insurance, while M. Rheaume's property is partially insured.

Robberay Murder Motive.

New York, June 20.—Pelham's police force, which was busy yesterday trying to solve the mysterious murder of Julius T. Rosenheimer, who was killed within sight of his wife while walking in the grounds of his beautiful estate, The Roses, has reached the conclusion that robbery was the sole motive and that the desperadoes who commited the crime made their escape on a train bound for New York within fifteen minutes after Mr. Rosenheimer was stricken down. Examination of the victim's body revealed the fact that his gold match had been hastily torn from its chain before the murderers fled. A broken section of the chain with a locket attached was found yesterday morning when the ground was carefully searched at the spot where the owner of The Roses was attacked, near his garage. The watch bears the engraved initials J. T. R., and in the hope of locating it, and thus tracing the authors of the crime Chief of Police Marks, of Pelham, with three of his men, came to New York yesterday afternoon.

$12,000 For His Wife's Love.

White Plains, N. Y., June 20.—Louis A. Vause, a wealthy resident of Manhattan, living at the Waldorf-Astoria, obtained a judgment of $12,000 in the Supreme Court here yesterday before Judge Tompkins and a jury for the alienation of his wife's affections by Gustav Schmetzer, a wealthy retired merchant, of Manhattan. In 1904 Vause obtained a divorce from his wife, naming Schmetzer as a corespondent. The jury was out only nine minutes.

THE FORUM.

A Druggists' Explanation.

Editor the Daily Press:

To correct any false impression that may have been made upon the minds of any of your readers by the publication in your paper on Tuesday night, last, of the matter entitled "Druggists Object," having been present at the meetings at Asbury Park, allow me the space to say:

First, that the "new association" spoken of, refers, I presume, to the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association. "Mr. J. C. Field" was elected treasurer of that association for another year to succeed himself, at that, our thirty-seventh annual meeting. This association is, I believe, the oldest State Pharmaceutical Association in the United States.

That the declaration of the purpose of our Association as set forth in the article, is very far from being the truth, may be shown by the fact that it was through the efforts of this Association, that the first pharmaceutical law was passed in our State to regulate the sale of drugs and poisons for medicinal and household uses, and the standard of their strength established. In regard to our association's attitude on the Pure Food and Drug law, I would say that the Legislation Committee noted several features of the New Jersey law that becomes operative, October, 1908, and reported them to the association that action might be taken to have the law amended so as to eliminate them and thus save unwarranted hardship and inconvenience to the citizens and business men of our State.

One of the objectionable features of the State law, as we undestand it, is that it renders inoperative in this State the guarantee of the manufacturer filed with the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington, thereby relieving the manufacturer of responsibility for the purity of his goods; and if the same are sold by the retailer, he must assume it. Further, the act does not recognize any but medicinally or chemically pure drugs and chemicals and does not permit of the sale of commercial chemicals for use in the arts and sciences. Thus, if we had a call from a mason for muriatic acid to clean a brick front, or from a tinsmith or plumber for soldering purposes, we could only sell him the hydrochloric acid, c. p., costing him ten times the price of the commercial article asked for, and then, not what he wanted, and has always used. Again, if five pounds of copperas was wanted for disinfecting purposes ferrous sulphate, c. p., would have to be supplied, and this ata cost six or eight times more than the commercial product desired. The same is true of ammonia muriate blue vitriol for battery purposes, carbolic acid, etc., for disinfecting, and many other things.

The law does not permit the State Board of Health to fix a standard by resolution as stated in your article, but it does allow the State Board to adopt any amendment made by Congress to the Pure Food and Drug law, by a resolution. This we think should be done if the amendment is found desirable, by an amendment to our law, through the Legislature, in due form.

No, no, Mr. Editor, the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association is not obstructive, but progressive. It is composed of the best men in our profession in this State, and in justice to them as well as to the druggists of our city, may I ask as much prominence be given to this disclaimer as was given to "Druggists Object."

Yours very truly,
T. S. ARMSTRONG.

DIED AS HIS FATHER DID.

Former Elizabeth Man Killed—His Parent Met a Sudden Death.

Elizabeth, June 20.—Word was received here yesterday of the death in Mexico, of Louis Kidd, forty-six years old, a former resident of Elizabethport, where he was born. He was educated at Public School No. 1 and was the youngest son of the late Captain John Kill. He went to Mexico fifteen years ago and was chief engineer of a railroad there. He was killed Monday, but no particulars have been received here. He leaves a widow, a son and daughter. The last time Mr. Kidd was here was two years ago, when he came on to visit his friends here and take his mother to Mexico to live.

His father, Captain Kidd, also met a sudden death. He tumbled headfirst into a slip at the wharf of the Jersey Central at Elizabeth and was buried in the soft mud. When his body was extricated he was dead from suffocation. Captain Kidd's oldest son, John, is still in the service of the Jersey Central at its Elizabethport shipping wharves.

Constable Drops Dead.

Phillipsburg, June 20.—Reuben Warner, for many years an active constable in Warren County, dropped dead in the lumber office of C. J. Laudach, here, yesterday. Death was probably due to an injury which he suffered by falling from a new building at Alpha about one year ago. He was sixty-nine years old. He was a carpenter and builder, and was at work on a building when injured in 1906. His spine was hurt and a slight fracture inflicted at the base of his skull. That Warner recovered so as to attend his work again surprised his physicians. He leaves a widow and these children: Mrs. William Cheesemen, of this place; Sheridan, George and Miss Laura Warner, of Jersey City, and Mrs. Margaret Yost, of Atlantic City.

We consider the "Jewett" the best refrigerator made—because they are made to stand hard service; they are the most economical in ice consumption; they give perfect service and are sold at popular prices. If we had not bought these refrigerators very early in the season we would have to charge from $2.50 to $5.00 more for them. The cool weather may have kept refrigerators out of your mind, but you'll be wise to make your selection now.

Rush Injured Dog to Hospital.

Newport, R. I., June 20.—When Misses Mildred and Irene Sherman, daughters of Mrs. W. Watts Sherman, ran over a stray dog while riding in their automobile yesterday, they picked the injured animal up and speeded with it to a veterinary surgeon. Both young women seemed greatly distressed by the accident and one of them got out of the machine to lift the animal, a mongrel, up from the street. While it did not seem to have any bones broken it was thought to be injured internally. First speeding to the nearest garage, Miss Mildred kept the dog in her arms while her sister called the surgeon by telephone, and then they remained with it until its wounds were dressed. The surgeon told them that it would likely recover.

Cut Throat By Accident.

New York, June 20.—Henry Knickerbocker, sixty-two years old, died yesterday at the Harlem Hospital as the result of a peculiar accident while shaving himself at his home, No. 268 West 131st street, a week ago. Knickerbocker was seized suddenly by an attack of vertigo, according to members of his family, and fell on the bed, razor in hand, the keen blade gashing his throat as he fell and causing fatal injuries. The accident occurred in Knickerbocker's room and none of his family—a wife and seven children—was present at the time. One of the children found him a few minutes after the accident. He was then unconscious and was hurried to the hospital, where he died.

"Are You Dead?" Asked Susie.

New York, June 20.—Falling five stories from her parents' flat, at No. 1,808 Third avenue, and alighting on a brick pavement, yesterday, Nellie Comerfoot, eight years old, retained consciousness and said only that her head hurt her. Her little sister, Susie, saw her fall and peeped over the edge of the roof, where the children had been playing. "Are you dead?" asked Susie. "No, but I can't get up. Come and help me," a childish voice answered from the areaway, far below. "My head hurts me," was all she complained of when John Ward, who lives in the tenement, picked her up and ran with her into the house. Then there was half an hour's wait. Dr. Fisher said the child might have a fractured skull, and he took her to the Harlem Hospital.

Dive Keeper In Peril.

New York, June 20.—Charles E. Ackron, who has been in trouble with the authorities ever since the days when he ran the infamous Tivoli dive, in West Thirty-fifth street, stands a fair chance of going to prison for a long term. Convicted in Special Sessions Court yesterday of conspiracy, he let his temper get the better of him and in the prison pen viciously assaulted Frederick S. Robinson, sixty-five years old, who was convicted with him. Ackron's anger was directed against Robinson because the aged man confessed his guilt, and it was on his evidence that he, Ackron and William H. Halpin were convicted. Ackron was arrested at once and was held in $300 bail by Magistrate Walsh, in the Tombs Court.

Ready for Telegraph Strike.

New York, June 20.—Official announcement was made to the public yesterday by the Commercial Telegrapher's Union that a strike will be started against one or both of the telegraph companies—the Western Union and Postal—within the next week or ten days. It was stated that the points where the strike will begin had been determined upon and that all plans have been made, but that no further information would be given unti the operators were ready to quit work. This announcement came from S. L. Konenkamp, acting as president of the national union in the absence of Mr. Small, and was given out at the telegraphers' headquarters in the Astor House.

Won Long Standing Prize.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 20.—A prize of $1,000 that has been standing for forty-eight years to be awarded to any resident of North America who should determine by experiment whether all rays of light and other physical rays are or are not transmitted with the same velocity has been won by Dr. Paul R. Heyl, assistant in the Department of Chemistry of the Philadelphia Central High School. The money was deposited with the Franklin Institute, of this city, on March 3, 1859, by Uriah A. Boyden, in his day an eminent mechanical engineer of Boston, and the institute has advertised the proposition monthly ever since.

"Voices" Called Her to Death.

New York, June 20.—Mrs. Maria Mehacek, seventy-nine years old, jumped to her death early yesterday from the third story of the apartment occupied by John Mack and his family, at Second avenue and Seventy-first street. Mr. Mack had given her a home when she lost her position recently, but she had taken often of hearing voices calling her "from the other shore."

The Missionary Alliance will hollld a meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Madison avenue, tomorrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock. W. D. Williams, of Brooklyn, will speak and the public is invited.

SPEAKS GLOWINGLY OF LOCAL HORSE SHOW

"RIDER AND DRIVER" COMMENTS EDITORIALLY ON RECENT EXHIBITION.

"The Rider and Driver," the well known weekly published in the interest of outdoor sports, in its last issue contains several excellent pictures taken at the Plainfield Horse Show, also the following very complimentary editorial:

"Surprise has been expressed on several occasions by those conversant with horse show affairs regarding the unusual success and popularity achieved by the show of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club. The most potent reason of this success becomes apparent to the newcomer upon introduction to those having the interests of the show in hand. Every detail conducive to the comfort, convenience and pleasure of the visitor is made the especial study of these gentlemen; the attendant expense is of minor consideration. The general scheme of architecture and grounds, the beauty of location and the easy access with which the grounds are reached, make this show ideal. Not satisfied with accomplishing this the club holds each year a banquet on the evening prior to the termination of the show, in the grand banquet hall of the Casino, where music, vaudeville and oratory are only secondary to the pleasure of enjoying choice viands furnished by the steward. This year's event was more largely attended than any of its predecessors and, as heretofore, was voted the "best yet."

"On the evening of Friday, June 7, that genial and more than popular idol of Plainfield, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, presided as toastmaster at a board surrounded by an assemblage of gentlemen prominent in every walk of social, business and the higher sporting life. Good fellowship was everywhere in evidence and it is not a rash statement to make that everyone present will look forward to its reoccurrence in 1908. Toasts were responded to by Dr. T. Earle Budd, of Orange, N. J., Edwin S. Hooley, Dr. C. Shirley Carter, J. H. Donnelly, Judge J. W. Ogden, Charles W. McCutchen and other brilliant speakers, all of whom were enthusiastic in voicing their congratulations regarding the success of the Plainfield Horse Show."

FENCE LINE DISPUTE.

After Trying City Court Complainant Decides On Civil Action.

Frank Vermeule, of Orange street, appeared in the city court this morning against J. W. Manhattan, of Elm place, to press a charge of disorderly conduct. The complaint was based on a fence line dispute, aggravated by predatory chickens.

The back yards of the two places adjoin. Manhattan objected to a fence erected by Vermeule, alleging it to trespass on his ground. Vermeule charges Manhattan with knocking the fence down, opening the way to the Manhattan chickens, which took advantage of the chance and worked havoc with the early peas and other green things in the Vermeule garden.

After the hearing had gone part way Mr. Vermeule decided that the proper place for redress was the District Court. He withdrew his charge and announced his intention of bringing civil action. Francis J. Blatz is his representative.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 23: "Holy and Unholy Ambitions." "Whosoever would be first among you shall be servant of all."—Mark x, 35-45.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Ambition is not in itself a wrong emotion. The desire for excellence is to be commended and cultivated. Emulation of others who exhibit excellence of one sort and another is not necessarily evil.

It is when we desire the praise of others for some real or supposed quality rather than the good of the quality itself that the mischief begins. When we seek place and things for what they will yield in gratification of our own selfishness, preferring self at the expense of others' good and even to their detriment, then the ambition is an evil thing.

It is not to be expected that we shall ever cease to seek that which will yield us personal and individual gratification. Self must, in the very nature of things, be first in our consciousness and in our seeking. But this self of ours is a very complex and peculiar affair. It has physical appetites, mental cravings and soul aspirations. These are not of equal value in the scale of worth. The highest is the realm of spirit. Physical and mental needs must be subordinate. The moral must ever rule over the intellectual and bodily powers and wants.

Any desire which puts the moral and spiritual below either of the other two is a false and vicious ambition. It may be a wise ambition to have a well developed physique, a body that is a splendid specimen of physical manhood or beautiful womanhood. But this is an entirely different thing from the determination to be the champion pugilist of any certain class and to take pride in inflicting punishment on some other person in the trial of strength.

A fine body is of worth when it assists in the advancement of moral ends and not otherwise. If used for other gratifications, it may prove to be an unmitigated curse to its possessor and others.

However we may have disregarded it, the truth is that our ambitions should ever have a close relation to what God desires regarding us. If we never stop to consider that God has any interest in our doings and claim upon us, we will surely cultivate ambitions which will end in disaster.

Whether we are clearly conscious of it or not, the fact yet remains that God owns this world and has charge of events and is carrying forward His own purposes. No one can prosper unless he takes account of this. Some temporary advantage may be secured at certain times by one who ignores all this, but at the end the question is sure to arise, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Worthy ambitions always tend to the advancement of the interests and welfare of the soul and never run counter to the good of other men or the glory of God.

What shall we do, then, seeing so many of the customs of society and the aims of ordinary men contradict this view of things absolutely?

We must take our choice either to follow the fashion of the world and be governed by its rules and philosophy of care for self first, last and always or we must regard and practice the commands of Jesus Christ to love God supremely and our neighbor as ourselves, seeking first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and trusting God to add to us all the things we need, never doubting that His providential care is able to make us live successfully, triumphantly, in this present world under just those principles carried into daily practice in every department of life.

Divine Forgiveness.

The venerable Dr. Duff once read the sermon on the mount to a number of Hindoo youths, and when he came to the passage, "And I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them who despitefully use you and persecute you," so deep and intense was the impression produced on one of them that he exclaimed in ecstasy: "Oh, how beautiful, how divine! This is the truth! This is the truth!" And for days and weeks he could not help repeating, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you," etc., constantly exclaiming: "How beautiful! Surely this is the truth!" Nor could he rest until he had renounced his false gods and their senseless worship and accepted the truth as it is in Jesus.

Little Things That Win.

Life is made up not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindnesses and small obligations given habitually are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir Humphry Davy.

Sentence Sermons.

The law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit, and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.—George Dana Boardman.

The Almighty sends none of you into this world without a work and none of you without a capacity to perform that work with earnestness and diligence.—Gladstone.

No one can resist the argument of holiness brought in a personified form before him.—Beecher.

If my heart be narrow, what avail to me that the world is large?—Armenian Proverb.

The man who remains master of himself never knows defeat.—Charles W. Gordon.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 23.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Lessons from the patriarchs. V. Moses.—Heb. xi, 23-29.

The name Moses means "drawn" in the Hebrew and in the Egyptian language "saved from the water," and he was so named because the daughter of Pharaoh had drawn him from the water, where he had been hidden that his life might be spared, for Pharaoh had decreed that all male children of the Hebrews two years old and under should be put to death. This edict was issued because the population of the Israelites was increasing so rapidly that they were becoming a menace to the nation which held them in bondage.

The life of Moses naturally divides itself into three periods of forty years each. The first period of forty years was spent in Egypt. His mother to save him kept him hidden for three months in her house and then hid him in the Nile river, where his sister Miriam watched him. The Egyptian princess found him, and Miriam suggested as a nurse for him his own mother. This suggestion was acceptable to the princess, and thus his early training was received from his mother. And it was a religious training that he never forgot. He learned of the promises of God to his people and believed in them and ever afterward defended them. He then became the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter and was "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians" and became "mighty in words and in deeds." Thus God gave him a comprehensive education for the great work he had in store for him. God's hand is always in our lives. "It is the Lord's doing and wonderful in our sight."

The second period of forty years in the life of Moses was spent in Midian, in the southern and southwestern part of the Sinai peninsula. When a man grown to forty years of age, Moses, witnessing the sufferings of his people, stood by them, "choosing rather to suffer afflictions with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater than the treasures in Egypt." But Moses, who afterward became so meek, was now hasty and impetuous. He took the law into his own hand and slew an Egyptian and was compelled to flee from Egypt and went to Midian. Here he spent forty years, married a wife and was often in communion with God, who in this forty years taught him patience and meekness. This work being completed, God met him in the burning bush on Mount Horeb and commissioned him to return to Egypt and to deliver His people. Moses had learned his lesson well, for in humility and self deprecation he tried to escape the mission. But God assured him of His presence, gave him an emblem of authority and appointed Aaron, his brother, as his co-laborer.

The third period of the history of Moses began with his return to Egypt and embraced his forty years of life in the wilderness as Israel's leader and ended with his death after he had looked over into the promised land. Returning to Egypt from Midian, he called Aaron and the people, informed them of his mission and demanded of Pharaoh the release of his people. After much delay, in which God sent the ten great plagues upon Egypt, they were allowed to depart and for forty years wandered in the wilderness, with Moses as their leader. At Mount Sinai he organized the people into a nation and a church, giving them under God laws that are today the foundation of the laws of the civilized world. Because of a sin of presumption upon a certain occasion he himself did not enter the land of Canaan, but alone with God on Mount Nebo, after a glimpse of the earthly Canaan, entered into the heavenly Canaan and, with Elijah, appeared to Christ on the Mount of Transfiguration. Moses is one of the world's greatest men. He stood against the temptations of wealth and of pleasure and of high position, but gained still greater honors by his sacrifice. As a prophet and lawgiver he typified Christ, who declares that Moses wrote of Him."

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

"But what about the Canucks following us with the bateau?" returned Martin. "They'll tell who is with us, won't they?"

"They didn't see us start," answered Levi. "It can't swear wimmen came. We'll say we're alone, 'n' bein' so'll make it plausible, 'n' you might say we're goin' to build a camp 'n' 'nother season fetch our wimmen in."

"But how about our men, on the return trip, after finding we have women at the camp?" rejoined Martin. "They will be sure to tell all they know on the way back."

"We've got to keep the wimmen shady, an' fool 'em," answered Levi. And so his plan was adopted.

It was in the early hours of morning when the two canoes crept noiselessly past Tim's Place. The stars barely outlined the river's course, the frame dwelling, log cabin, and stump-dotted slope back of them. All the untidiness existent about this dwelling was hid in darkness, and only the faint sounds and odors betrayed these conditions. But every eye and ear in the two canoes was alert, paddles were dipped without sound, and Chip's heart was beating so loudly that it seemed to her Tim and all his family must be awakened. Her recent escape from this spot and all the reasons forcing it, the fear that both her father and the half-breed might even now be there, added dread; and not until a bend hid even the shadowy view of this plague spot did she breathe easier.

"I was nigh skeered to death," she whispered to Ray when safety seemed assured, "an' if ever Pete finds I'm up whar the folks is goin', I'm a goner."

"Oh, we'll take care of you," returned that boy, with the boundless confidence of youth; "my uncle can shoot as well as anyone, and then Old Cy is up at the camp, and he's a wonder with a rifle. Why, I've seen him hit a crow a half-mile off!"

Smoke was ascending from the chimney, and the rising sun was just visible when Martin and Levi returned to Tim's. Mike was out in an enclosure, milking; Tim was back of the house, preparing the pigs' breakfast. The pigs were squealing, and a group of unwashed children were watching operations, when Martin appeared. A pleasant "Good morning" from him and a gruff one from Tim was the introduction, and then that stolid pioneer started for the sty. Not even the unusual event of a caller could hinder him from the one duty he most enjoyed,—the care of his beloved swine.

"You have some nice thrifty pigs," began Martin, when the pen was reached, desiring to placate Tim.

"They are thot," he returned.

"My guide and I are on our way into the woods, to build a camp," continued Martin, anxious to have his errand over with, "and we halted to buy a few potatoes of you and some pork. I have a couple of men following with a bateau," he continued, after pausing for a reply which did not come; "they will be along in a day or two with most of our supplies; but I felt sure I could get some extra good pork of you and some choice potatoes."

"They Are Thot," He Returned.

"You kin that same," replied Tim, his demeanor obviously softening under this flattery, and so business relations were established.

Martin had intended asking some cautious question regarding Chip or her father; but Tim's surly face, his unresponsive manner, and a mistrust of its wisdom prevented. He was blunt of speech, almost to the verge of insolence, and the arrival of Martin with all his polite words evoked not a vestige of welcome; and yet back of those keen gray eyes of his a deal of cunning might lurk, thought Martin.

Two slovenly women peered out of back door and window while the interview was in progress. Mike came and looked on in silence; two of the oldest children were down by the canoe where Levi waited; the rest, open-eyed and astonished, seemed likely to be trodden on by some one each moment. When the stores were secured and paid for, and Martin had pushed off with Levi, he realized something of the life Chip must have led there.

He had intended not only to obtain potatoes, but some information of value. He obtained the goods, paying a thrifty price, also a good bit of cold shoulder, and that was all.

But Levi, shrewd woodsman that he was, fared better.

"I larned Chip's gone off with old McGuire," he asserted with a quiet smile when they were well away, "an' that Pete's swearin' murder agin him."

"And how?" responded Martin, in astonishment. "I felt that silence was golden with that surly chap, and didn't ask a question."

"I'm glad," rejoined Levi. "I wanted to tell you not to, and I've larned all we want. Children are easy to pump, an' I did it 'thout wakin' a hint o' 'spicion. Tim's folks all believe Chip's gone with her dad. Pete thinks so, an' is watchin' for him with a gun, I 'spect, an' if so, the sooner they meet, the better."

It was gratifying news to Martin, and when the other canoe was reached, the two again pushed on, with Martin, at least, feeling that the ways of Fate might prove acceptable.

Three days more were consumed in reaching the lake now owned by him, for the river was low, carries had to be made around two rapids, and when at last the sequestered, forest-bordered sheet of water was being crossed, Martin wished some titanic hand might raise an impassable barrier about his possessions.

Old Cy's joy at their return was almost hilarious. To a man long past the spasmodic exuberance of youth, loving nature and the wild as few do, the six months here with the misanthropic old hermit, then a month of more cheerful companionship, followed by the departure of Martin and Angie, made the forest home-coming doubly welcome.

But Chip's appearance, and the somewhat thrilling episode of her escape from Tim's Place and her rescue, astonished him. Like all old men who are childless, a young girl and her troubles touched a responsive chord in his heart, and on the instant Chip's unfortunate condition found sympathy. Her bluntly told story, with all its details, held him spellbound. He laughed over her description of spites, and when she seemed hurt at this seeming levity, he assured her that spites were a reality in the woods—he had seen hundreds of them. It was not long ere he had won her confidence and good-will, as he had Ray's, and then he took Martin aside.

"That gal's chaser's bin here 'bout a week ago," he said, "an' the worst-lookin' cuss I ever seen. I know from his description 'twas him. He kept quizzin' me ez to how long we'd been here, if I knew McGuire, or had seen him lately, until I got sorter riled 'n' began to string him. I told him finally that I'd been foolin' all 'long; that McGuire was a friend o' mine; that he'd been here a day or two afore, borrowed some money 'n' lit out fer Canada, knowin' there was a bad man arter him. Then this one-eyed gazoo got mad, real mad, 'n' said things, an' then he cleared out."

"'Tain't often one shoots in the dark 'n' makes a bull's-eye," he said.

"I think you and I had better keep mum about this half-breed's call," Martin added quietly, "and if Angie mentions it, you needn't say that you know who he was. It will only make my wife and the girl nervous."

The two tents were now pitched at the head of a cove, some rods away from the hermit's hut, and well out of sight from the landing, and to these both Angie and Chip were assured they must flee as soon as the expected bateau entered the lake, and remain secluded until it had departed.

In a way, it was a ticklish situation. All knowledge that this waif was with Martin's party must be kept from Tim's Place and this half-breed, or she wouldn't be safe an hour; and until the Canucks had come and gone, she must be kept hidden. Another and quite a serious annoyance to Martin was the fact that he had counted on these two men as helpers in cutting and hauling logs for this new camp. Only man-power was available, and to move logs a foot in diameter and 20 feet long, in midsummer, was no easy task; but Levi, more experienced in camp-building, made light of it.

"We'll cut the logs we need, clus to the lake," he said, "float 'em 'round, 'n' roll 'em up on skids. It's easy 'nough, 'n' we don't need them Canuckers round a minit."

It was four days of keen suspense to Chip before they appeared. Neither she nor Angie left the closed tent while they remained over night, or until they had been gone many hours, and then every one felt easier.

The ringing sound of axes now began to echo over the rippled lake, logs were towed across with canoes, a cellar under the new cabin site was excavated, and home-building in the wilderness went merrily on.

While the men worked, Angie and Chip were not idle. Not only did they have meals to prepare over a rude outdoor fireplace, but they gathered grass and moss for beds, wove a hammock and rustic chair seats out of sedge grass, and countless other useful aids.

Chip was especially helpful and more grateful than a dog for any and all consideration. Not a step that she could take or a bit of work that she could do was left to Angie; her interest and do-all-she-could desire never flagged, and from early morn until the supper dishes were washed and wiped, Chip was busy.

But Martin, and especially Levi, had other causes for worry than those which camp-building entailed. The fact that this "Pernicious Pete," as Angie had once called him, would soon learn of their presence here, and hating all law-abiding people, as such forest brigands always do, would naturally seek to injure them, was one cause. Then, there were so many ways by which he could do harm. A fire started at one corner of the hut at midnight, the same Indian-like malice applied to their two tents, the stealing of their canoes or the gashing of them with a hunting-knife, and countless other methods of venting spite, presented themselves. In a way, they were helpless against such a night-prowling enemy. Over one hundred miles separated them from civilization and all assistance; an impassable wilderness lay between. The stream and their canoes were the only means of egress. These valuable craft were left out of sight and sound each night, on the lake shore, and so their vulnerability on all sides was manifest.

Then, Chip's presence was an added danger. If once this brute found that she was here, there was no limit to what he would do to secure her and take revenge. They had smuggled her past Tim's Place, but concealment here was impossible; if ever this half-breed returned, she would be discovered, and then what?

An so by day, while Martin and Levi were busy with hut-building, or beside the evening camp-fire when Ray picked his banjo and Chip watched him with admiring glances, these two guardians had eyes and ears ever alert for this expected enemy.

CHAPTER V.

There were three people at Birch Camp,—as Angie had christened it—namely, herself, Ray, and Chip, who did not share Martin's suspicion of danger. A firm belief that a woman's aid in such a complication was of no value, coupled with a desire to save her anxiety, had kept his lips closed as to the situation.

Life here at all hours soon settled itself into a certain daily routine of work, amusement, and, on Chip's part, of study. True to her philanthropic sense of duty toward this waif, Angie had at once set about her much-needed education. A reading and spelling book suitable for a child of eight had been secured at the settlement, and now "lessons" occupied a few hours of each day.

It was only a beginning, of course, and yet with constant reminders as to pronunciation, this was all that Angie could do. The idioms of Tim's Place, with all its profanity, still adhered to Chip's speech. This latter, especially, would now and then crop out in spite of all admonitions; and so Angie found that her pupil made slow progress.

There was also another reason for this. Chip was afraid of her, and oft reproved for her lapses in speech, soon ceased all unnecessary talk when with Angie.

But with Ray it was different. He was near her own age, the companionship of youth was theirs, and with him Chip's speech was ready enough. This, of course, answered all the purposes of benefit by assimilation, and so Angie was well satisfied that they should be together. Beyond that she had no thought that love might accrue from this association.

Chip, while fair of face and form, and at a sentimental age, was so crude of speech, so grossly ignorant, and so allied to the ways and manners of Tim's Place, that, according to Angie's reasoning, Ray's feelings were safe enough. He was well bred and refined, a happy, natural boy now verging upon manhood. In Greenvale he had never shown much interest in girl's society, and while he now showed a playmate enjoyment of Chip's company, that was all that was likely to happen.

But the winged god wots not of speech or manners. A youth of 18 and a maid of 16 are the same the world over, and so out of sight of Angie, and unsuspected by her, the by-play of heart-interest went on.

And what a glorious golden summer opportunity these two had!

Prizes For Music Pupils.

At the beginning of the season Miss May Vincent Whitney introduced the use of a printed "practice slip" for her class in music, offering at the same time a first and second prize to the two pupils showing by their daily record the most extra time devoted to practice over the hour a day agreed upon. Miss Whitney announced today that the first prize has been won by Miss Muriel Collins and the second by Miss Martine Weeks. The prizes consist of a handsomely bound volume of Chopin music, and a Musical Birthday Book, illustrated with pictures of the birthplaces of famous composers. Through the announcement in today's Daily Press the pupils will learn for the first who have won the prizes.

Otto Newman, of Millstone, has brought suit, through his next friend, against the New Jersey Central Railroad for $15,000 damages. He had been to Coney Island and on his way home fell asleep. FATE PURSUES HIM.

This Morning's Fire One of Many Misfortunes That Have Befallen A. L. Cadmus.

The destruction of the Commercial Mills by fire this morning, is the most severe of the many misfortunes that have fallen to the lot of A. L. Cadmus during the twenty-five years that he has been engaged in business in that part of the city. Several times the frame buildings about the mill have been on fire resulting in considerable loss to Mr. Cadmus, and he was also obliged to stand a suit brought against him by one of his employees for injuries which he sustained while walking across a plank in the mill. This entailed a heavy monetary loss before the case was settled. The mill was also unroofed during the big blizzard in 1888.

The last fire at the mill was about five years ago, when several buildings were destroyed. In place of these a large frame structure covered with corrugated iron, was erected, and it withstood the fire this morning. Whether Mr. Cadmus will rebuild again is not known, but there is no doubt but that eventually the business will be continued in modern and more up-to-date buildings, replacing the old ones which have been used for so many years.

Martyr.

The multi-millionaire was in great agony when he found he would probably be compelled to die rich.

"Money," he exclaimed piteously; nothing but money! Is it not a punishment?"

"Yes," replied the beggar at the gate, "and I call it capital punishment. Suppose you give me your wealth and die a happy man?"

But the multi-millionaire shook his head.

"No," he answered dolefully, "when a man is condemned to capital punishment he generally deserves it, so I shall take my medicine like a man."

And then he called out his $10,000 bulldog and drove the beggar off the premises.

Substitutes for Meat.

According to Dr. Robert Hutchinson, of London, if at any time meat is not available, bread, sugar and eggs will make "a very respectable support for the body." Sugar is an exceedingly valuable article of food as a source of energy, the unfortunate thing about it being that it contains no nitrogenous matter. Bread, however, does contain some, hence it balances up well when combined with sugar. In times of scarcity of food, bread and molasses is not a half bad diet—at least, it can be relied on to keep the body up to a fair state of efficiency.

Wm. Jeroloman Again in the Toils.

William Jeroloman, of Somerset street, was arrested in the borough, last night, for being drunk and disorderly. This is the second offense within a few days. He will be given a hearing before Recorder Dolliver tonight.

NOT ALL A COMPLIMENT.

Wife's Pride in Husband's Success Had a Tinge of Regret.

The doctor and his wife had lived together four years. She was a widow when he met her. He was a physician of note. Their life together was a happy one and no quibbling had entered the home to set a bad example for their hopeful. But the wife had a reputation as a wit. Her witticisms and little sarcastic remarks were known far and wide. Her friends had all heard of them. They had all felt the sting of them. The physician had been working with a hard case. He had spent day and night at the home of his patient and had won the fight for life. And he was accordingly well satisfied with himself. On his arrival home one evening he turned to his wife, saying: "You see, wifey dear? I have pulled my patient through. He is now well on the road to recovery." "Yes, hubby, dear," returned the wife. "But you are such a perfect master of your profession. You are so successful. Ah, I wish that I had met you five years sooner than I did. Then my poor, dear Billy would never have died."

CLEVER TRICK OF THIEVES.

Use Offensive Odor of Onions to Aid in Shoplifting.

"Incredible as it may seem," said Lecoq, the detective, "there are a number of shoplifters who steal by the agency of the onion. These abandoned men, before setting out upon their contemplated crimes, eat of raw onions abundantly. Then they stroll into the silversmith's or the haberdasher's or the jeweler's that they propose to rob. 'Show me those large solitaires surrounded with pigeon-blood rubies, please,' says the jeweler thief. The clerk brings forth the tray of gems and, bending over it, the thief sighs with admiration. His face close to the clerks, he sighs again. And the clerk's nostrils quiver and he turns away his head. The inspection of diamonds continues for some minutes. Throughout it the thief keeps breathing hard, the clerk keeps turning his head away and hence it is no wonder at the day's end that a couple of costly rings are missing."

A Dog Worth Knowing.

Two years ago a boy 14 years old named Edward Sweeney, living at Opelika, Ala., was followed home by a small dog. The animal was bobtailed and squint-eyed and by no means good looking, and the boy was laughed at for having him around. Within a week, however, the dog brought home a five-dollar bill in his mouth. The next week he brought a silver dollar. Then he brought a pocket knife, and followed that with a dollar bill. There has hardly been a week in these two years that the dog has not found something. He makes it his business to hunt the streets and highways, and often travels a distance of 30 miles. Up to the present date he has found and brought home $38 in cash, besides many useful things.

Women of Yezzo.

The women of the island of Yezzo, whence it is supposed came the original inhabitants of Japan, have a very peculiar custom of making up their faces to look as though they have mustaches. These women are called Ainus, and upon the upper lip of each Ainu belle is tattooed something that resembles a long, flowing mustache. To possess an artistically tattooed ornament of this kind marks a woman as especially attractive and her chances of making a good matrimonial alliance are very small if she is not thus adorned. As a matter of fact, the men of the island choose their spouses more for the beauty of this tattooed design than the grace of form or charm of feature.

The Pet Animal Stage.

"Why don't you get you a cat?" asked her woman friend. "You wouldn't be half so lonely if you had some little live animal like that always around." "I haven't come to the animal stage yet, thank heaven," she replied. "When men and women lose all hope of human love they go to the animal kingdom, the men to the dogs, some literally, and the women to the cats; and they are right, perhaps, since faithfulness is to be found mainly among the animals; but as I say, I haven't quite arrived at that stage of the game yet."

Her First Impressions.

"The first impression is the one you should always go by," the little grass widow advised. "I know by experience. I have never yet had a husband that I liked at first sight. He always had to win me. Then, after I had been married awhile, I invariably went back to my first impression of dislike that kept on getting worse and worse till I had to leave him. I shall never marry again," she finished, "unless I fall head over heels in love with him the first minute I meet him."

Best Sleep of All.

"I see that an eminent physiican declares that two hours of sleep before midnight are worth more than six after that hour." "Nonsense! Two hours of sleep after you're called in the morning are worth more than anything else."

Dull Times.

"Hello!" said the funny man to Finnegan the undertaker. "I suppose your business is dead with you?" "Faith, it's worse than that," replied Finnegan. "Shure, I haven't buried a livin' soul in near a month."

THIRTY-FOUR STUDENTS RECEIVE P.H.S. DIPLOMAS

Commencement Exercises in First Baptist Church Attended by Large Gathering.

ADDRESS BY DR. VANCE

The thirty-seventh commencement of the Plainfield High School was held last night at the First Baptist church. Thirty-four young people partook of the glories of the occasion, and received the diplomas that stand for the fruits of four years of earnest and studious endeavor.

The church was filled, nave, transept and gallery, with parents and friends of the graduates, interested citizens and old graduates of P. H. S. The platform was banked with ferns and a profusion of cut flowers. Members of the Board of Education, Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, the speaker of the evening, Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, of North Reformed church, Newark; Principal I. W. Travell, and Rev. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, who offered the invocation, sat at the side of the platform. From the center, back, raised seats, were ranged the graduates, the evening clothes of the youths furnishing an effective background for the snowy graduation gowns of the girls.

Classical course—Gertrude Prince Abbott, Mildred Elizabeth Berry, Miriam Crittenden Carman, Mabelle Cubberley, John DeLancey Ferguson, Edgar Wells Freeman, Gertrude Moodey, Florence Emily Prior, Rose Siegal, Frederick Martin Smith, Queena May Tillotson, Joseph Neff Van Deventer.

Scientific course—William Crawford Douglass, George Stanley Fisher, Weston Gavett, William Hicks Osgood, Zacharya Hirsh Srager, William Dee Taylor, John Adelbert van Brakle.

General course—Cornelia Lillian Lounsbury, Marion Rebecca Sachar, Ethel Clark Rogers, Francis Rollin Williams.

Commercial course—Clara Evelyn Hallard, Clara Lillian Kanen, Florence Emma Kanen, Charles Bertram Leggett.

The order of exercises opened with an overture, "Jolly Robbers," played by Frank's orchestra, of New York. The invocation, by Rev. Mr. McCrea, was followed by another orchestra selection, Humperdinck's "Evening Prayer," after which Miss Rose Siegal gave the following salutation:

Mr. President and Members of the Board of Education; Mr. Superintendent; Mr. Principal; Mr. Speaker of the evening; Citizens of Plainfield; to all of you, who are gathered here tonight we extend our heartiest greetings. We appreciate greatly the fact that you have come here tonight. You have always taken an interest in us, and your interest has helped us to do our best, and for this we thank you.

To you, the Members of the Board of Education, we especially give our thanks for your splendid work. Despite the fact that you are all business men, whose every hour is actively engaged, you have willingly sacrificed valuable time for our good. You have given us teachers whose helpful influence will cling to us throughout the future. Our teachers have taught us the broader side of life and have done away with some of our narrow-minded ideas and petty prejudices. For instance, we no longer think of the British as tyrants, who were always wrong, while the Americans were heroes who were always in the right. Such fair judgment is largely due to them.

Dr. Maxson, we scarcely know what to say to you. You know our feelings toward you. You know that when you appear before us on the platform, there is no one whom we welcome so heartily, and no one to whom we listen so eagerly as to you. Your words have always done us good, and we shall remember them. You have watched our progress with such thoughtful interest, that we have come to consider you as the father of our great family.

Mr. Travell, you especially have helped us, both as a class and as individuals. Everything you have done for us has been done for our good, and what you have denied us (even if it were dancing after the Senior Play) we now believe was for the best. Throughout our high school course we have found in you a faithful friend and a most helpful adviser. It is impossible for us to express how sincere and heartfelt is the gratitude which we feel toward you.

Mr. Speaker of the evening, in the name of the class of 1907 I wish to welcome you and to say that we greatly appreciate your presence with us on this occasion, when we are saying farewell to our school life; we shall highly value whatever helpful thoughts you may have to give us, as we stand at this "parting of the ways."

To you, the citizens of Plainfield, to whom we are first of all indebted, we wish to say a few words of gratitude for your liberality toward our schools. Especially helpful has been your interest in the high school and your hearty co-operation with our teachers. In all cases of discipline or difference of opinion the monarchy at home has upheld the dignitaries at school, and we are the better for it.

In the years to come, we will strive not to destroy your confidence in us. We hope that we shall have courage and patience and strength to live up to your hopes for us and to be worthy of them.

The salutatory address and essay were also delivered by Miss Siegal. The essay was on "The Prophet Isaiah at a Medern Peace Conference."

She spoke as follows:

About three thousand years ago, the Prophet Isaiah, had predicted that a time would come when there would not be any war among the people of the land. He said, "They shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning knives; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, and they shall not learn any more war."

However, as matters appear now, his word has not yet been fulfilled. But who knows what will happen after the Hague Conference, which is to meet in June; Perhaps then Isaiah's prophecy will come true and all strife on this great, wild world will end.

One day a number of men met at the Czar's palace in St. Petersburg to discuss the Hague Conference and Isaiah, the originator of the problem of peace, resolved to come there to hear what they would say regarding the question which had been so dear to him three thousand years ago. He took with him an angel, who understood all languages and all secrets. They both stole into the apartment, took their places somewhere in the air, and prepared to hear what would happen.

In the large, spacious chamber, where the delegation met, hundreds of electric lights were burning and winking joyfully at each other. A sea of light, mingling with the halo surrounding the angel, poured down upon the people present. Isaiah closed his eyes. "Too bright, too bright," he murmured. "God knows whether the hearts of all these men are not filled with darkness and guilt."

At that moment a burst of applause resounded through the chamber. "What are they doing?" Isaiah asked the angel.

"They are paying honor to this man (pointing to the Czar) who sits at the head of the table. He is the man whose father brought together the first Hague Conference and who tried so hard to establish a good constitution for his country. This man, too, is working for a Hague Conference, but he himself is the first to bring about war, and in his own land people are condemned to death without trial, blood is shed wantonly, and riots and revolts prevail. He does not listen to the voice of his own heart, but to those who with fluttering words and smiling speeches steal away his own views of justice, and deceive him, in order that they may the more easily gain their desires."

Isaiah's face took on a bitter expression. "Oh, ambition, evil ambition," he moaned, "what dost thou not force mortal hearts to do!"

Just then some one began to speak. "Who is he?" Isaiah asked.

"He is a very rich man, who has mines of money," the angel replied.

"How did he get it?" asked the prophet.

"By fair means and foul. First he dealt with iron and other manufactures. Then he watered his stock in order to deceive the multitude and to benefit himself."

"I do not understand why the people should allow this," muttered Isaiah.

"The people themselves do not understand and so are deceived," continued the angel. "But there are a number of wise men who can obtain money by means of watered stock, and this man is simply one of the wisest among them."

"But what has he to do with peace?"

"He has nothing else to do. Money flows to him from every side. He is also very anxious to satisfy the voice of his conscience and desirous of homage and he obtains it by preaching the gospel of peace."

At these words a cloud appeared on the forehead of the great prophet and an expression of sadness stole into his eyes.

"Who is that?" he asked again, as a third man began to speak.

"What is he saying?"

"He is praising his master, the Kaiser of Germany, and declaring that he is the only man who can establish peace on earth. The Kaiser himself is continually boasting of having won great glory in war, although he is not a great warrior. The ambassador says that peace would be a good thing, if it could only be brought about."

Heavier and heavier grew the cloud on the forehead of Isaiah. "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity," his lips murmured.

"And what does that man say?" he asked, pointing to a tall military-looking man, who had just risen.

"He is a general and praises the life of a soldier. He claims that a camp is the best school in which to learn love for one's native land. It strengthens the body and the heart, he says. Moreover, he cries that his nation is the finest, and his king the best."

"And who are those men, with the rows of medallions and orders on their breasts?" Isaiah now asked his companion.

U.V.U.'S HOLD CONVENTION

Nineteenth Annual Business Session Began in This City Yesterday.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Comrad John R. Naylor Made the Head of the Organization—Installation Ceremonies Today.

Officers were elected and other matters of business were transacted at the first session of the nineteenth annual convention of the Union Veteran Union, of New York and New Jersey, held in the Christian church, yesterday. The organization, which numbers 101 members in the five regiments at Geneva, N. Y., Waterloo, N. Y., Penn Yan, N. Y., Middletown, N. Y., and Plainfield, is well represented at the convention and considerable interest manifested in the proceedings.

The union is comprised of veterans who saw not less than six months actual service and who participated in at least one battle. Brigadier-General Albert G. Perry, of this city, delivered the address of welcome to the delegates and Comrade John Wagner made a few remarks. General Philip H. Russell, of Geneva, by virtue of his office as commander of the union, then took the chair and presided over the business session. The report of the assistant adjutant general, Col. John Youndt, of Waterloo, showed a membership of 101 and every regiment in good condition. He explained that the limited membership was accounted for by reason of the fact that the eligibility rules prevented many from joining. The treasurer reported a small balance on hand, with all bills paid.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

General, John R. Naylor, Plainfield; brigadier-general first brigade, Gen. Daniel L. Seeley, Penn Yan, N. Y.; brigadier-general second brigade, Comrade Joseph O. Sedam, New Brunswick; assistant adjutant-general, Comrade Albert G. Perry; quarter-master-general, Comrade E. E. Townley; chaplain, Comrade John Wagner, Plainfield.

After the election the veterans received a committee of women from the convention of the Women's Union Relief Union, inviting them to attend its session. Short addresses of congratulation were made by the different members, including the delegates from other regiments, concluding with a lengthy address by the retiring commander, Gen. Russell. Adjournment was then taken to 10 o'clock this morning, when the officers-elect were installed by General Russell.

Laying aside business for a time, the members of the U. V. U. and the Women's Relief Union gathered at the Christian church, last night, and enjoyed a camp-fire. The program opened with remarks by General Russell, after which S. S. Swackhamer made the address of the evening in which he recalled a number of the most stirring scenes of the Civil War, mentioning the names of several who took a leading part.

Other features of the program were recitations by Miss Adele Ohl and a flag drill by ten little girls, under the direction of Mrs. Charles Thompson. The entertainment closed with a recitation by Mrs. Andrew Mulford. Henry Drake was the chairman of the committee of arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting veterans and last night's camp-fire and everything passed off in a way that was pleasing to all.

Defendant Was Plaintiff.

The parts played by the principals in the chicken case reported from the city court, in yesterday's papers, were reversed. Mr. Vermeule was the defendant and Mr. Manhattan the plaintiff. The fence was broken down by Vermeule and not by Manhattan.

COUNCILMAN OBJECTS TO GRANTING MORE LIGHTS

MR. TYLER SAYS THE MATTER IS NOT GIVEN PROPER CONSIDERATION.

It was with some difficulty that the Common Council secured a quorum for its adjourned meeting, last night, and at one time it looked as though there would be no session. It was the third one for the month and most of the members felt like staying away. There were just six members out and the business was disposed of as quickly as possible.

A petition was received from William R. Codington, representaing Clara A. Stelle, in which he made a proposition to redeem the property at 207-209-211 Plainfield avenue, sold under the Martin Act, by paying the back taxes in all amounting to $1,499.37, and with the understanding that the city would in return give a quit claim deed. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Later Mr. Hibbard, of that committee, offered a resolution, providing that the petition be accepted in accordance with its provisions. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing that $1,000 be appropriated from the general fund to prepare plans and specifications for the proposed extension of the sanitary sewers, the same to be deducted from the regular appropriations for that work and returned to the fund from which it was taken.

An attempt on the part of Mr. Montgomery to locate two electric lights on Randolph road, one at Lennox avenue and the other at Cameron avenue, in response to a petition from J. C. Manning and others, met with opposition from Mr. Tyler. He said that altogether too many lights were being granted and he didn't think that due consideration was being given to the matter of lights, and he thought that more attention should be given to the granting of lights throughout the whole city.

Mr. Montgomery replied by saying that the particular section referred to needed the two lights as there is not a single lamp on Randolph road between Hillside and Woodland avenues. Mr. Montgomery had a map of the city and while several of the members were examining it, Mr. Gloak moved that the recommendation of the committee be adopted and it was, Mr. Tyler alone voting no. He also voted against the motion of Mr. Montgomery to place a lamp on East Sixth street, between Central and Berckman Streets, on the same ground, but the light was granted.

Colored Woman Vagrant.

Charlotte Bergan, colored, 40 years old, was arraigned before Judge Runyon, in the city court, this morning, charged with vagrancy. She has been making a practise of sleeping on stoops and such places, and Policeman Payne decided last night that it was time she stopped it. Judge Runyon gave her 30 days in the county jail.

Unity Lodge Elects Officers.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., elected these officers at its meeting last night: Chancellor commander, E. V. Lorton; vice chancellor commander, Isaac Kennedy; prelate, B. R. Force; master of work, A. E. Causebrook; master at arms, R. H. Loughlin; inside guard, Harry Werner; outside guard, C. E. Harris.

Want Banner Returned.

During the graduates' dance at the Casino last night, some one appropriated a navy banner loaned to the Alumni Association for decorative purposes. The purloiner is known and the committee requests that the banner be returned in order to avoid drastic measures being taken.

PUMMELED THE PICKET

PICKET IS HELD, TOO

On Charge of Obstructing Way of Non-Union Man's Wife—Two New Cases From Old Trouble.

After a lull of several months, the union troubles at the Krom Machine Works figured again in the city court this morning. Two cases growing out of the picketing by the machinists and the protective measures adopted by the works were heard. The court room "gallery" was filled with union men.

In the first, Ulysses S. Fritz, a watchman employed by the Krom company and the Plainfield Cement Stone Company, whose plant is near that of the machine works, was the defendant. Thomas Muldowney, one of the pickets, charged him with assault.

Muldowney testified that on June 7 he went into the yard of the cement-stone shop, to get a drink. Fritz followed him. He left before Fritz, and went on down the street. Fritz ran up to him, he alleged, and assaulted him. He was struck and kicked. He hadn't done or said anything to call for or merit the assault.

Fritz acqnowledged the assault. He said he had had occasion to warn Muldowney from the places he watched, and followed him into the yard to order him again. Muldowney, he said, closed the door in his face, an old trick, and held it. He forced it open, and ran out after the picket, who, he testified, was hurrying away. He punched him, kicked him three times, and then slapped him. He said he knew he had done wrong, but he was aggravated.

Judge Runyon said he felt the defendant had gone too far, no matter what his authority as watchman. He held Fritz for the grand jury under $200 bail. Bond was filed immediately.

In the second case Muldowney was the defendant, charged by Mrs. Edward Prentiss, wife of a Krom employe, with obstructing and annoying her on May 24. She testified that Muldowney followed her to St. Mary's cemetery, which is situated near the Krom works, and from there to a stone at the works. She said he stared at her, and that, a little later, when she sought to leave the Krom works yard, to where she had wheeled her baby to ask the time of a coachman (she was waiting for her husband), Muldowney placed himself directly across her path at the gate and kept her from going out. She said he spoke to her rudely, and made threats against her husband, making her so nervous she began to cry. Mrs. Prentiss' story was partly corroborated as to Muldowney's attitude by Clarence Lyon, Edward Shearer and Albert Bowman, employes at the works.

Muldowney, in his own defense, said he did not follow Mrs. Prentiss to the cemetery, and that he did not place himself across her pathway. He was leaning against a tree at the curb, he said, when she came to the gate. She spoke to him first, making a remark to the effect that her husband was just as good as he was. He made a pacific reply to this, he said, and said nothing further, because Louis Berger, another of the pickets, warned him to keep his mouth shut. Testimony corroborative as to where he stood was furnished by Edward Eskesen, Berger and Mattox.

Judge Runyon decided that the grand jury had better consider both cases, and held Muldowney in his own recognizance. In both cases, Philip J. Schotland, of Newark, counsel for the International Association of Machinists, appeared for Muldowney. G. W. V. Moy represented Fritz and Mrs. Prentiss.

THIRD MYSTERIOUS FIRE AROUSES SUSPICIONS

Blaze in the U. S. Express Company's Barn Savors of Incendiary's Work.

INQUIRY TO BE MADE

Tenant of Building Neglected His Own Property to Aid In Rescue of Twelve Horses.

For the third time this week, the city fire department was called out at an early hour this morning for a mysterious fire, discovered at 3 o'clock in the hay-mow of the United States Express Company stables, in the rear of the F. L. C. Martin auto garage on Park avenue. The loss, chiefly on the building and the household furniture belonging to Simon Shults, colored, who, with his family, occupied rooms on the second floor of the building, will amount to over $4,000. The twelve horses and express wagons stabled on the first floor were all rescued, and the loss to the express company will be slight. The building is owned by Boice, Runyon & Co., and is covered by insurance.

There is considerable suspicion regarding the fires of the past week, and that they may have been of incendiary origin is strongly hinted. The first of the series of three fires was in George Voehl's stables Monday night and that started in the hay-mow. The blaze at the Commercial Mills yesterday morning also had considerable hay, straw and feed to work on, and its origin has not been explained, while the cause for this morning's blaze is equally puzzling to the fire department. The matter has stirred Chief Doane and the officials of the police department and will probably lead to a searching investigation.

This morning's blaze was discovered at 3 o'clock by Miss Florence Shults, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shults, who a few days ago moved from Oak Tree to the apartments over the stables. She occupied a room, directly adjoining the hay-mow used by the express company, and was awakened by the dense smoke which filled her room. She quickly aroused her parents, who in turn first directed their efforts to rescuing the other members of the family, Alameda and Edward Shults, young children. The family being safe, Mr. Shults started to release the horses in the stables below. In the meantime, an alarm was sent in from Box 13, at 3:26, by Patrolman Dennis O'Keeffe, who was not on duty but chanced to be passing, and the fire department was unusually prompt in getting to the scene of the fire. Four lines of hose were run from Park avenue, through the driveway to the burning building and in less than half an hour the blaze was under control.

During this time the rest of the horses, wagons and other property of the express company were gotten out, and the flames were confined almost entirely to the second floor.

Chief Doane was much concerned about the adjoining property which included Charles M. Wilson's carpenter shop at one end of the building, and J. G. Burdick's sash and blind factory, located on the Fourth street side of the brick structure, while on the Park avenue side is F. L. C. Martin's auto garage. It would have been a comparatively easy matter for the flames to have reached any one of these places and caused thousands of dollars worth of damage, and the prompt work of the firemen alone prevented this. The stable building, while not gutted, was thoroughly soaked and this will result in more or less damage. Had not Mr. Shults devoted his first efforts to releasing the express company's horses, he might have saved some of the goods, but as it was his is a total loss of about $500, and there was no insurance.

In the mow where the fire started there were about twenty-fives bales of hay and this was a total loss. Within an hour after the blaze was discovered it was practically extinguished.

MOTHER APPEARS AGAINST SON IN CITY COURT

MAGISTRATE REBUKES THE DEFENDANT FOR DISRESPECT.

Charles Hurtt, a youth who weighs something like 200 pounds, was arraigned in the city court this morning, on complaint of his mother. She charged him with vagrancy.

Mrs. Hurtt said her son refused to help in the support of the household, and allowed her to furnish board without proffering anything in return. Hurtt aroused Judge Runyon by calling his mother a liar. The magistrate rebuked him sharply, and the bulky young man broke into tears. He snivelled through the rest of the hearing.

Mrs. Hurtt said it would be best for him to leave home and shift for himself. Hurtt said he could get a job in Asbury Park, and Judge Runyon gave him an hour in which to start for it. Sentence was suspended on condition that he stay away from Plainfield.

As he turned from the desk, Mrs. Hurtt held out her hand appealingly.

"Don't go away without saying good-bye, Charley," she said.

Charley flounced the other way with a bitter snivel. "Nah," he said; "you proved you aint no friend to me."

CLEAN STREETS ORDINANCE WENT INTO EFFECT TODAY

PROVIDES $20 FINE FOR THROWING ABOUT OF CIRCULARS AND PAMPHLETS

The ordinance recently adopted by the Common Council which prohibits the distributing, strewing about or placing in any streets or public place, area-way or yard, or upon the porch, steps of any building, papers, circulars, cards, pamphlets, except such papers or other matter as may be ordered or subscribed for by the occupants of the premises, went into effect today. The ordinance provides a fine of $20 for each offense.

The ordinance also prohibits the sweeping, casting, throwing or depositing or causing to be swept upon any public street, sidewalk, gutter, alley or other public place, paper, rags, straw, wood, boxes or other rubbish, the fine for each violation being $20. For depositing upon the surface of any lot, bordering upon any street, lane or alley, rubbish or matter likely to decompose or blow away, unless a written permit is given, a fine of $20 may be imposed for each offense. The ordinance was amended and adopted at the suggestion of Mayor Fisk and is intended to keep the streets and public places free from such refuse.

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $8 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

MORE MARVELS: NEW $20 to $24.50 SILK and LINGERIE DRESSES

The Great Secret of the Success of our cloak and suit department is the fact that no trash, no unreliable merchadise is ever allowed to be offered; no matter the price, it must be reliable. It may be reasonably priced, as we claim all our merchandise is, when you compare quality, but quality is never sacrificed. Silk waist dresses are sold as big bargains everywhere at $7.50 to $10, worth $15.00 to $25.00; but comparison proves them only worth $7.50 to $10.00, but scant narrow-down across hips, small skirt, cheapened in every way possible—with no thought of the pleasure of the customer. To buy one of our suits, however, is a delight. You are not only pleased with the designs of silk, but with quality, the colorings, and, best of all, the models; no extremes, no freaks, but suits that any one can wear and yet appear exclusive, quality is so good. Taffeta Silk stripes and taffeta with satin stripes; self color, high neck of modified jumper variety; Lingerie Dresses; our regular $24.50 model; finest French batiste, solid lace sleeve; skirt very full, with plenty of lace trim; very fluffy; one of the prettiest models, princess, by far the best in Newark as you will agree when you see them; Honest $20 to $24.50 Values; at 13.50

YEARLY SENSATION GIRLS' NEW WASH DRESSES; REG. 1.50 to 2.50

$1.00.

Mothers of Girls Look to Us, and We Never Disappoint.—We save them much money every year—save them much labor and time, too; no wonder, then, responses to our announcements are so great. The values this year surpass even those of last, on account of the backward season which compelled makers to greater sacrifices. Last year we sold upwards of a thousand dresses in one day; tomorrow we should sell more. Buy at less than worth of material—gingham in possible to designers is here, and almost any material—gingham in checks, stripes, solid colors, and plaids; pretty lawns, and percales; while the materials are attractive, the real beauty lies in the unique manner in which trimmings are applied, general style of the different models; and to show you that our claim for regular value is correct, we can say that some of the same dresses are in our regular marked 2.00 and 2.50 stock; 6 to 14 years, at 1.00

34 RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

"They are the leaders of riots, of court-martials and inquisitions, which have been shedding blood for the last century. They are those who preach that if a man slaps you on one cheek, you should turn to him the other. However, it is strange that they always wish to be the ones who strike and desire others to turn their cheeks to them."

The expression on Isaiah's face changed. His countenance flamed, his eyes shot fire, and with scorn he cried, "Liars and hypocrites rule the people. Their tongues are smooth, but their hearts are black."

When the peace conference went to rest and refresh themselves after the noble work which they prided themselves on having done for mankind, the voice of the great Isaiah could be heard far in the sky, saying, "Oh, wicked people, people overburdened by sin, when will you learn the gospel of peace?"

But the delegation kept on drinking champagne and paying compliments to one another, and heard not a word.

The valedictory oration, "The Spirit of Modern Charity," by Frederick Martin Smith, came next. It was as follows:

The Advent of Christianity marks the beginning of real charity in its modern sense. Before the Christian era, poverty was alleviated somewhat for economic reasons, but the followers of Christ infused a spirit of love into all attempts to relieve suffering.

In the dark days of the early Roman empire, the Church and her emissaries furnished the only means of relief. Help was given generously, even lavishly, and without discrimination. "Give to every one that asketh of thee," expresses the characteristic spirit of the age. Until the ninth century, when hospitals were founded as special institutions of charity existed and the sick were cared for in their own homes. In the middle ages, the monks, and later, the orders of religious knights ministered to the needs of the poor, and with the growth of the Church of Christ had an army of helpers were liberally supplied.

Such was the beginning in the Christian Church of the spirit of helpfulness which has now assumed such a variety of forms in its course of development. The 19th century has seen remarkable changes in the growth of all kinds of charitable work. The spirit of modern charity is scientific; it has probed causes, has provided legislative measures, has touched all kinds of need, and has far-reaching, inestimable influence upon modern society. It will be possible to touch upon only a few of these phases as they are exemplified in our own country.

In the United States alone, it has been estimated that over 3,000,000 people are dependent upon charity. The immense sum of $200,000,000 expended annually for the support of these persons may convey an idea of the magnitude of this work. A portion of this fund is distributed through official sources for the maintenance of almshouses and suitable homes for the blind, the insane, the feeble minded, and the morally imperilled. A large amount, however, the importance of which can never be fully known, is contributed by individuals and private organizations.

Through al ages the Church, in the spirit of its Founder, has been the real source of charity distribution. It forms a dramatic contrast to note the differences between the methods of the early and mediaeval church and the church of today. The scientific spirit of the age is nowhere shown to better advantage than in the development of the so-called "institutional church." It is the chief aim of such an organization to meet all the needs of its members and to develop all sides of their natures. A most striking illustration of this modern method of church work is furnished by St. George's Episcopal Church, of New York city. This organization is probably a huge plant, for, exclusive of the church edifice, there exist several large buildings where the various activities are carried on. Under the superintendence of the rector and his large corps of assistants, are maintained many secular activities which formerly were considered foreign to church work. Instruction is given in sewing, tailoring, millinery, and other trades. A military battalion, gymnasium classes, debating societies, and numerous social clubs furnish recreation. From a membership of 8,000, there are in this church 5,000 tenement dwellers, and the workers strive always to unite both rich and poor, and to satisfy the intense craving of the poor for social opportunities.

Side by side with the Church, often ministering to other classes and different needs, works the Salvation Army. Frequently the popular idea of this organization does not extend beyond that of a band of noise-makers congregated on the street curb. This apparently senseless demonstration is but a very small portion of their work. The aid furnished through their ministrations, consisting of food, clothing and shelter, is enormous and far-reaching. What a power for good are those blue-bonneted "lassies," passing in and out through the congested districts of the great cities! How inspiring and encouraging it would be to follow one of them through her day's labors as she goes into the tenement homes and teaches the people how to live! The same line of work is carried on by the Volunteers of America, an outgrowth of the old organization. Under the leadership of Ballington and Mrs. Booth, prison reform has become one of its principal aims. "The little mother," for by that name Mrs. Booth is known among the convicts, is loved and admired by every poor fellow whom she has visited, and through the influence of her gentle nature, many have once again started life aright.

In these days of revolutionized ideas, more attention is paid to the medical relief of the poor. The sick were formerly huddled together in filthy buildings. Now, each disease is treated in a separate institution or in separate wards of hospitals. In years past, poor-houses or shelter homes were never visited by physicians, but now, each institution has its own medical examiner. In medical relief, one of the most powerful organizations is the Red Cross Society. Not only do its members perform noble work on the battle field, but they give assistance at all national disasters. A most prominent phase of medical relief is the warfare against tuberculosis. Medical societies are accomplishing much toward preventing the spread of the disease by popularizing the causes and remedies of the "white plague."

Formerly, all classes of defectives were thrust into alms-houses, irrespective of their several maladies. From this resulted great confusion and little benefit. Now, each class of defectives is placed in a separate institution, and more rapid progress is made toward their cure. There now exist separate institutions for the blind, the deaf, the mute, the insane, the feeble minded, the epileptics and inebriates, each with its respective treatments.

One of the most interesting and at the same time most worthy branches of charity work is the treatment of children. How changed it is from the old Spartan method! Then, defective and ill formed children were exposed on barren rocks, a prey to the storms and wintry blasts. As in the course of human progress men saw the cruelty of this practice, they took steps, crude and rough enough at first, to save the children. Even but a century ago, little diseased, misshapen tots were crowded into almshouses and allowed to fare as best they could.

Modern ideas have changed these conditions still more. Homes and institutions have now been established at points of greatest need, and these are always filled to their limit. At Sea Breeze, near New York city, there exists a home for children afflicted with tuberculosis. During the summer months, this institution is always crowded with little sufferers, and many a life has been saved through the kind ministrations of the able corps of workers. In certain districts of large cities, day nurseries and kindergartens serve to brighten the little ones' lives. Clubs and societies have been formed for older children, to create interest in things formerly foreign to them. Summer outings are given to as many as possible and play grounds all in keeping the younger children from the streets. As experience has been gained from these various methods, the tendency has been to make the institutional method but an intermediate step in the development of the child. Indigents and orphans are placed in institutions for only a short time, and as quickly as possible, they are established in respectable families. This method has been found more advantageous for making good citizens from this class of children. The indigent youth of our cities are more carefully watched than in former times. If allowed to develop alone, they often make dangerous criminals and obnoxious citizens. Juvenile courts are now organized with special jurisdiction over children criminally inclined. Each child is given sympathetic assistance and a fair chance to improve his life. Probation officers are appointed to keep watch over each one, to study his case, and to make due report to the court. How changed this is from the former brutal treatment when such children were thrust into prisons in company with hardened criminals! Now, industrial schools exist where the useful arts are taught. For the incorrigible youth, reformatories have been established where the same training that is furnished in the industrial schools is given.

The trend of modern charity methods during the last generation has been toward organization and co-operation. Keeping this aim in view, charity workers are now usually trained for their labors by special courses in social science. Modern charity methods have become preventative rather than corrective.

It has been possible to cover but a few of the means and organizations by which an effort is being made to meet the great need of modern times. As some one has said, "The problem is most difficult and the help inadequate, and yet there can be no more effectual way to banish a gloomy pessimism than by studying the methods by which our country is caring for its dependents, trying to reform the criminally minded, and helping the 'Under Dog.' There is an awakening sense of responsibility among the more prosperous to the 'Other Half,' and to the old question of where rests this responsibility, the spirit embodied in modern charity would reply, 'I am my brother's keeper.'"

After a selection from Herbert's "Red Mill," by the orchestra, Dr. Vance spoke. He was impressive, forceful and eloquent.

In opening, Dr. Vance made complimentary reference to the salutatory and the valedictory oration. He said Miss Siegal's effort was most original, and the oration he characterized as masterly. He said his pulpit was open to Mr. Smith at any time. Continuing, he said in part:

"What does life mean? What is success? It is true that life is not what we have, but what we make out of circumstances. We can forge ourselves a crown or chains.

"This problem of life—one may have hard circumstances, but what of that? Circumstances may furnish the incentive we need. You can't control circumstances, but you can control yourself in circumstances, and that is the great thing.

"The world is what we make it. If you think it a bad world, it is because you are a bit naughty yourself. Set out in life with a high aim. Let this be a true commencement, and begin renewed search for things better and higher.

"Be ambitious without being dissatisfied. You can attain that state without being contradictory in nature. Some of us fail because we are satisfied with present conditions. Some people go through lives like hobbled cows, with their brains tied to their heels. They will jump no fences. What we need is the uplook and the outlook.

"There are careers all around us. The great thing about a human life is its possibilities of development. First what you see, then what you are, makes for character. The glory of this country is not in its commercial greatness, but in its people. Money is not the glory of America. We are worth more than all the country's trade. Money is all right in its place, but its place is as the servant and not the master. The glory of America is in its free and sovereign people.

"How is character grown? By evolution; it is the outgrowth of firm convictions on the inside. See right; be right; then do right. Work is unavoidable, and it is a blessing. I hope all of you young people will go out into hard useful work. Work is happiness. It is a great specific for all forms of mental and moral malaria.

Silk Dresses and Jumper Suits $9.98.

No Store in Town Can or Will Match These.

The best of the season's silk dress offerings is scheduled for Saturday beginning at 9:30 o'clock when these freshly made, just from the maker Silk Dresses and Jumper Suits will go on sale at a price that is really extraordinary.

The maker from whose factory these suits come has been busy and prosperous. He has no stock on hand and it is only with the greatest reluctance and because he was a bit envious of other makers who were sending us good silk dresses for little money that he agreed to use his splendid organization for the production of suits as cheap as these, and which you will find to be better than any ever offered at the price.

We had the great satisfaction of personally selecting the silks that enter into these dresses and suits, and we can assure you that no prettier fabrics have been seen this season.

Four choice models to choose from—both waist and jumper styles, with side-plaited, cluster-plaited and box-plaited skirts, with broad bands round the bottom of skirt, with piping of contrasting color. They are made of splendid chiffon taffetas in black, blue and brown and white and black and white stripes and checks. It requires no stretch of the imagination to value these garments at $18.50 to $25, yet we are going to dispose of them until our contract is completed at the phenomenal price of 9:98

Remember the selling will not commence until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

Another orchestral selection and then the valedictory adress to the graduating class. It was delivered by Edgar Wells Freeman, as follows:

"Classmates—As we stand together at the close of these our commencement exercises, I know no words that can fully express my feelings. But there runs in my mind the story of an ancient Greek myth, that seems best suited to describe my thoughts. There was once a sculptor, poor and unrecognized and not far from starvation's door. He was an artist, however, and one day there came to his shop a wealthy lover of art, who admired his work, and ordered to be executed a piece of sculpture which must be of exceptional merit, no matter what the cost. The poor workman, eager for an opportunity to display the talent which he was sure he possessed, undertook the task. He procured a huge block of ivory white marble, quarried from the heart of Mt. Pentelicus, and unceasingly he made the blows of his hammer and chisel to resound through the little village. Gradually, as the dim outline of a beautiful female figure shaped itself in the gleaming marble, the sculptor worked more and more eagerly, for he felt his whole heart and soul drawn toward the wonderful work he was producing. The vague outline became daily more definite, the figure more apparent, and the humble creator marveled at the superb glory that smiled before him. Soon the figure stood out complete, and as the beauty and loveliness of this perfect form shone out in a divine radiance, the master-workman's admiration and love for his splendid creation surpassed all bounds. He had watched his idol throughout its formation, until he had grown to love it as a human being; and now that it was finished, it was to be his no longer. Hoy could he part with it, his hope, his life, his all?

"The same conflict of emotions possesses us tonight. During the four years that we have been together, we have grown in stature, and, I trust, in grace and understanding; certainly in love for our Alma Mater. We have knit together ties of friendship with each other, with our fellow-students, with our teachers, that shall last as long as life. But tonight, the stern voice of destiny calls us apart. As we go, let us not fail to cherish the happy memories and friendships formed during these years of fellowship, and let each one of us put into his work, heart and soul and that fine spirit, that the sculptor devoted to his greatest achievement. And now, until we meet again, my class-mates, I bid you farewell."

Presentation of diplomas by President of the Board of Education Dr. John B. Probasco followed an orchestral selection. The usual number of bouquets awaited the blushing girl graduates. A musical number closed the program.

The following graduates and undergraduates acted as ushers: C. B. Morse, T. O. Gavett, J. W. Gavett, H. G. Thompson, Vincent Miner, Martin B. Stutsman.

The customary reception to the graduates followed the commencement. It was tendered by last year's class, and took place at the Casino. It was as delightful as the past receptions. The alumni were well represented in the floor.

Plainfield, N. J., June 21, 1907.

The Senate yesterday confirmed the appointment of Judge William Morrow, of Belvidere, as a member of the State Board of Education. The selection will prove a disappointment to the many friends in this city and Union county of DeWitt C. Ivins, who was mentioned for the place and was being earnestly considered by the governor.

The Daily Press extends its congratulations to William Hicks Osgood, winner of The Daily Press prize offered for the best composition written by a Plainfield High School student and relating to a municipal affair. His subject was "Should Plainfield Own its Own Water Works System?" and it is treated in a well defined manner from the affirmative side of the question. The composition has undergone no revision since it was written and is produced in full in another column of today's issue.

CALL-MAN REFUSES TO QUIT FIRE DEPARTMENT

HIS RESIGNATION ASKED BUT HE FAILS TO RESPOND.

Because of a dissatisfaction which has existed between Chief Doane and Daniel Force, one of the call men in the local fire department, and the refusal of Mr. Force to resign from the department after turning in his keys and declining to do duty, charges have been preferred against the fireman.

The papers in the case were in the hands of Councilman H. D. Hibbard at last night's meeting of the Common Council, and he intended to present them. On second thought, however, there being but a quorum present, he decided to wait until the regular July meeting. It was thought that Mr. Force would send in his resignation before this time, but he has refused to do so, even in response to a letter sent to him by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh. It is said that he has not answered Mr. Marsh's letter.

The trouble, it is said, has been of long standing, and grew out of the refusal on the part of the fire officials to make changes in the call system to conform to Mr. Force's ideas. Failing to have the changes adopted, it is said, that he refused to do duty and at the same time turned in his keys, but when his resignation was asked for he declined to comply with the request. Now the fire committee proposes, through the Common Council, to take such action as will remove Mr. Force from the department.

—All previous assortments of fresh vegetables and fruits will be surpassed at Neuman Brothers tomorrow. The list will include Jersey berries, peas and asparagus, Maryland berries, green and wax beans, lettuce tomatoes and cucumbers.

William Hicks Osgood Successful Competitor in Municipal Composition Contest.

A P. H. H. S. GRADUATE

Chose for His Subject, "Should Plainfield Own Its Water Works System?"

Among the prize-winners announced at the Plainfield High School graduation exercises last night was William Hicks Osgood, a member of the senior class, who was awarded The Daily Press prize of $10 for the best composition dealing with a subject of municipal interest. His effort dealt with the question, "should Plainfield Own Its Water Works System?" and was as follows:

Water is a necessity. It is as important to the sustenance of our community as the food we eat or the air we breathe. We must obtain water in some way. The question to be considered is: Shall we depend for our water supply upon a private corporation or shall we control this essential commodity ourselves?

In attempting to make our decision let us profit by the experience of other cities; what they have accomplished, we may reasonably expect to accomplish. According to accurate statistics, 53.7 per cent. of all water supply systems in the United States are owned by municipalities; of thirty-eight cities with one hundred thousand or more inhabitants, thirty own their own water works; of forty cities with a population of from fifty thousand to one hundred thousand, twenty-nine own their own water works. When it is considered that a great many of our cities, which do not control their water supply, are in the grip of merciless political combinations which thwart the execution of the people's will, it may readily be seen that these statistics represent an overwhelming weight of public opinion in favor of municipal ownership of water works.

The majority of the citizens of the United States have voted, through their representatives, for municipal ownership of water supply systems. Why have they so voted? Because, aside from other considerations, they have found that such water supply systems are cheaper. It is a recognized fact, proven by experience, that public ownership of water supply tends to lower rates. The private company depends for its existence upon the profits which it can make in conducting the business. If there were no dividends to pay the rates would be correspondingly lower. This may account for the fact that charges of private companies in the United States average 43 per cent. over charges by municipalities for similar service. This practically means that nearly 50 per cent. of the rate of a private corporation is profit. It means that municipal ownership of the water supply should save each citizen at least 33.33 per cent. of his water bill. Is it remarkable, that in the face of such circumstances, the decided trend of American cities is in favor of public ownership of water supply?

In the state of Massachusetts, where municipal ownership has been most extensively tried, the people are the most enthusiastic over the results of the municipal system. Some time ago the city of Duluth bought the rights of the company which supplied the city with water. The city authorities spent one million dollars for the company's plant and mains. In three years they had paid the interest on the purchase price out of the profits from the water works; they had saved two hundred and seventy-three thousand, five hundred and forty-six dollars and seventy-eight cents; they had reduced the rates to two-thirds of what they originally were. Duluth is one of a large number of cities which have succeeded. Is it not reasonable to expect that Plainfield would succeed?

Even if such a venture is not directly profitable to the city, it can hardly fail to be self-supporting. According to A. H. Leach & Company, one of the largest bond houses in New York city: "All water works are regarded as self-sustaining." If, after purchasing the rights of the present company, the city is only able to charge the same household rate and to conduct the water works at cost, there will be a direct gain to the city of the rent which it pays to the company for the water used in the hydrants; there will be effected an advantageous relation between the water supply and its disposal as sewage. But Plainfield may expect to do more than merely pay expenses. The situation of the city is such that pure artesian water may be obtained in large quantities and at little cost. If the city should take possession of the water company's mains, it could supply water to the neighboring towns at a large profit. With efficient management on the part of the city authorities, the municipal water supply system should pay expenses, reduce the present rates, and return an annual dividend.

The debt which would be contracted in taking over the water company's rights by purchase or condemnation, would be more than offset by the increased value of the city's bonds, owing to the possession of a paying water supply system. Such a system would be a valuable asset for Plainfield.

Now is the time for the city to act. Plainfield is a prosperous and growing city in the most populous part of New Jersey. As a suburb of New York city, Plainfield is bound to become larger as time goes on. When a city is still small its policy in this matter should be determined. The value of the holdings of the present company is increasing year by year. The richer the company may become, the more difficult and the more expensive it will be to get possession of its rights. A community is practically powerless before organized millions arrayed in opposition to its wishes. If Plainfield should continue to be supplied with water under the present, it is laying up a debt which sooner or later future generations of its citizens will have to pay. For the time will come, when the supplying of water for public and private consumption shall be universally conceded "a natural municipal function."

Lant had charge of the strawberries, and those who looked after the strawberry short-cake table were Mrs. Mansfield Smith, Miss Georgie Beekman, Mrs. R. L. Lee, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Fritts. Those assisting in the serving of ice cream were Mr. McCormick and Mr. Gilmore.

The church was thronged with members and friends throughout the evening and the patronage was liberal. The committee in charge will meet in a few days and ascertain the profits to the league.

Dr. Hecht Appointed.

Governor Stokes has appointed Dr. John P. Hecht, of Somerville, as a member of the Board of Managers, of the New Jersey Sanitarium for Tuberculosis Diseases at Glen Gardner in Hunterdan county. The sanitarium will be opened on July 1, next.

HOW SOME MEN SUCCEED.

Remarkable Case of Penuriousness Told by Florist.

A florist in the outskirts of the city has come across what he considers the meanest man in all New York. "He recently bought a fine summer home and estate about a half mile from my nursery," said the florist. "A few weeks ago he was entertaining some old friends, and showing them around the neighborhood. In the course of their peregrinations he brought them to my flower patch, on which I have a number of large glass-houses. Wishing to display his wealth by purchasing something, he stopped at a cucumber frame and asked me the price of various specimens of that vegetable. I pointed a large one out to him at 25 cents, another at 15 cents, and so on; but Mr. Suddenwealth would have none of them. His eye fell on a particularly tiny specimen. 'How much?' he asked, pointing to it. I told him five cents. Mr. Croesus brought out a $50 bill. I couldn't change it just then, so I told him he could pay later. That suited him fine. Just as I was about to pull the cucumber he requested me to leave it where it was, as he would send his man for it in the evening. He went away smiling, and sent his coachman to the nursery at the end of a week, by which time, of course, the tiny cucumber had lengethened into a large and brilliant vegetable! What's more he's forgottten to divvy up the nickel!"

LOOKING FOR FREE ADVICE.

People of Both Sexes Seek to Evade Payment of Doctors' Bills.

Every doctor has had unpleasant experiences of the economical minded person who takes advantage of a casual meeting at the dinner table or elsewhere to importune him for counsel as to his ailments. It is not always easy to get rid of these pests. Abernethy was, as we know, equal to the occasion when a wealthy alderman whom he met at a friend's house recited his catelogue of woes, ending up with the question: "What should I take?" The reply was: "Take advice." A French doctor recently rid himself in an equally ingenious manner of a patient who sought to impose on his good nature. He was accosted one afternoon on a crowded boulevard by a lady notorious for this practice. She at once began to tell of her afflictions, making particular complaint of pain in her hypogastric region. To which the doctor gravely replied: "My dear madam, I must examine you. Be good enough to take off your things!"

The Queerest Policemen.

"The strangest policemen in the world are in Cape Town, South Africa," said a man who had traveled in the Dark Continent. "They are the Kaffir negroes. They wear a uniform similar to that of an English soldier, but instead of a club and a revolver they carry a long spear with a red tassles near the point and a short stick which has a heavy brass ball on the end and is attached to the policeman's belt by a cord some 60 feet long. They throw the ball and stick and the cord winds around the prisoner like a ranchman's lariat and prevents him from walking. They are not allowed to carry firearms, and only make an arrest when ordered by their white officers to do so, but if they are ever sent for a man he had better go without question, for he either goes to jail or the hospital if he resists."

Dogs and Their Treatment.

Columbus has a new dog catcher. It is hoped that he is a humane man and does not enter upon his duties with a hatred of dogs. Some people have an idea that a dog is always to be assailed like a snake. It is in that spirit that a boy throws a stone at a dog going down the street, and harming nobody. "A dog's life" is a common phrase, which indicates that every man's hand is against it. This is the fate of man's most faithful companion, the most intelligent animal outside of the pale of humanity. Let us always remember that sympathy for a brute accompanies sympathy for a fellow-mortal. You can risk your fortune on that proposition. — Ohio State Journal.

The Art of Walking.

To walk gracefully is an art, one which is seldom the accomplishment of the American woman. The head should be kept well back, and the whole weight of the body should rest on each foot in turn. Set the foot down squarely, striking the ball of the foot first. Keep the chin drawn back well horizontally, which will cause the chest to be lifted, and thus insure deep breathing. Practice walking indoors with a book on the head and the instructions will be easily understood.

Tactful.

"How was it Dr. Knowit got such a big fee from Talkative?" "Because when he was called to attend Mrs. Talkative for a slight nervous trouble he told her she had an acute attack of inflammatory verbosity." "Well." "And recommended absolute quiet as the only means of averting paroxysms of cacaothes loquendi. She's scared dumb."

"Frightened by False Fire."

"I'm afraid to take fencing lessons, for 'tis such an exhausting exercise." "Not a bit of it. Who told wou so?" "Maizie is taking them, and she always is talking about how she feints so often while she's practicing."

DEEP-BREATHING IMPORTANT.

It Strengthens and Develops the Lungs, Overcoming Weak Tendencies.

Deep breathing, that is taking long, full breaths right down into the lungs, cannot be practiced too often in the open air, and the clearer and purer the air the deeper you should breathe. It will seem a hard task at first, but one will soon find it pleasant, and the results will be apparent in straighter shoulders, better developed chests, clearer skin and sweeter breath. This method of breathing is the real "elixir of life," and better than any youth-restorer on the market.

In a short time you will be breathing correctly, awake or asleep. It is to be remembered that deep breathing also fills out sunken and hollow cheeks, clears the lungs and reduces the abdomen.

It is a comparatively easy task to teach children who have not acquired fixed bad habits, whose clothing admits of perfect freedom, how to breathe properly. The habit of deep breathing is formed quickly, and in normal conditions is maintained through life.

The weak, who have cramped their lungs and relaxed all the breathing muscles, will find that the formation of the new habit requires persistent daily practice, but when it once is established they will have health and vigor.—Physical Culture.

MIND A TELEGRAPH.

How Sympathetic Messages Are Passed Between Distant Friends.

Are you a sensitive? There is no doubt that some persons are so organized as to make natural sensitives. They have remarkable intuitive power, which means that they receive impressions easily. Supposing two sensitives to be closely related to one another or drawn together by a bond of sympathy, and supposing them to be in different parts of the world, and the life of the one to be in danger, the first thought he would project into space would be for his distant friend. If that friend is actively engaged at the time the message may be lost, but if he happens to be in a passive state his brain will receive some impression, clear or confused, which will make him think of the absentee and render him anxious, as if something had gone wrong with him. Such messages are more common at night, because we are less preoccupied than during the day. By means of this wireless telegraphy an image is produced on the brain which is projected outwards, causing the absent friend to be seen as if in body, and even the actual circumstances of his dangerous position may be produced. Thus saith Dr. Bernard Hollander, of London.

Brains.

Famous brains are of four sorts. The lowest group contains the minds that are stimulated greatly by alcohol, tea and other drugs by impressions derived from the senses; the second group contains the infant prodigies, whose intellectual powers wane in middle age; the third group contains the pathological cases usually terminating in insanity; the fourth and highest group is that of true geniuses, whose powers remain unimpaired until old age. This is Hausemann's classification.

Spitzka has come to the conclusion that men eminent in exact sciences, like astronomy and mathematics, have the greatest average brain weight. Next come the men of action, including statesmen and artists, after these come the biologists, geologists and other representatives of the descriptive sciences.

Production of Oil.

Although the production of crude petroleum in America is making enormous strides every year, the bulk of this comes from new territories which yield heavy oils containing little or no spirit. In fact, the fields which have in the past supplied the world with petroleum spirit and high-class illuminating oils are, it is said, failing, so much so that the center of production is no longer in the eastern states, but lies equally between the gulf states and Calafornia. Recent work in the midcontinental fields shows, however, that there is a prospect of the supply of high-grade oils being increased.—Engineer.

Stage Murder in Turkey.

On one point the Turkish censor of the drama is inflexible—there shall be no murder committed on the stage. This is in order to prevent corruption by evil example. Consequently the dramatic effect of many plays is somewhat marred by the manner in which principals destined to be murdered are rushed off the stage, and, after receiving the fatal thrust out of sight of the audience, stagger back from the wings to sing their death songs.

The Truth of It.

Blusters—I dare say, I do look mad. I understand Jigley says I'm the worst liar he ever saw.

Wiseman—Oh, that's a gross libel.

Blusters—Of course, it is.

Wiseman—Well, I should say. Why, everybody admits you're a pretty good liar.—The Catholic Standard and Times.

At Cross Purposes.

"Old Pengborn is working himself to skin and bone trying to keep that boy of his in college."

"And what's the boy doing?"

"Doing his best to be expelled."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Marshall & Ball Clothing
The Highest Type of Ready-to-Wear.

Summer Weight Suits

That Stand Summer Weather Conditions

In ordinary clothing light weight fabrics usually succumb to Summer weather conditions in short order. It's because of careless treatment of materials before the shears have been put to work.

Marshall & Ball Light Weight Garments stand the sudden shower baths of Summer days. They retain their graceful lines under all conditions because the cloths, interlinings and stays are properly shrunken.

It's the shape-retaining qualities and individuality built in M. & B. Garments that distinguish them from the ordinary, and has made them the Highest Type of Ready-to-Wear.

Both radical and conservative models are here in Summer Suits of blue serge and the new gray shades, at $12 to $35.

SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

LACK OF ENERGY.

MR. A. G. LATUBYS.

No man or woman can be successful or happy if they lack energy. If they get up in the morning dreading the days work ahead they will accomplish very little. A great many people are this way. The cause is lack of vitality. Vitality or energy is the power to go and keep on going without becoming more than healthily tired. It comes from a perfectly working system just as power comes from a perfectly working engine. If you lack this power something is out of order. Ten to one it's your stomach.

Take two bottles of Cooper's New Discovery. It will get the stomach in shape. See if energy and ambition don't come back before the two bottles are gone.

This letter is from a man who tried it:

"After suffering for some time from stomach trouble, loss of appetite, headaches and a kind of 'all tuckered out' feeling I decided to try Cooper's New Discovery."

"I used to get up in the morning with my tongue coated and sick at my stomach. I would feel as though it was almost impossible to drag myself to work. Lots of times I had dizzy spells and backaches. After I used several bottles all these symptoms began to disappear and soon I began to feel like my old self again. Now I feel like a new man. It is a pleasure to work, for I always feel like it. I eat well, and sleep well and am sure I will have no further trouble with my stomach." A. G. Latubys, 167 Porter St., Detroit, Mich.

It is estimated that nearly half a million bottles of the famous Cooper medicines were sold during Mr. Cooper's recent demonstration in Chicago. We are agents.

BOSS BARBERS ORGANIZE TO CONSIDER DEMANDS.

Can Now Formally Discuss Changes Advocated by the Journeymen.

The boss barbers of the city to the number of seventeen met last night for the purpose of organization so that any demands or requests made by the journeymen barbers might properly be received. This action is the direct result of a movement on the part of the journeymen to secure certain concessions from the bosses, including the closing of the shops all day on every holiday and the proposition to increase the price for hair cutting and shaving.

The following officers were elected: President, William Feiring; vice president, Theodore Kurzshals, Jr.; secretary, J. F. W. Bamberger; treasurer, Alfred Seidel. A committee consisting of William Claassen and Frank Caruso, was appointed to call on the bosses who were not present and secure their attendance at a meeting to be held Thursday night, June 27, when the requests of the journeymen will be received in proper form.

It is understood that the journeymen want to increase the price of haid-cutting from twenty-five cents and that for shaving from ten to fifteen cents but it is reported that the bosses do not consider the proposition favorably and it is not likely to go through. There is a feeling, however, that the shops will be closed all day on holidays.

Grand Jury Summoned.

Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze has given orders to Mayor Charles J. Fisk, as foreman of the grand jury, to have that body summoned together at 5 o'clock this afternoon to hear a charge of an especial nature. Even to the heads of the grand jury the subject of Justice Swayze's remarks is not positively known. It is believed, however, judging from statements made early in the term by Justice Swayze, that he will charge the members of the grand jury on the subject of club licenses and the law in connection with the sale of liquor in organizations such as the Elks, Turn Verein, Town and Country Club, Elizabeth Club and similar organizations.

Funeral of John O'Keeffe.

The funeral services of John O'Keeffe were held this morning at 9 o'clock from the home on West Fifth street and at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's church, where a solemn requiem mass was said. Father Bogan was the celebrant, Father Delehanty the deacon and Father Sciola the sub-deacon. A delegation from the local hod-carriers' union, of which Mr. O'Keeffe was a member, attended and gave a beautiful floral tribute. Relatives and friends also contributed flowers. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery and the pall-bearers were John Kane, Dennis Sheehan, Patrick Lynch, Thomas Saverd, William Sheehan and John Ahearn.

Investigation Will Continue.

After passing a resolution to continue the investigation of charges of state extravagances, after declaring them proved by the testimony taken from the Hahn investigating committee, the House of Assembly took the bull by the horns yesterday afternoon and adjourned until July 5, leaving the Senate floundering around as to their powers to go ahed and enact laws according to the reform message of Governor Stokes. After the resolution was passed, Speaker Lethbridge reappointed the Hahn committee to continue the investigation.

GOLF TOURNEY ON.

Dave Brown Led In Initial Play at Philadelphia.

Dave Brown, of Boston, who won the British open championship in 1886 and tied with Will Anderson in 1903 at Baltusrol, was the hero of the first 18 holes in the open championship yesterday at the Philadelphia Cricket Club. He led the field of seventy-eight starters with a card of 75, which included five 3s. He took 80 in the afternoon, but is not out of the running by any means. A 6 on the third, due to a wild drive behind a mound bunker, and a 7 on the fourth, where he tried to play his second through a tree, proved Brown's undoing.

Brady and George Blouse, of the Marine and Field Club, led the American born pros at 153 and 156. The three homebreds who had the greatest following, Macnamara, of Fall River, "Marty" O'Loughlin, of the Plainfield Country Club, and Sherwood, of Memphis, recorded respectively, 161, 162 and 166. O'Loughlin's partner, George Thomson, of Wee Burn, finished inside the dead line with 169. "Marty" returned a card of 81 for each round of 18 holes and he played an even steady game. It is predicted that he will even do better today, being better acquainted with the course.

JUSTICE SWAYZE RULES ON LODGE AND CLUB LICENSES

Informs the Grand Jury That Organizations Must Not Sell Liquor in Their Rooms on Sundays or Election Days.

HAS LOCAL IMPORT

Question From Mayor Fisk, the Foreman, Brings Reply and Broad Smile From the Court.

According to Supreme Court Justice Swayze's interpretation of the law, neither social clubs, lodges or other organizations are permitted to sell liquor in the club-rooms or elsewhere on Sundays or election days, nor dispose of it in any way whatsoever, whether the members use slips or cash to pay for the drinks.

This broad and sweeping presentment was made in the Union County Court, yesterday, in response to an inquiry from the Grand Jury now in session, asking whether social clubs which are permitted to sell liquor under the act of March 20, 1891, are authorized to sell on election days and Sundays.

Justice Swayze very promptly declared that they had no such right. "If social clubs are shown to have sold liquors to anyone, even to their own members on election day or Sunday," said Justice Swayze, "the person making the sale is subject to indictment, and if the club has authorized the sale it is also liable to indictment."

The question was also raised as to whether lodges, clubs and voluntary associations without license may furnish liquor to their members upon tickets or slips for which the members ultimately pay, and Justice Swayze reaffirmed his statement made in the first instance leaving no room for doubt in the minds of the Grand Jurors.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city, who is foreman of the jury, said that probably many clubs had been violating the law under a misunderstanding. He asked if the ends of justice would not be met by directing the prosecutor to notify those places that they are violating the law and must stop at once. Justice Swayze smiled broadly and replied:

"I will not presume to dictate or suggest the action of the Grand Jury. I can only advise you as to legal questions."

The only club in this city which is affected by the decision of Justice Swayze is the Plainfield Lodge of Elks. That organization has a club license to dispense liquors to its members and it has always had restrictive hours as to when liquor could be served in the lodge rooms.

Justice Swayze announced yesterday that he would meet the Grand Jury again on Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock for the further consideration of court matters.

Christian Hebrew to Preach.

I. Silmon, a Christian Jew, who has been speaking in many of the largest churches throughout the country, will preach at the Church of the Holy Cross tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. He will tell of his own conversion and that of other people of his race, and will describe conditions as they exist in Russia today. Mr. Silmon invites all Hebrews to attend the service and hear him.

Seeking Merry-go-Round Consents.

The owner of a merry-go-round is seeking consents from property owners for the erection of his contrivance on the lot at Watchung avenue and Fourth street. It was said at police headquarters that a license would not be granted until the operator had enough consents to justify the action. There is a question about his securing the consents.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS WILL OBSERVE MEMORIAL DAY

DELEGATIONS FROM BROOKLYN AND PORT CHESTER TO SWELL RANK.

In accordance with their annual custom, the Knights of Pythias of this city will observe Pythian memorial day tomorrow. The observance will be in the hands of the Uniformed Rank, and Crescent Company has been busy for several weeks making arrangements.

Delegations from the company at Portchester, N. Y., and Rathbone Company, Brooklyn, will join with Crescent Company in the observance, as guests of the Plainfield knights. They will be met at the North Avenue station at 1:45 o'clock by Crescent Company. From the station the knights will march to the different cemeteries and decorate the graves of dead brethren.

After the memorial march, which will end in Scotch Plains, to where the journey from this city will be made by special trolley, the knights will have a supper. The affair will be held in Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains.

LOSS ON CADMUS MILLS LESS THAN FIRST ESTIMATE

BELIEVED NOW THAT THE TOTAL DAMAGE WILL NOT EXCEED $7,000.

Further investigation into the affairs attendant upon the fire at the Commercial Mills, Thursday morning, shows that A. L. Cadmus will not suffer as big a loss as reported at first. It was then estimated that the loss on the buildings and contents would be about $25,000, but an examination of the proeprty and the contents shows that it will probably not exceed $6,000 or $7,000. It is thought that a greater part of the grain, flour and oats, as well as some of the hay can be sold at a slight profit.

The greatest loss to property will be in the destruction of the frame sheds, and it is estimated that the brick mill can be repaired at an expense of about $1,500. The insurance carried by Mr. Cadmus had the eighty per cent clause, and while his property and contents were not adequately covered, there probably being about $5,000 insurance, he will receive less than under ordinary conditions. It is now believed that Mr. Cadmus will start in business again as soon as the insurance is adjusted and the property can be repaired.

HELD SYLVAN MEETING.

Last Session of Season of Missionary Society a Pleasant One.

As the guests of Mrs. J. W. Gavett, thirty-five members of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel spent yesterday morning and afternoon amid sylvan scenes. It was the last meeting of the organization for the season.

The society met at the chapel shortly before 10:30 o'clock, and at that hour the thirty-five boarded a stage. They were driven to Mrs. Gavett's cottage, where a course luncheon was served at noon. After lunch the regular business meeting was held, and the assigned topics were discussed. The rest of the afternoon was given over to games, chats and strolls. The return trip was made at 5 o'clock.

Get Writ of Certiorari.

In the case of Josephine Mason and Carrie L. Schorb against Henry Haurand, in which an effort is being made to compel Henry Haurand to give up possession of the store where he conducts the Central Cafe, Supreme Court Justice Swayze, last night, issued a writ of certiorari for the defendant. The proceedings before Judge Swift, of the Elizabeth District Court, will be reviewed. F. J. Blatz is counsel for Haurand.

N.P.H.S. COMMENCEMENT

Diplomas Presented to Class '07 at Annual Exercises Last Night.

ONLY SIX MEMBERS

Prof. Francis Green Speaker of the Evening—Yale Cup Goes to Carl Steiner.

The annual commencement exercises of the North Plainfield Public School were held last night in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, when five young women were graduated from the regular four year course and one young man received a diploma as a post-graduate. The former were the Misses Myra Emmons, Edith Viola GaNun, Martha Lavinia Hand, Ethel Most and Florence Smalley, and the young man was Wilbur Groendyke Dunning.

The hall was well-filled with the parents and friends of the school, who thoroughly enjoyed the excellent program. The platform was attractively decorated with flowers in honor of the graduates.

James R. Joy, as president of the Board of Education, was in charge of the exercises, which began with an invocation by Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons, pastor of Grace M. E. church. During the evening the High School chorus, under the direction of Herbert Lloyd, musical instructor in the schools, sang three numbers, "We Are Singers, Singing Blithely," Rissini; "The Yeoman's Wedding Song," Poniatowski, and "There Is Music by the River," Pinsuti.

The salutatory essay was delivered by Miss Florence Smalley. Her subject was "Is the Story of Pocohontas True?" The essay follows:

"This year many are turning their attention to Jamestown, one of the oldest and most interesting cities of our country. When thinking of Jamestown, one naturally recalls the early historical stories connected with it, and of these the one best known is the story of Pocohontas. Owing to the fact that there are two narratives now in circulation, the truth of the story of Pocohontas has been widely discussed. The one is only a letter written by Smith to a friend in London, which was edited under the name of 'A True Relation;' the other written by Smith and other members of the Jamestown colony was published under the title, 'The General History of Virginia.'

"In January, 1608, John Smith, while out on an exploring trip was taken prisoner by some Indians, and after a few days had elapsed he was sent back to Jamestown. What happened to him while in the hands of the Indians is the subject of much discussion. In his own tract, 'A True Relation,' Smith simply says that the Powhatan treated him kindly and courteously, sending him back to Jamestown.

"But in the 'General History' written by Smith and other members of the colony and published in London sixteen years after his capture by the Indians, we get a much fuller and more elaborate narrative. We are told that after Smith had been taken to the chief's large wigwam the Indians debated together. Presently two large stones were laid before the Powhatan or chief. Smith was dragged to these stones and his head laid upon them. While the warriors were standing with clubs raised the chief's young daughter, Pocohontas, rushed forward and laid her head upon Smith's, whereupon her father saved the prisoner's life.

"For two centuries and a half the latter and fuller account was accepted while the earlier and briefer was ignored. In fact this is the only event that most people remember in connection with the eventful career of Smith.

"In recent years the difference between the two stories has attracted much attention and the conclusion hastily reached by many is that in the more romantic version, Smith was untruthful. It is first assumed that if the Pocohontas incident had really occurred, we should be sure to find it in Smith's own narrative written shortly afterward. Then, too, it has been said that when Pocohontas visited London and was received as a princess, Smith invented the story in order to magnify his own name by linking it with hers. The braggadocia theory of Smith's career is supported by such assumptions. While under it all lies the belief that this incident was an extraordinary one, something that would not have been likely to happen.

"The question has been asked, 'Why did not Smith speak of this event in the letter written to his friend in England in 1608, while the details were fresh in his mind?' We are not certain that he did not mention it, for the editor of the 'True Relation' admitted that he suppressed a part of the letter as being too

FORMER PUPILS SURPRISE TEACHER WHO RETIRES

PRESENT MISS ELLEN E. NILES WITH A PURSE OF $550.

Miss Ellen E. Niles, who retires from her position as a teacher in the Plainfield High School, this year, after a continuous service of thirty-eight years, was handsomely remembered on Thursday, when a purse of $550 was presented to her. The money was contributed by the Alumni Association, undergraduates and many outsides friends, including former pupils who did not graduate from the school. The presentation was a complete surprise to Miss Niles, for she did not have the slightest hint of the plain.

Miss Niles was the oldest member of the High School faculty and during her long service has been very successful as a teacher. Hundreds of young men and young women who are now occupying positions of trust and honor received a portion of their instructions from Miss Niles and can look back with pleasure and gratitude to the help and assistance she gave in solving perplexing problems.

For the present Miss Niles will visit her mother, who resides at Binghamton, N. Y., and later she may return to Plainfield. While her plans have not been definitely decided it is quite likely that she may go abroad next year and spend sometime in travelling.

ANGRY NEGRESS MURDERS HER WHITE HUSBAND

ROSELLE SCENE OF THE CRIME: FOLLOWED QUARREL OVER A FISH.

Mrs. Charles Rash, aged 24 years, a negress, murdered her husband, who is a white man, at their home in Roselle Borough at 7 o'clock, last night, after which she took a knife and slashed his body in a frightful manner. The woman used a revolver, .32 calibre, with which to commit the crime. She fired two shots, one bullet penetrating the brain and the other missing fire. Mrs. Rash was arrested soon afterward by the Elizabeth police, who were summoned, and lodged in the county jail. She acknowledged that she killed her husband.

The murder was the result of a quarrel between husband and wife. Rash was in Elizabeth during the afternoon. When he returned home about 6 o'clock he had a fish and he asked his wife to clean it and cook it for supper. He then went to the home of his employer, Henry Krouse, on business. He was there about an hour and when he reached his home again the fish lay where he put it and the wife had made no effort to clean it or get supper. Going into the house he secured a knife and returning a few minutes to where his wife was sitting on the back porch ordered her to clean the fish. She made no reply, but slowly arose, walked into the house, picked up a revolver and going to the door fired twice at her husband. The first shot was a deadly aim and Rash was killed instantly. Rushing to where the lifeless body lay she wrenched the knife from her husband's hand and began slashing him in the back and about the head.

Neighbors, who were attracted by the disturbance, notified the police and within a short time after the murder the woman was placed under arrest. She made no effort to conceal her crime or run away.

Mrs. Rash formely lived in Elizabeth and is a graduate from the High School in that city. She is exceptionally bright. She married her husband four years ago and so far as anyone knew the pair always lived happily.

NO REASON FOR ALARM

In the Legislature Situation, Says One Who Knows the Game Thoroughly.

EEPUBLICANS STRONG

Nothing In Sight to Indicate That Democrats Will Have Club Sufficiently Strong to Beat Them Down.

Much local interest has been aroused by the political situation at Trenton. The things that are fomenting and forming there affect this city or residents of it, more or less directly, and Plainfielders have been watching developments. The views of a well known citizen of this city, who follows the political game closely, which were secured by The Daily Press in an interview this morning, are accordingly worth careful consideration. He said:

"That there is nothing in the present political situation in the State to excite either the alarm or the anxiety of the people is evidenced by the fact that the legislators are receiving little if any mail from their constituents. Through the maze of political play and counter-play it appears that the Senate stands ready and willing to adopt the Governor's recommendations. The Democrats in the House fail to see any advantage in that because it will give them no political capital to water or to inflate next fall. Even the partisan Democratic committee admitted that the corps of clerks and assistants in the State service were giving honorable and efficient service. Up to this time all attempts have failed to reveal a condition similar to the Democratic administration of 1895.

"There is certainly no demand from the people, aside from the Governor's well-timed suggestions for any new legislation at this session. The sincerity of the Republican Senate cannot be questioned. At the session last winter did it not pass a civil service bill and also one the practical effect of which would have been a step in the direction of a popular choice for united States Senator? In any event the latter is not very pertinent at this time because a Senator in Congress will not be chosen for four years to come and the question could be wisely and properly left over until next winter.

"The railroad commission just appointed by the act of the present Legislature has both ministerial and administrative powers and it would seem the part of wisdom to let them organize and apply those powers before attempting anything additional on that line, at least not until next winter.

"The rumors that the Dryden forces are willing to let the Democrats have their way in order to defeat and embarrass the Republican party does not appear logical because they are certainly interested with the rest of good citizens in preventing a return to power of the radical Democratic party with its extreme views on social and economic problems, which if enacted into law, would be disastrous to the people, especially the workingman. The present high standard of wages and widely diffused prosperity can only be maintained by the most cautious and patient statesmanship — qualifications unknown to Democracy—and the friends of Mr. Dryden must fully realize that potent fact.

"Does it therefore appear either wise or reasonable for the friends of Mr. Dryden to plan the destruction of the Republican forces in this State which have been so helpful to the national Republican party?"

Miss Voehl Entertains S. I. 6.

Miss Irene Voehl, of West Front street, entertained the S. I. 6 Crokinole Club at her home last night, it being the last gathering for the season. Miss Lucetta Clark was the winner of the women's prize, while Arthur V. Austin won the men's prize. Supper was served after the play. Singing and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. The club will give an outing later in the summer which will probably be in the nature of a sailing trip.

GRAND JURY ARRAIGNS ELIZABETH CITY GOVERNMENT

Declares Municipality is Controlled and Administered By and For the Saloon and Brewery Interests.

SCORES THE PETIT JURY

Present System Said to Be Used So As to Make Juries Part of the Political Machines—Immediate Change Advised.

That the brewery and saloon men are in absolute control of the city government of Elizabeth, that the city is governed in the interest of the saloons and breweries, and that the excise laws are practically nullified by the present system of choosing petit jurors is flatly charged by the Grand Jury, of which Mayor Charles J. Fisk is chairman. The arraignment of the Elizabeth city government and of the petit jurors was made in a presentment to Supreme Court Justice Swayze, who called the jury before him at a special session of the court late yesterday afternoon.

In opening the presentment, the jurors declared they felt certain that a great many places other than the ones against which indictments had been returned were conducted in violation of the excise law. For certain reasons it had been impossible to get evidence against them, and the jury suggested vigorous action under the Crimes Act to change conditions. It was suggested that the prosecutor be instructed to notify the mayors or chiefs of police in communities where such places were operated to proceed against them without delay; a similar notice to be sent by the judge of the Court of Over and Terminer or Quarter Sessions to the Sheriff, respecting such places in the townships. Under the Crimes Act, the mayor or other responsible official so notified who fails to act within ten days is guilty of a disdemeanor.

The enforcement of all laws in relation to excise matters depends entirely upon the stand taken by the proper authorities. If everyone vested with the proper authority does his duty, there will be absolutely no trouble in enforcing these laws to the letter. One great trouble lies with the licensing power. All Boards of Excise, Boards of Trustees, the Common Council and other parties having the license power, including the judge of the court, should take more care and should take steps to have full investigations made before granting a license, and to absolutely refuse to grant a license or renew a license where the parties applying for same have ever been convicted of any violation of any provision of the excise laws or Crimes Act, and also refuse all licenses where the parties at all times have not strictly obeyed the law in any particular, whether such parties have ever been before the court or not. In nearly every municipality and in all parts of the county the number of places granted license to sell liquor is greatly in excess of the needs of the community, and a detriment to the peace and good morals of our county. This matter is in the power of the licensing power to correct, failing to do so, we recommend that the Legislature be petitioned to enact a law limiting the number of places to be licensed to sell intoxicating liquors to one for every 1,000 population, and that the minimum license fee be raised to at least $1,000. In the opinion of this Grand Inquest a limited number of saloons and a high license fee will do more than anything else to correct the evils and regulate the selling of intoxicating liquors.

We find in the City of Elizabeth an unusual state of affairs. The city is evidently governed in the interest of the brewery, saloon and liquor interests. The president of the Common Council is the president of a brewery, several members of the Common Council are connected with the brewery interests. The Common Council has appointed an excise board, every member of which is pledged to the liquor interest. We are informed that one member secures all the insurance of the liquor saloons; all the cigars sold in the liquor saloons must be bought from another member, and all the painting and repairing must be done by another member.

Even the members of the police

CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

MR. AND MRS. I. B. HILL ENTERTAIN LARGE GATHERING OF FRIENDS.

To mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Hill, of Westervelt avenue, held a reception last night. They entertained guests to the number of seventy-five at a most delightful affair.

The house was prettily decorated with ferns and flowers. Green and white were the colors in the parlor, and red and white in the dining room. Mrs. Hill received, assisted by her mother, Mrs. S. E. Burgess, beneath an arch of greens. Directly above where they stood the figures 1882-1907 gleamed in silver foil.

Miss Case and Miss Burd, of the First Methodist church choir, sang solos and duets, and Clifford Braider, organist of the First Presbyterian church, played piano solos. T. H. Cuming, an old friend of Mr. Hills, gave a reminiscent talk. He read a letter of regret and congratulation from the clergyman who wedded Mr. and Mrs. Hill, in Fall Rfver, Mass., Rev. Mr. Graves, now assistant at Tremont Temple, Boston. A collation was served. A large number of gifts were receved, cut glass as well as silver.

CASE AGAINST PERKINS ENDS IN A DISMISSAL

CITY CLERK MAC MURRAY TESTIFIED FOR HIM AT HACKENSACK.

The hearing of Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, before Justice Heath, at Hackensack, yesterday morning, on a charge of violating the automobile speed ordinance while passing through Hackensack, resulted in the discharge of the prisoner. Patrolman Graber, who arrested the Republican State leader on June 7, said his bicycle speedometer indicated that the Perkins auto, No. 4,411, was going twenty-five miles an hour when the arrest was made. The Assemblyman, though having counsel, ex-Assemblyman Clarence Mabie, put the patrolman through a severe cross-examination, bewildering him.

"How do you know your speedometer is reliable and correct?" counsel asked.

"Because I made a test behind Mayor Linkroum's auto going thirty-two miles an hour and the speed register was the same as mine," said the patrolman.

"So you admit, do you, that you allowed your Mayor to exceed the speed limit on your own streets without arresting him?" exclaimed the Assemblyman, with a smile.

Chief of Police Dunn remarked that the test was on a side street and that he considered the line of questions irrelevant and senseless.

James T. MacMurray, city clerk of Plainfield, and a member of the New Jersey committee of the Jamestown Exposition, was produced as a witness, said Assemblyman Perkins' auto was going not faster than eight miles an hour when the arrest was made. He was in the machine at the time. Justice Heath said the speedometer wasn't reliable and dismissed the case, and everybody continued to laugh.

Golden Anniversary.

Rev. Dr. James LeFevre, of Somerville, who was ordained and installed Jun 26, 1857, in the Third Reformed church, at Raritan, by the then classis of New Brunswick, will celebrate his half century in the ministry on Sunday morning, June 30, by preaching in the Third Reformed church at Raritan, where he spent the first seventeen years of his ministry. Dr. LeFevre has had but two charges, Raritan and Middlebush. At the latter place he preached thirty years. He has been retired three years.

Drug Store Threatened.

Fire broke out late yesterday afternoon in a small room in the rear of the store of the Raritan Drug Company, at Raritan, and had burned a hole through the floor before the blaze was discovered. An alarm was sent in to Relief Hose Company, which responded promptly and soon had extinguished the flames. The loss is small and is covered by insurance. The blaze is thought to have originated from a small stove.

COAL CASE DECISION BOOM TO HAMPTON JUNCTION

Borough Will Now Be Able to Collect Tax on $300,000 Assessment.

Hampton Junction, June 22.—The recent decision of the Supreme Court in the matter of tax levied by the borough of Junction against coal belonging to the Lehigh and Wilkes barre Coal Company, is a decided victory for the borough and its officers. In rendering the decision, Justice J. Franklin Fort said: "Coal shipped from the State of Pennsylvania and stored in the State to await orders for sale, and then to be transhipped to customers purchasing after such storage, is not in interstate commerce and is taxable at the place of storage here." The coal in dispute is stored in the plant of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company just west of this place, and contains twelve "floors," six of which were recently built by the company inorder to increase the storing capacity. When their is an overproduction of coal at the mines, and sales are slow in New York and other cities, the coal is stored at this plant. When needed, it is reloaded and shipped to market. Each of the old "floors" has a capacity of 35,000 tons each, while the six new ones hold 50,000 tons each. A year or so ago, a breaker was erected at the extreme western end of the plant to be used, it is said, to supply the demand for any size coal which did not happen to be in storage. The assesor of the borough, in the performance of his duties, failed to assess the coal in storage in 1905, claiming, it is said, that the coal was transient and not assessable. At a meeting of the common council the members were divided on the subject, and nothing definite was done in the matter. Borough Treasurer Peter S. Shurts, collector for the borough, made a levy of $300,000 on the coal in storage. The company refused to pay the tax on the grounds that the coal in question was transient, and carried the matter to the Supreme Court, the decision of which has just been rendered. In 1906 the Board of Taxation of Hunterdon county levied the same amount as the collector had done the year previous, and the matter is still in dispute.

To Save $1,500,000 In Nickels.

New York, June 22.—In the hope of saving $1,500,000 estimated to be lost each year through uncollected fares the Metropolitan Street Railway Company has purchased the 150 new cars constructed on a new pattern, which will be tried on the Madison avenue line within a few weeks. These cars will have a large rear platform so constructed that fares will be taken when passengers enter, and exit will be through another door. They will be built with large windows so that plenty of fresh air will be admitted during hot weather. When passengers enter their fares will be collected by the conductor who will stand behind an iron railing, and as soon as the car starts the rear door will be closed by a lever operated by the motorman.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear If the Advice of This Plainfield Citizen Is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidneys' fault.

Backache is really kidney ache:

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. K. C. Philpott, of 126 Plainfield avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Two years ago I suffered with rheumatism and also a severe backache or pain in the loins. I suppose it was all caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, but at any rate, the medicines I was taking did not stop the pains. I therefore resorted to Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say, in gratitude, that they gave me complete relief from my rheumatism and backache. I had no occasion to use any medicine for my kidneys since that time, until July, 1905, when I had not been feeling just right, and had been suffering sharp twinges of pain in my back. My daughter got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy, and on using them they relieved me as before. I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to people suffering from backache and rheumatism, and I shall continue to do so."

NEW TEACHERS FOR THE BOROUGH SCHOOLS

NUMBER OF CHANGES WILL BE THE SMALLEST IN YEARS.

When the North Plainfield schools open in the fall there will be two new teachers in the high school, one in the primary, one in the kindergarten and one in domestic science (cooking and sewing). This is the smallest number of changes in the faculty that has taken place in many years.

Professor Benjamin J. Phelps, who will assume the new position of principal of the high school, is a graduate of Yale, class of 1902. For the past five years he has been vice-president of Pennington Seminary, and has been in charge of the discipline of the two hundred and twenty-five students, also representing the president in the latter's absence. For three years he was director of athletics at the seminary.

Mr. Phelph has a fine record in scholarship, and is a good all aroundd athlete, having been captain and catcher of his "prep." school baseball nine, and a football player at Yale. He will have charge of the department of history, succeeding Miss Ethel F. Reed, who goes at a largely increased salary to teach history in a high school of three hundred pupils at New Britain, Conn.

Miss Grace Bradley, who retires from teaching for a year, will be succeeded by Miss Agnes Scudder, a graduate of the Washington D. C. high school, and of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., class of 1905, where her scholarship won her Phi Beta Kappa rank. Miss Scudder has taught two years, the last at Flemington, where her success was noteworthy. Miss Scudder is highly recommended as a teacher of English by Professor C. T. Winchester, the head of the department of English Literature at Wesleyan University.

Miss Mabel Hare, who also retires from teaching, will be succeeded in the Watchung Primary by Miss Nettie Bauersachs, daughter of J. W. A. Bauersachs, of the borough. Miss Bauersachs is a graduate of the North Plainfield high school, of the New Jersey Normal School, and after serving as assistant in the local kindergarten taught successfully for two years in the public schools of Raritan.

Miss Butler, of the Somerset kindergarten, retires, and will be succeeded by Miss Miln, of the Watchung kindergarten. Miss Edna L. French is promoted to the head of the Watchung kindergarten. She has been assistant in the Somerset kindergarten for a number of years. Her training for the work was obtained at the Ethical Culture school, New York. Miss Alice Martin will continue as assistant in the Watchung kindergarten, and Miss Myra Emmons of this year's graduating class, daughter of John P. Emmons, of North Plainfield, will be assistant to Miss Miln in the Somerset kindergarten.

The new teacher of domestic science will be Miss Helen Ingersoll, of South Orange. Miss Ingersoll is a graduate of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, class of 1906. She has taught successfully at Western College for Women, Oxford, Ohio. She will succeed Miss Genevieve Denneen, who in the past three years has developed the domestic science department along practical lines.

The fact that so many of the teachers will remain another year indicates that the work of the next term will be increasingly efficient.

Andrew Bender, who has been instructor of mathematics and chemistry, has been released by the Board of Education to accept a professorship at Lebanon College, Lebanon, Pa., where he was graduated a few years ago. His successor will be announced in a few days.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Father Bogan, of St. Mary's church, returned home yesterday after a week's vacation.

The next communion service at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be held Sunday, June 30, taking the place of the one usually held the first Sunday in July.

Bishop Spellmeyer, of the Methodist Episcopal church, who has been making a trip around the world, having been absent for eight months, is expected home next week.

A committee appointed for the purpose has made a revision of the members' roll of the First Baptist church, and it will be published in book form at an early date.

Now that the new class-rooms have been installed in the Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church, it is proposed to furnish the room with new chairs, replacing the circular benches, which have been in use for a great many years.

—Edward B. Maynard, the North avenue tonsorial artist, always desirous of being up to date, has just equipped his shop with the latest eléctric machine for face and hair massage. Each one of the three chairs is so arranged that it can be used conveniently. The method adopted is the best and is especially beneficial in the case of headache.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will elect officers on Thursday night, June 27.

personal to publish. If we investigate the instructions laid upon the early colonists we will find an explanation of this omission. Our forefathers were told to write no letters and to send no messages that would be likely to discourage others from settling in the new country. We can readily see that full knowledge of Smith's experience would not tend to lessen the feeling of distrust and fear with which the prospective settlers looked upon the newly discovered country. This may have restrained Smith from mentioning his deadly peril; or if he mentioned it we can easily see why the editor suppressed it. After years had elapsed and the colony was becoming prosperous we can see no reason why Smith should not publish the full account of his rescue.

"In the 'True Relation' Smith not only omits all reference to Pocohontas but he says that the Indians treated him courteously and kindly. This statement is thought to be incompatible with their having decided to beat out his brains, but this view shows ignorance of Indian customs. In our own time it has been a common thing for savages to offer their choicest foods with polite bows and smiles to their captives who are about to die. In the fuller account in the 'General History,' Smith says that he was treated kindly on his way to execution and after his rescue. If we drop out what happened in the interval we get the shorter account.

"There were many people in London who could have challenged this story had it been false. In the first place Pocohontas was being entertained in London. She knew that a letter had been received by Anne, of Denmark, in which Smith says 'Pocohontas hazarded the beating out of her brains to save mine,' but we do not find her contradicting this statement. In the second place when Smith published his 'General History,' why do we not find even on the part of his enemies some intimation of the falsity of the story?

"Percy, who was a bitter enemy of Smith, although he was one of the same original company of Jamestown, wrote a pamphlet in 1625 for the express purpose of criticising and discrediting the 'General History.' If Smith had not told his comrades of the Pocohontas incident as soon as he escaped, if he had not kept silent for years, Percy would have known this and used it as a weapon. There were others who could have done the same, and their silence forms a very strong presumption of the truth of the story.

"The story is not improbable for it is in accordance with Indian nature. An Indian never allows a death to pass unavenged and Smith, we are told, had killed two Indians. That he would be allowed to go back to Jamestown after this without an equivalent being demanded is incomprehensible to any one at all conversant with the customs of the Indians. The equivalent demanded was his life and the rescue by Pocohontas completed the probability and consistency of the story. It is very unlikely that Smith knew enough about the customs of the Indians to invent such a story.

"For these reasons we feel assured that the rescue of Smith by Pocohontas as related in the 'General History' is true. Without it the friendly relations of the Indian girl with the colonists become incomprehensible. For we know that her visits to Jamestown, and the regular supply of provisions began at this time and that if it had not been for her friendly services on more than one occasion the tiny settlement of Virginia would have perished.

"In this incident and any others that refer to the career of Captain John Smith, justice should be done to one of the noblest and most lovable characters in American history.

"Members of the Board of Education, Teachers, Parents, and Friends, we, the class of 1907, bid you all a most hearty and cordial welcome. Once more we have come to this hall to witness the graduation exercises of another class from the N. P. H. S. We have long looked foward to this night with the keenest anticipation. To us it marks the close of a most important epoch in our lives. As we look back over the four short years we recall the many happy days spent in school with our teachers and school friends. But tonight is the dividing line between our school life and that which may follow. Whatever the future may hold for us, tonight is a night of gladness. We are happy to see so many here and we know, too, that every one present is deeply interested in the welfare of our school. So once more I extend to you the earnest and sincere greeting of the class of 1907."

The address of the evening was delivered by Prof. Francis H. Green, instructor in English literature in the Pennsylvania State Normal School, at Westchester, Pa. He was an entertaining speaker and kept the audience laughing with numerous stories that interspersed his timely advice to the graduates. He did not have a fixed subject, but instead presented several mathematical problems which he termed addition, subtraction and division.

His first advice to the graduates was to add to their present knowledge, and not be satisfied with what they have already learned. He said that a young man presented himself for admission to a certain college and when the president asked him what he knew, he replied: "I don't know a plagued thing," to which the president responded, "Give me your hand. You are about four years ahead of the students at this college who think they know it all."

Referring to the graduating class, with its one lone young man, the speaker said, "Where are our wandering boys tonight?" He cautioned the boys that if they do not look out the fair sex will be getting all the honors. He related an incident in his life when he attended a lecture in Philadelphia given by Julia Ward Howe. The audience was made up almost entirely of women, he being the only man present, and when the well known speaker arose, she began by saying, "Ladies and gentleman," and everyone turned about to look at him. He paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Howe, describing her as "That grand old woman of America and may she live to be one hundred years young."

Prof. Green urged the graduates to add to their knowledge by contact with nature, to read books that are worth while, to read poetry, which is the crown and glory of literature. He said he had little use for the common ordinary verse, and especially the old autograph album which is to be found in nearly every home throughout the country, containing such lines as "When this you see, remember me."

The speaker then briefly presented four important points which he hoped the graduates would remember, the first of which was to get at the essential things, to master the English language so that it can be spoken grammatically and gracefully. He laid great stress on the mother tongue. The second point was to get a clear conception of things, adding that what the world needs today is intensity of action and thought.

The third point was to subtract all the vices and multiply your virtues. He said that while some people believe that money and position brings power, in reality it is character alone that will bring it. Lastly, the speaker said, "divide your time and blessings with others. Look out for number two, help to lift others up, and life will be a blessing and pleasure. There is no such thing as an independent life for every one is dependent upon some one in some way."

After Prof. Green's address, the valedictory essay was delivered by Miss Martha Lavinia Hand, the subject being "The Effect of the Four Great Invasions on the English Language," and was as follows:

"The study of the origin of the English language is very interesting, for in examining the etymology of words we are led into the fields of history. For example, the proper name Chester, with its compounds Dorchester, Manchester, Winchester. Worcester, and Lancaster is derived from the Latin "castra" meaning camp. The word street has its source in "strats via" paved way, the name applied to the Roman roads. If we inquire why the English language contains words so directly taken from the Latin, we are led at once to the fact that the Romans at one time had conquered the southern part of Britan, and that they left their traces in the language we now speak. Our first positive information in regard to England we owe to Julius Caesar, who in 55 B. C. made his first invasion. His success was nominal rather than real; for he seems to have handed down to posterity the discovery of the island, rather than its possession. In 42 A. D. another invasion was made by Emperor Claudius, but the invaders never gained more than a temporary foot-hold. With their laws and customs the Romans introduced their language into literature, but Latin was without doubt spoken chiefly by the educated classes and by the dwellers in cities for when the Romans withdrew in the early part of the fifth century their language disappeared almost completely. But slight vestiges of it are to be found in our language for they left us only about 100 words. Some of these are popular, being derived from the Latin populous, accident from accido, cremate from cremo, grave from gravis, paternal from pater and senate from Senatus.

"It is to the Teutonic invasion which followed soon after the Roman rule ceased, that we owe the introduction of our language into Great Britain. The original inhabitants of the British Isles were annoyed and alarmed by the attacks of the Picts and Scots, and so in their extremity they called for aid upon certain Teutonic tribes, the Angles, Saxons and Jutes, who dwelt upon the north coast of Germany. It was by these Teutons that the foundation of the English language was laid in Great Britain, for the new auxiliaries did not long remain contented with the limited territory which was given to them, but soon turning their arms against their allies ended at last in conquering the country they came to save. In civilization the Teutons were but little in advance of what the Britons had been in the days of Caesar. Their language became the language of all the people of Great Britain; the language in which books were writen and laws were published. The superiority of the Angles, arising from vastly greater numbers, and perhaps from an earlier cultivation of the literature eventually made the name belonging to them predominant so that the name applied both to the race and to the tongue was Anglish, which later became Englisc, and which is now pronounced by us English. The Saxon words generally are names of our dearest and earliest associations, as home, friends, father, mother, etc.; words expressing our strongest natural feelings for example, gladness, sorrow, smiles, blushes, naughty, sleepy, etc.; names of common affairs of every day life are also words left by the Teutons.

"Upon examining the origin of such words as Whitby, Derby, Enderby, we find that the ending "by" is a Danish word meaning town. During the ninth and tenth centuries the Danes made many incursions into England, plundering the towns, burning the churches and massacreing the people. They were often defeated in battle, but they never lost their foot-hold in the country. To the Danish we owe such words as bait, whisk, fling guest, ransack, whim, and whirl; the language of the Danes was however so closely related to the English that their coming made no great change in the speech of the country.

Words of fashion of the chase and of cookery we owe to the Normans, who came over from France when William, the conqueror, became king of England in the eleventh century. Most of the words left by them are "high sounding," compared with the "every day" words of the Saxons. Some of these are similar numerous, celestial, varecity and felicity. The Normans were very severe in dealing with the Saxons, who were really their slaves. With all their faults the Normans were in some respects superior to the Saxons. They were better soldiers they had broader ideas and knew more about the other countries of the world and they were more refined, and cultured. The two races found that there was many good things which they could learn from each other and so in the course of many generations, the two formed a united people. The main reason why the language of England was not made French by the Normans is because they were so harsh that the Saxons rebelled. Another reason is that the Saxons were much more numerous than their masters. Most of our words of Latin origin were introduced by the Normans on account of the fact that their language is based upon the Latin tongue. But the greatest effect of the Norman conquest upon the language is that it introduced the habit of borrowing words from other languages. Since the Norman conquest there has been no invasion of sufficient importance to cause any great change in the language.

"The French, the Latin and the other languages have all had their day in the past centuries and now that the twentieth century has just begun if we can guess at the future from our acquaintance with the past we are justified in believeing that the world language at the end of this century. Should any one tongue gain universal acceptance it will be English. But whether English shall be the language of the world of the future depends not on the language itself, but on the sturdiness of those who speak it, on their readiness to sacrifice themselves for the common good and on their fidelity to their ideals.

"If English becomes the speech of the world, it will be the language as it is spoken by all the branches of the English race. It is our duty then to do what we can to keep our language fresh and pure, to resist all the attempts to restrain its growth and to urge along the simplification of its grammar, so that it shall be ready for the day when it is a world language."

"Members of the Board of Education, teachers, schoolmates and friends, tonight we are gathered together to say farewell. We have for a long time thought of the day when we must part, perhaps never to meet again as a class. We do not know what the future has in store for us. Some of us may become famous while others may remain quietly at home performing all their tasks to the best of their ability. Although the dreams that we have cherished in regard to our life work may not be fulfilled we are determined to be fearless, energetic and honest in our attitude toward the insignificant tasks that go to make up the daily routine of life-long duration.

"We hope that in the future the lessons that we have learned will prove advantagious to us, for we have not only attempted to learn Latin and Mathematics, but also some principles of self respect, trust worthiness, self control, and honesty.

"We thank the members of the board and the teachers for what they have done to make our life pleasant and happy for the past four years. Our teachers have not only been our instructors but also our dearest friends, with whom we have spent many pleasant hours.

"And now class mates let us always cherish the memory of our school-days deep in our hearts. let us uphold our school with all our strength and let us show by our lives that we have profited by the opportunities that have been given us in the North Plainfield High School."

As Miss Hand concluded, Mr. Joy presented the Yale cup, offered by the Yale Club, of Plainfield, to the young man attaining the highest standard in athletics and scholarship during the past year. This cup is cimilar to the ones presented the Plainfield High School and at the Leal's School commencements this week. Mr. Joy explained that the cup was given by a club comprising ninety residents of Plainfield and North Plainfield who had been graduated from Yale College. He then announced the winner of the cup to be Clarence Runyon Steiner. The young man was completely taken by surprise and gave pronounced evidence of it when he walked to the platform to receive the cup amid the applause of his many friends.

Then followed the presentation of the diplomas to the graduates after they were announced by Supervising Principal H. C. Krebs, who explained the revision of the High School course from three to four years, which accounts for the small class.

After a selection by the High School chorus, the exercises closed and the audience was given an opportunity to congratulate the graduates. Later the annual alumni association reception to the class was given at the Casino, where dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

DIAMOND DUST.

According to the great stick work of Mike Donlin, who is now playing with the Logan Squares, of Chicago, he would be a valuable acquisition to the Giants about now. Mike ripped off several singles and a double on Sunday and it is not an uncommon thing for him to do this.

The Y. M. C. A. and Clinton avenue teams will meet at Crescent Oval this afternoon, in what promises to be one of the best games of the season. Minford and Nelson will be the battery for the association nine and Randolph and O'Loughlin the battery for Clinton Avenue.

Dunellen will try its luck at Scotch Plains, today, and judging by the way the Dunellens have been showing up in practice this week they will make the 'Plains team hustle to win.

Bresnahan, the Giant's catcher, is rapidly recovering from his recent injury and will be back in the game in a day or two.

The officials of the Inter-City Amateur League have decided to take up the umpire question and investigate the many complaints that have been made by both the fans and the teams in the league. If it is found that the umpires are at fault there will be a change, and if it is learned that their decisions have been just other measures will be adopted.

There is nothing that will spoil a game of baseball as much as poor umpiring and it is to be commended that the officials of the amateur league have been quick to recognize the importance of having the kind of umpiring that will give as near general satisfaction as possible.

It is to be regretted that "Teddy" Overton is not playing in the amateur league this season. He is a good player and would be valuable acquisition to anyone of the five teams in the league. George Dupee is another local player that should be secured by some team. When in condition he is a good pitcher and a fast fielder.

The West End baseball team of Somerville, accompanied by about 200 rooters, will journey to Flemington this afternoon on a special train to play the fourth game of the series with the crack nine of that place. The series now stands two to one in favor of Flemington. Braden and Torpey will be the battery for Somerville and Weaver and Brunner for the Hunterdon boys.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the Elizabeth Atlantic League team will play in Paterson and represent that town in the league. Ever since the club started in Elizabeth it has failed to be a paying proposition, hence the change.

An idea of the expense in maintaining a college baseball team can be learned from a statement just issued by F. S. Welsh, manager of the Lafayette College team for 1907, and shows the past season to have been the most successful in its history. The receipts from the home games were $2,361.20; from trips abroad, $2,065.19; from sale of season tickets, $399; total receipts for the season of 1907, $4,825.39, against a total of $2,809.80 in 1906. The expenditures during the season just ended were: Guarantees paid for home games, $1,066.65; for police, umpire and ticket sellers, $210.40; advertising, $168.17; care of field $156.07; trips, $1,522.77; equipment, $434.69; postage, telephone, etc., $23.15; coaching, $65; second team, $39.31; supper at end of season, $12.75; special on grand stand account, $215.50. There was a balance of $910.93 in the treasury at the close of the season. At the close of the season of 1906 there was a deficit of $105. The track season report for this year shows a deficit of $174.30.

The New York Giants, who will soon return from their western trip, have not come up to the expectation of their many admirers in the matter of games won. They have scarcely been able to break even, but when they get on their grounds better things are looked for.

It must be admitted that the Chicago Nationals are playing a steady consecutive seasons. There have been make an awful break, are destined to win the pennant for the second consecutive season. Their have been fewer reports of hard luck from the Windy City aggregation than any other team in the league.

While "Christy" Mathewson has been pitching good ball this season, his performances can hardly be classed with those of two years ago. However, he may yet re-gain his old-time form.

The sporting writers throughout the country, especially in New York, have given up offering excuses for the Highlanders. Ever since the season opened the writers have been kept busy in their efforts to excuse the team for losing this and that game, but they have now reached the end of their rope.

Monos Will Play Laurels.

The Mono Field Club will play the Laurels, of Bound Brook, at the latter place, this afternoon, and a good contest is expected. Both teams are evenly matched. The Monos will lineup as follows: McLaughlin, lf; Emmons, cf; B. Schuck 1b; Moffett, c; H. Conover, ss; Conway, 3b; Williams, 2b; Ricketts, rf; C. Conover, p.

GOLF.

The events at the Plainfield Country Club this afternoon will be regular weekly competitions for the Golf and Green committee cups, and a mixed foursome, the latter beginning at 1 o'clock.

At the Forest Hill Field Club today the East Jersey Golf League will hold its annual 36-hole medal play handicap. It is open to all members of clubs in the organization, and there will be two net pirzes and a gross score prize.

Today and tomorrow there will be an 18-hole handicap sweepstakes at the South Side Field Club, of Bayshore, L. I., and on June 9 and 30 a 9-hole foursome handicap sweepstakes. The entrance fee is one golf ball. The club also adds a box of golf balls to each sweepstakes.

Jack Hutchinson, of New York, was one of the many players that broke down at the long third hole in the second qualifying competition for the British open golf championship this week. He played fine golf in the strong wind of the morning round, but was unfortunate in doing better than 83. He had no luck on the greens and took 29 for the last five holes.

There will be play for the President's, Golf Club and Hydewood Park cups at the Park Golf Club, this afternoon, and undoubtedly there will be a large field.

The weekly competitions at the Middlebrook Country Club, Finderne, is attracting a large number of golfers every Saturday. Special prizes are offered by the club. On July 4 there will be a number of special events.

The excellent showing made by "Marty" O'Loughlin in the national open tournament at Philadelphia on Thursday is gratifying to his friends and shows that he is constantly improving his game. His strong point has always been in driving, but during this season he has been making great improvement in approaching and putting. The fact that he was able to make two rounds of the 18-hole course with an 81 on each round is evidence hat he was playing a steady game.

Morris J. Dumont is among the members of the Plainfield Country Club, who are returning low scores this season. His work in the open tournament was most creditable.

TO CLEAN LEATHER.

Carefully dust the leather, then wash with warm water, being particular to remove all soiled spots and dirt.

Wipe dry and then wipe over with a black cloth dipped into the beaten white of egg mixed with its bulk of warm water.

Pour half a cupful of boiling water over two tablespoonfuls of flaxseed and bring to the boiling point. Strain, and when cool apply with a cloth to the leather.

TIME FOR ACTION.

Aside from the scathing arraignment of Elizabeth's city government, which in itself has proven a county sensation, the report of the Grand Jury as presented to Justice Swayze, by Foreman Charles J. Fisk, is one of the most remarkable documents ever given out in the Union County Court. The petit jury system is one that has for years been a constant menace to the dispensing of justice with equity but it remained for Mayor Charles J. Fisk and his colleagues to strike at the root of existing conditions and call for a revision in the method of selecting the men to try the cases that need an unprejudiced and strictly impartial consideration. The present Grand Jury is composed of the finest class of citizens in the confines of Union and it has had to submit to an underbody undoing the indictments it brought in only after the full realization that conviction was needed.

If, as the report charges, the petit jury is drawn from panels furnished by politicians that principally include men who have nothing else to do and want the $2 a day, it is beyond the time for mere discussion. What is needed is summary action and if the present petit body is in a position to come under the arraignment, it should be replaced by another without delay.

Mayor Fisk, as foreman of the Grand Jury, has offered sensible suggestions as to the best way of overcoming the difficulty and they should be put into effect. There are hundreds of men who will gladly serve as a matter of honor and principle and not for the sake of protecting the interests of those who see to it that they are drawn. While Plainfield does not come under the ban in the sense that some of the other places do, there is room for improvement on all sides and the people can best be served by the banishment of the "professional and political jurymen."

Comes Out For Roosevelt.

Washington, D. C., June 22.—Representative Nathan W. Hale, republican, of the Second Congressional district of Tennessee, yesterday, declared in favor of the election of President Roosevelt for another term. He said that if again nominated Roosevelt would carry several Southern States, as the country wanted him to have an opportunity to finish the Panama Canal and the mighty reforms and measures for which he stands. It would be a national calamity to make a change at this time.

Sec. Taft Has Recovered.

St. Louis, June 22.—Secretary Taft has evidently recovered from the attack of indigestion which was said to be the cause of his recent illness at Minneapolis. His breakfast bill yesterday morning at a Union Station restaurant was $2.65. He allowed the waited who served him to keep the 35 cents change of the $3.

ARRAIGNS CITY GOVERNMENT

force and the members of the fire department are appointed for political reasons and are under obligation to this same appointing power.

In other words, as stated above, the city is absolutely in the hands of the brewery and saloon interests.

Continuing, the jurors declare the brewers have a system adapted entirely to their own needs for taking out licenses. They secure them, it is charged, in names chosen by them, and the method works so that they practically rent the licenses out.

There is no evidence in the hands of the jury, the presentment goes on, to warrant criminal action at this time. Investigation will be continued, however, and if further steps are found to be expedient, necessary action will be taken at once.

Any investigation, however, the presentment continues, made by the grand jury would be absolutely fruitless, as far as results are concerned, unless some very positive and immediate action is taken by the sheriff to revise the present jury list and adopt a method by which petit jurors will be drawn in the interest of right and justice and not selected by so-called politicians to further their own ends, or pay political debts. The manner in which the petit jurors are drawn at present cannot bring about the proper results. Under the present system of selecting jurors it is customary to call upon someone of political influence in the various municipalities and request that man to select a number of names and send them to the sheriff. The result being that while a few fair-minded, conscientious men, who have the courage of their convictions, and cannot be intimated, or influenced from outside sources, are selected, the majority of the panels are professional jurors, put on that they may earn their $2 a day and are under obligations to the party to secure the appointment for them; there are also names of men given to the sheriff, which men the party sending in their names well know will always protect the interests of their friends, and who have no respect whatever for their oath or obligation, being willing to violate their oath, bring in a verdict absolutely and directly against the evidence submitted, provided they feel that in so doing they are protecting the interests of the parties, or friends of the parties, who placed them in this position. While others, being rather week-minded, are easily intimidated or influenced from the outside sources.

If the court expects to accomplish results, and have the excise law respected, and to convict those who wilfully violate these laws, all this entire system must be changed. The jury list must be made up of fair-minded, courageous, honest citizens from throughout the country, men who will decide a case whether against friend or foe, in accordance with the evidence submitted, and under no circumstances violate their oath. The panel should be drawn by lot from this list. If the law would allow it, this panel should be sufficiently large so that no one man would be obliged to serve the full term.

In closing, the jurors said they held themselves ready, if the court approved, to adjourn when the session closed, to reassemble on a date fixed, to receive the support of the prosecutor as to the cases turned over to him as suggested. No report was made on the selling in clubs. The presentment said the jurors were still considering the matter, and would report later.

Child Strangled to Death.

West Chester, Pa., June 22.—Search for five-year-old Edna Robbins Newlin, who mysteriously disappeared while returning to her home near Landenborg last Sunday afternoon, ended at noon yesterday when the child's body was found buried near the barn of her stepfather's farm. Erwin A. Lewis, the stepfather, was at once arrested. The child had been brutally slain. Drawn tight around her throat was a piece of tarred hemp such as farmers use to bind wheat. Death was evidently caused by strangulation. The finding of the body was the result of District Attorney MacElree's suspicions of the stepfather. Ever since the kidnapping theory was discarded as valueless the District Attorney has kept his eye on Lewis, believing that he alone had sufficient motive to make away with the child.

Massacre Victim Dies Here.

New York, June 22.—Louisa Pushinsky, thirteen years old, living with her parents, Lois and Schandel Pushinsky, at No. 85 Columbia street, died yesterday in a private ambulance while being taken from her home to Mount Sinai Hospital. Dr. J. Bosenbluth, who had attended her for two days, signed a certificate that death resulted from an abscess on the brain, the result of an injury received in the Russian massacre at Kishineff two years ago, the document containing the additional information that the girl's body bore the marks of other cuts and bruises received on that terrible day.

Little Boy Drowns at Rahway.

Rahway, June 22.—Maurice Griffin, nine years old, of Montgomery, N. Y., who had been spending a vacation with Mr. and Mrs. John Bader, of 245 Main street, this city, was drowned Thursday night in the Rahway River. The accident occurred near Frieze's dock. The lad was in a boat with Frank Avery and the latter is said to have rocked the craft, Griffin being thrown out. After half an hour's search the body was pulled out with a rake.

A WOMAN'S WAY.

Her lovers adored her, they asked and implored her
To give them a look or a smile;
Like little dogs trotted to tasks she allotted,
And begging for notice the while.
They fetched and they carried, they dodged and they parried
When snubs for reward did she give;
They took it all meekly, gave in to her weakly,
Just asking permissions to live.

Their worship she scouted, their love lightly flouted,
And treated them all with disdain.
She met vows with laughing, hearts' anguish with chaffing,
And took with just tribute their pain.
That they did adore her, the more seemed to bore her,
She said they were idots all,
So little she prized them that she soon despised them
For being slaves to her thrall.

At last came a wooer who scorned to pursue her;
He ordered her just at his will,
Asserted his power, said he would "allow" her
His need of affection to fill.
They stared in amazement to see her abasement,
For meekly she gave him his way,
Just followed the faster when he would be master,
And promised—with joy—to "obey."
—Baltimore American.

All Had Meanings.

"So the proprietor of this hotel has a big phonograph that plays while you dine?"

"Yes, and some of the selections are very appropriate. For instance, if he thinks his guests are getting impatient he puts on such pieces as: 'Life Is Too Short to Worry' and 'All Things Come to Him Who Waits.'"

"H'm! Pretty good idea."

"Yes, but the last selection beats them all. If he thinks you might overlook tipping the waiter he puts on Kipling's recessional: 'Lest We Forget! Lest We Forget!'"—Chicago Daily News.

Just Imagine.

Miss Elder—Well, I maintain that woman can do anything that men can.

Mr. Gazzam—Oh, no. The auctioneer's business is one a woman cannot go into.

Miss Elder—Nonsense. She'd make every bit as good an auctioneer as a man.

Mr. Gazzam—Just imagine an unmarried woman getting up before a crowd and exclaiming, "Now, gentlemen, all I want is an offer!"

The Jealous One.

"Oh, yes," said the maker of verse; "Van Scribble is all right on prose, but when he tackles rhyme I can't say he makes a scintillating success."

"You don't think his Pegasus is well gaited, eh?" asked the other.

"I don't think his Pegasus is a flying horse," said the maker of verse. "It reads to me more like a horse-fly."—Judge.

Poor Stuff.

P.—I see you have my novel. I'll wager you had to look at the last page to see how it all came out.

Q.—No; I looked at the name of the publishers on the title page to see how it came out, and even now I can't understand how it was.

Diplomatic Caddie.

Bertie (to caddie, searching for lost ball)—What are you looking there for? Why, I must have driven it 50 yards farther.

Diplomatic Caddie—But sometimes they hit a stone, sir, and bounce back a terrible distance.

Nonchalant Citizen—You'll have to come again, old chap. The bridge whist season opened to-night!—Puck.

Investigating United Cigars Co.

New York, June 22.—Judge James C. McReynolds, of No. 141 Broadway, who was appointed after the retirement of Henry W. Taft as special counsel for the federal government in cases against the Tobacco Trust, has made an investigation of the United Cigar Stores Company, and finds that not only is this great retail smoking goods enterprise controlled by the American Tobacco Company but also is used by that corporation for the purpose of stifling independent competition. The United Cigars Stores Company, which now has more than five hundred retail stores in operation, 183 of which are in New York city, was organized as a New Jersey corporation in May, 1901, by J. Whelan, of Syracuse, N. Y., who, under the name of C. A. Whelan & Co., had operated a similar combination of retail cigar stores on a small scale in Syracuse. The American Tobacco Company, seeing that this corporation promised success, acquired control of it, and now owns $600,000 of the $900,000 common, all of the preferred stock and most of the bonds. The business has been extended to include all the important cities of the United States, although in certain cities advantage has been taken of local conditions by the American Tobacco Company acquiring control of local combinations of retail cigar stores which operate in the same way as the United Cigar Stores Company.

Killed While Swinging in Hammock.

Matawan, June 22.—Pearl Avilla Clarendon, eleven years old, daughter of George Clarendon, of Keyport, was killed last night while swinging in a hammock in the yard of her home. The hammock had just been strung up between a tree and a heavy pole. Pearl and her little sister were told they could try the hammock. They had swung back and forth in it for a time, when suddenly the pole toppled over and struck Pearl on the head. Nothing serious was at first suspected, but it developed that her skull had been fractured, and she died within an hour.

Seven Years For Pistol Carrier.

New York, June 22.—Imprisonment for seven years is the penalty Giuseppe Marco, of No. 22 Baxter street, will suffer for trying to shoot Policeman McNichols, who had arrested him for a trivial offense. In sentencing him Judge O'Sullivan, in General Sessions Court yesterday, said he would try to break up the habit of carrying revolvers for instant use. Marco was causing a disturbance in the Bowery when the policeman seized him. He drew a revolver and would have used it had not the policeman overpowered him.

"GET THE FIRST $1,000."

Ancient Axiom That Has Set Many Men to Saving.

"Get the first $1,000. After that money-making is easy." This is the old-time sage advice of the hard-headed, self-made man. That axiom has set many men to saving. They fix upon that sum as the glittering, far-off herald of a fortune something to be made. To a man on a small salary—a salary, say, out of which something can be saved weekly without too much deprivation—the advice is good. There is something in it that acts as a stimulus to economy. And who will deny that economy is a good thing or that any truth that lights the way to it should not be known? Many men, therefore, have been buoyed up in their economies by the belief that the first $1,000 is the hardest to get, and that afterward all the rest would be easy and the good things of the world that follow a bounteous supply of money would be within easy reach, says a writer in the Denver Republican. It is a pity that the man who invented that saying could not also have told us with equal advantage how to turn the $1,000 over and make two of it. It takes a long time to make a wage-earner see that "money works." His idea of making money is to work for it himself. It never occurs to him that money works much easier than he can and without any of the hardships he himself experiences—that is to say, until he has got the first $1,000. That usually makes a young man feel like a financier, and he talks wisely of investments.

STYLES OF 4,000 YEARS AGO.

Tend to Prove There Is Nothing New Under the Sun.

For women archeology assumes a deeply interesting phase in the question which has been raised by Signor Mosso as to styles in dress as they existed 4,000 years ago. Signor Mosso, the eminent authority on ancient Etruria, the Roman Forum, and early Crete, has concentrated his great experience and knowledge on elucidating this bypath of science from his Cretan studies. The general result has been to confirm the old dictum that there is nothing new under the sun. Even the "latest fashions" are antiquated. Signor Mosso finds that 4,000 years ago the ladies of primeval Mycenae wore hats pretty much as they are seen in the showrooms of Paris to-day. They knew what crape trimming was, had tartans before the Scotch, understood the mysteries of corsets lacing in front, short wide sleeves, metal belts, and a style of dress which an imitative nineteenth century, that considered itself original, dubbed "Empire." Their principal colors in robes were orange, yellow, blue and purple, which rather upsets the claim of the Phoenicians to have "discovered" purple.

Properties of Gold.

Pure gold is unaffected by the atmosphere either at ordinary temperatures or when the metal is heated. It is also proof against the action of common acids when used singly. Moreover, says the Jewelers' Circular Weekly, it confers its properties more or less upon copper and silver when these metals are alloyed with it. Thus, for example, 12 karat gold will withstand the action of nitric acid and the atmosphere at ordinary temperature, but some of the copper will be oxidized during annealing. Nine parts of gold may be alloyed with ten parts of platinum in an ordinary crucible and fire, but such an alloy will not be uniform; a large proportion of platinum will free itself from the gold on solidification and a homogeneous alloy of the two metals cannot be obtained.

The Grave of Goldsmith.

That Oliver Goldsmith was buried in the churchyard of the Temple has been placed beyond doubt by the entry in the register. But the stone on the north side of the Temple church, around which the enthusiasts of the Goldsmith club gather, has been placed on a spot purely conjectural, for the exact position of the grave has never been discovered. The real site was remembered as late as 1830. In that year the sexton, a very aged man, who apparently was present at the burial, still venerated an elder tree, which, he said, marked the site of Goldsmith's grave. This elder tree seems to have stood a few feet south of the present stone, near the old vestry.—Westminster Gazette.

The Charming Woman.

Of all the women born into an ungrateful and unappreciative world none can compare to the really charming one. We may admire the beauty and gaze in awe at the bluestocking, hug the "dear things of our acquaintance" and thump the "good sort" on the back, but in the presence of a personality which "charms" us we remain in speechless and almost breathless fascination. Truly of every such woman can it be said which was said by St. Simon of one of the most fascinating women of his time, that she walks "like a goddess on the clouds."—L'Inconnue.

Tact.

The right kind of a wife never harps upon her husband's misdeeds, still less does she remind him of his misfortunes. No woman should marry a man unless her love for him be of the fiber which hopeth all things, believeth all things, and is not easily provoked," says Home Chat. The right kind of wife helps a man when he falls an encourages him to try again, instead of railing at him for the stumble after he has risen to his feet.

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

Back of the camp and tending northwest to southeast was a low ridge of outcropping slate, bare in spots—a hog back, in wilderness phrase. Beyond this lay a mile-long "blow-down," where a tornado had levelled the tall timber. A fire, sweeping this when dry, left the criss-cross confusion of charred logs, blueberry bushes had followed fast, and now those luscious berries were ripening in limitless profusion. Every fair day Ray and Chip came here to pick, to eat, to hear the birds sing, to gather flowers and be happy.

They watched the rippled lake with now and then a deer upon its shores, from this ridge; they climbed up or down it, hand in hand; they fished in the lake or canoed about it, time and again; and many a summer evening, when the moon served, Chip handled the paddle, while Ray picked his banjo and sang his darky songs all around this placid sheet of water.

And what a wondrous charm this combination of moonlight on the lake and love songs softened and made tender by the still water held for Chip! As those melodies had done on that first evening beside the campfire, so now they filled her soul with a strange, new-born, and wonderful sense of joy and gladness.

The black forest enclosing them now was sombre and silent. Spites still lurked in its depths and doubtless were watching; but a protector was near, his arm was strong; back at the landing were kind friends, and the undulating path of silvered light, the round, smiling orb above, the twinkling stars, and this matchless music became a new wonder-world to her.

Her eyes glistened and grew tender with pathos. She had no more idea than a child why she was happy. Each day sped by on wings of wind, each hour, with her one best companion, the most joyful; and so, day by day, poor Chip learned the sad lesson of loving.

But never a word or hint of this fell from her lips. Ray was so far above her and such a young hero, that she, a homeless outcast, tainted by the filth and service of Tim's Place, could only look to him as she did to the moon.

Not for one instant did he realize the growing independence and self-reliance of this wilderness waif, or how the first feeling that she was a burden upon these kind people would chafe and vex her defiant nature, until she would scorn even love, to escape it.

Just now the tender impulse of love was all Ray felt or considered. This girl of sweet sixteen and utter confidence in him was so enthralling in spite of her crude speech and lack of education, her kisses were so much his to take whenever chance offered, and himself such a young hero in her sight, that he thought of naught else.

In this, or at least so far as his reasoning went, they were like two grown-up children entering a new world—the enchanted garden of love. Or like two souls merged into one in impulse, yet in no wise conscious why or for what all-wise purpose.

For them alone the sun shone, birds sang, leaves rustled, flowers bloomed, and the blue lake rippled. For them alone was all this charming chance given, with all that made it entrancing. For them alone was life, love, and lips that met in ecstasy.

Oh, wondrous beautitude! Oh, heaven-born joy! Oh, divine illusion that builds the world anew, and building thus, believes its secret safe!

But Old Cy, wise old observer of all things human, from the natural attraction of two children to the philosophy of content, saw and understood.

Not for worlds would he hint this to Angie or Martin. Full well he knew how soon this "weavin' o' the threads o' affection," would be frowned upon by them; but he loved children as few men do.

This summer-day budding of romance would end in a few weeks, these two were happy now—let them remain so, and perhaps in Chip's case it might prove the one best incentive to her own improvement.

And now as he watched them day by day, came another feeling. Homeless all his life so far, and for many years a wanderer, these two had awakened the home-building impulse in his. He could not have a home himself, he could only help them to one in the future, and to that end and purpose he now bent his thought.

It was midsummer when Martin and his party returned to the lake with Chip. In two weeks the new log cabin—a large one, divided into three compartments—was erected and ready for occupation.

Working as all the men had done from dawn until dark to complete this cabin, no recreation had been taken by anyone except Ray and Chip; and now Martin, a keen sportsman, felt that his turn had come. The trout were rising night and morn all over the lake, partridges so tame that they would scarce fly were as plenty as sparrows, a half-dozen deer could be seen any time along the lake shore—in fact, one had already furnished them venison—and so Martin now anticipated some relaxation and sport.

But Fate willed otherwise.

One of Old Cy's first and most far-sighted bits of work, after being left with the hermit the previous autumn, had been the erection of an ice-house out of large saplings. It stood at the foot of a high bank on the north of the knoll and close to the lake, and here, out of the sunshine, yet handy to fill, stood his creation. Its double walls of poles were stuffed with moss, its roof chinked with blue clay, a sliding door gave ingress, and even now, with summer almost gone, an ample supply of ice remained in it.

In the division of duties among these campers, Levi usually started the morning fire while Old Cy visited the ice-house for anything needed. One morning after the new cabin was completed, he came here as usual.

A fine string of trout caught by Martin and Ray the day before were hanging in this ice-house, and securing what was needed, Old Cy closed the door and turned away. As usual with him, he glanced up and down the narrow beach to see if a deer had wandered along there that morning, and in doing so he now saw, close to the water's edge and distinctly outlined in the damp sand, the print of a moccasined foot.

It was of extra large size, and as Old Cy bent over it, he saw it had recently been made. Glancing along toward the head of this cove, he saw more tracks, and two rods away, the sharp furrow of a canoe prow in the sand.

"It's that pesky half-breed, sure's a gun," he muttered, stooping over the track, "fer a good bit o' his legs was turned up to walk on, and he wore moccasins t'other day."

Curious now, and somewhat startled, he looked along where the narrow beach curved out and around to the landing, and saw the tracks led that way. Then picking his way so as not to obscure them, he followed until not three rods from the new cabin they left the beach and were plainly visible behind a couple of spruces, in the soft carpet of needles, which was crushed for a small space, where some one had stood.

Returning to camp, Old Cy motioned to Levi and Martin. All three returned to the ice-house, looked where the canoe had cut its furrow, took up the trail to its ending beside the two trees, and then glanced into one another's eyes with serious, sober, troubled faces.

And well they might; for the evening previous they had all been grouped upon the piazza of this new cabin until late, while scarce three rods away a spying enemy, presumably this half-breed, had stood and watched them.

CHAPTER VI.

An enemy we can meet in the open need not appall us; but an enemy who creeps up to us by day, or still worse by night, in a vast wilderness, becomes a panther and an Indian combined.

Such a one had spied upon Martin's camp that night, and all the tales of this half-breed's cunning and fierce nature, told by Levi, were now recalled. Like a human brute whose fangs were tobacco-stained, whose one evil eye glared at them out of darkness, the half-breed had now become a creeping, crawling beast, impossible to trail, yet certain to bide his time, seize Chip, or avenge her loss upon her protectors.

Now another complication arose as Martin, Old Cy, and Levi left the spot where this enemy had watched them—what to do about Angie and the girl? From the first warning from Levi that they were in danger from the half-breed, Martin had avoided all hint of it to them. Now they must be told, and all peace of mind at once destroyed. Concealment was no longer possible, however, and when Angie was told, her face paled. Her first intuition, and as the sequel proved, a wise one, was for them to at once pack up and quit the woods as speedily as possible.

But Martin was of different fibre. To run away like this was cowardly, and besides he cherished only contempt for a wretch who had played the role of this fellow, and was so vile of instinct. With no desire to do wrong, he yet felt that if sufficient provocation and the need of self-defense arose, the earth, and especially this wilderness, would be well rid of such a despicable creature.

Then Levi's advice carried weight. "We ain't goin' to 'scape him," he said, "by startin' out o' the woods now. Most likely he's got his eye on us this minute. He knows every rod o' the way out whar we'd be likely to camp. He'd sure follow, an' if he didn't cut our canoes to pieces some night, he'd watch his chance 'n' grab the gal 'n' make off under cover o' darkness. We've got a sort o' human panther to figger on, an' shootin' under such conditions might mean killin' the gal. We've got to go out sometime, but I don't believe in turning' tail fust go-off, 'n' we may get a chance to wing the cuss, like ez not," and the glitter in Levi's eyes showed he would not hesitate to shoot this half-breed if the chance presented itself.

Old Cy's opinion is also worth quoting:

"My notion is this hyena's a coward, 'n' like sich'll never show himself by daylight. He knows we've got guns 'n' know how to use 'em. The camp's as good as a fort. One on us kin allus be on guard daytimes, an' when it's time to go out—wal, I think we ought to hev cunnin' 'nuff 'mongst us to gin one hyena the slip. Thar's one thing must be done, though, 'n' that is, keep the gal clus. 'Twon't do to let her go over the hog-back arter berries, or canoein' round the lake no more."

Chip was kept an almost prisoner, hardly ever permitted out of Angie's sight. One of the men, always with rifle handy, remained on guard—usually Old Cy, and for a few nights he lay in ambush near the shore, to see if perchance this enemy would steal up again.

With all these precautions against surprise, came a certain feeling of defiance in Martin. With Ray for companion he went fishing once more, and with Levi as pilot he cruised about for game.

Only a few weeks of his outing remained, and on sober second thought, he didn't mean to let this sneaking enemy spoil those.

But Old Cy never relaxed his vigil. This waif of the wilderness and her pitiful position appealed to him even more than to Angie, and true to the nature that had made all Greenvale's children love him, so now did Chip find him a kind and protecting father.

With rifle always with him, he took her canoeing and fishing; sometimes Angie joined them, and so life at Birch camp became pleasant once more.

A week or more of happiness was passed, with no sight of their enemy, and then one morning when Old Cy had journeyed over to the ice-house, he glanced across the lake to a narrow valley through which a stream known as Beaver Brook reached the lake, and far up in this vale, rising above the dense woods, was a faint column of smoke.

The morning was damp, cloudy and still—conditions suitable for smoke-rising, and yet so faint and distant was this that none but the keen, observant eyes of a woodsman would have noticed it. Yet there it was, a thin white pillar, clearly outlined against the dark green of the foliage.

Old Cy hurried back, motioned to Levi, and the two watched it from the front of the camp. Martin soon joined them, then Angie and Chip, and all stood and studied this smoke sign. It was almost ludicrous, and yet not; for at its foot must be a fire, and beside it, doubtless, the half-breed.

"Can you locate it?" queried Martin of his guide, as the delicate column of white slowly faded.

"It's purty well up the brook," Levi answered; "thar's a sort of Rocky Dundar thar, 'n' probably a cave. I callate if it's him, he's 'spected a storm, 'n' so sneaked to cover."

And now, as if to prove this, a few drops of rain began to patter on the motionless lake; thicker, faster they came, and as the little group hurried to shelter, a torrent, almost, descended. For weeks not a drop of rain had fallen here. Each morn the sun had risen in undimmed splendor, to vanish at night, a ball of glorious red.

But now a change had come. Wind followed the rain, and all that day the storm raged and roared through the dense forest about. The lake was white with driving scud, the cabin rocked, trees creaked, and outdoor life was impossible. When night came, it seemed a thousand demons were wailing, moaning, and screeching in the forest, and as the little party now grouped around the open stove in the new cabin watched it, the fire rose and fell in unison with the blasts.

"It's the spites," whispered Chip to Ray. "They allus act that way when it's stormin'."

The next day the gale began to lessen, and by night the moon, now half-full, peeped out of the scurrying clouds. At bedtime it was smiling serenely, well down toward the tree-tops, and Chip's spites had ceased their wailing.

Fortunately, however, Martin's quest for game had been successful. A saddle of venison, a dozen or more partridges and two goodly strings of trout hung in cold storage.

REMARKABLE Life Insurance payment in Long Branch. $5,000 policy, lapsed for nearly three years, is paid by The Prudential. $2,000 added by terms of policy. In August, 1896, former Councilman James Dunn, of Long Branch, insured with The Prudential for $5,000. He permitted his policy to lapse in 1904. In 1907 he died. His wife supposing the policy to be worthless, said nothing concerning it.

An Extended Insurance clause saved Mr. Dunn's policy. Mrs. Dunn was notified by

The Prudential

Claim papers were made up, and a check for $7,000, the value of the policy, was handed her. Acknowledging the payment, Mrs. Dunn says:

"I cannot find words adequate enough to express my true feeling of thanks to the Company for their extreme kindness in the settlement of this claim, and I can assure you that THE PRUDENTIAL in my estimation is second to none, for fairness, kindness, liberality, and the courteous treatment of policyholders."

A Company that not only pays its claims as they are presented, but that has gone out of its way to trace and pay a lapsed policy, and that did it without being asked or expected to, is the Company for you to insure in. All Ordinary policies now issued by The Prudential contain the Extended Insurance clause. Send for specimen policy at your age.

Chokes Savage Dog to Death.

Yonkers, N. Y., June 22.—After a big mongrel dog had bitten several children with whom it was playing in Buena Vista avenue, yesterday, the animal was caught by J. George Ahrens, a drug clerk, and choked to death. Ahrens was badly bitten.

Miss Mabel Hamilton, of Verdon street, is entertaining Miss Clare McGovern, of Harrison.

O'LOUGHLIN MADE GOOD SHOWING IN GOLF TOURNEY

"MARTY" FINISHED ONLY FIFTEEN STROKES MORE THAN THE WINNER.

Although "Marty" O'Loughlin failed to get in the money at the national open championship played in Philadelphia Thursday and yesterday, his showing was most creditable, finishing with a total score of 317 and being tied with M. J. Brady, of Boston, and Dave Hunter, of Essex county. When it is considered that "Marty" finished only fifteen strokes worse than Alex Ross, of Brae Burn, who won the first prize of $300 and the championship cup, it will be seen that he was playing a fast game.

A majority of the best players among the "pros," as well as amateurs, had poor luck, owing to the narrowness of the course. Unless a player was well acquainted with the course it was almost impossible to keep in bounds and the cracks were constantly getting into trouble.

The first day "Marty" returned a score of 81 on each on the two rounds, his high score being due to the fact that he used an aluminum putter which got him into trouble. Yesterday with his regular putter he was seven strokes better, making the first round in 77 and the second in 78, for a total of 155. An evidence of the kind of golf he was playing can be learned when it is known that Will Anderson, recognized as one of the best golfers in the country, finished only one stroke ahead of him. "Marty" has challenged Alex Ross to play him a home-and-home match for $100 a side, but as yet the Scotchman has given no answer. The Plainfield lad is anxious to meet Ross alone. A week from tomorrow he will play George Bouse, of the Marine and Field Club, at the latter place, and in August he will play "Jim" Cochran at Utica, N. Y. These matches were arranged yesterday.

Y.W.C.A. HOME WILL BE DEDICATED TOMORROW

SERVICE AT 4 O'CLOCK WILL MARK FORMAL OPENING OF THE WORK.

Dedicatory services under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held at the home on East Front street, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, marking the formal opening of the work.

The organization meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. ten weeks ago, when a large pledged membership was received and a considerable sum of money raised toward the purchase of the building now occupied on East Front street, formerly owned by the late Dr. O. L. Jenkins. Since that time those in charge of the work have been very busy. The house committee, especially, has worked hard to get the house ready for use and prepare for the dedicatory service tomorrow.

Miss Eleanor Brownell, State Y. W. C. A. secretary for New York and New Jersey, will speak and there will be other interesting exercises. After tomorrow the home will be opened daily from 9.30 in the morning to 9.30 at night.

The home presents an attractive appearance. Through the kindness of the local paper-hangers many of the rooms have been newly pepered. The assembly room to the right of the hall to be used for meetings, social, etc., is furnished in mission. On the left of the hall is the reading room with a reading table, desk and chairs of oak. In this room the association members will find current magazines and many books worth reading. It will be a pleasant place in which to while away an hour. A kitchen, dining-room and offices are also on this floor.

On the second floor are rooms which will be used for class rooms and two bedrooms. Two of the third floor rooms have been furnished for the use of women and girls who may be transients in the city. The barn in the rear of the house will be equipped for a gymnasium. It will be ready for occupancy in the fall. This will appeal strongly to those who desire to keep physically strong and healthy. In order that those joining the gymnastic classes may have competent instruction, Miss Margaret Mosher, a graduate of the physical training department of Oberlin College, has been engaged.

As the association opens its doors and invites all the women and girls of the city to enjoy its privileges, it is hoped by those who have made it possible, that many will rally to its support by joining the association and to improve intellectually, socially and physically their condition.

Contempt Decision Deferred.

In the Somerset County Courts at Somerville yesterday final disposition of the contempt proceedings instituted against Joseph Sansone of Raritan, was postponed for one week.

—The Fair Acres Riding and Driving Association, has about completed the details for its race meet at the driving park on the afternoon of July 4. Money purses will be offered in the various classes.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hall, of Belvidere avenue, has been enjoying an automobile trip through the New England States.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon and children, of Prospect place, have gone to Pluckemin to visit Mrs. Runyon's parents for two weeks. Mr. Runyon will commute during the stay.

Rev. William S. Hubbell with his wife and daughters, the Misses Hubbell, who have been stopping at Truell Inn for a time, sailed for Europe today, where they will spend the summer.

DeWitt C. Giles, of Piscataway township, is rapidly recovering from severe injuries received recently when a gun exploded in his hands. He is now able to walk about the hospital and he expects to return home soon.

Among the students of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, who received certificates in the department of science and technology, at the commencement Thursday night, was Ernest K. Powlison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Powlison, of Somerset street.

MORGAN AND THE STUTTERER.

A young reporter on the New York Sun, who stuttered fearfully, was sent one day to try to get a statement from Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan.

"Who and what are you?" demanded Mr. Morgan.

In moments of surprise or nervous excitement the reporter's stammering always became acute, so he stood with jaws locked, vainly trying to speak.

Mr. Morgan began to fume, and finally he sputtered:

"What in the devil are you?"

The reporter's sense of humor did not share the clogging up of his speech, and, after much facial contortion, he managed to gurgle out:

"I-I-I—aaaaam an elocutionist."

Mr. Morgan saw the joke, he grimly relaxed and when the reporter's speech-consciousness returned he got the statement.—Saturday Evening Post

A Calumny on Anglers.

"We fishermen," said Havelock Morton, California's famous fly caster, "are continually being accused of intemperance. The accusation is false. No intemperate man could ever cast a fly. Yet yesterday a friend of mine had the effrontery to say to me:

"'You fishermen! You fishermen!'

"'What's the matter now?' I asked scornfully.

"With a chuckle he declared that, out walking in the country, he had met an angler beside a brook and had said to the man:

"'How can you tell the good places from the bad when you come to a stream?'

"'By the bottles,' the man answered. 'Wherever the most empty bottles are scattered is the best place.'"

Encouragement.

It is a great mistake to take a good action performed by some one else as a matter of course. If people would but realize that they are better served when they themselves are kind and considerate the world would be the better.

Never be too careless or too superior to give a word of praise, for a word of encouragement has the effect of a tonic upon drooping spirits and adds a new incentive to the worker.

Of course, injudicious praise is a mistake, but if work is badly done try to find some good point about it or point out the mistakes as kindly as possible.

Then and Now.

In the days of old when knights were bold and wore sheetiron shirts and vests, they battled for the right to hold fair maidens to their manly breasts. They went to war and risked their lives to get the girls they wished to win, and when they'd claimed them as their wives supported them through thick and thin. But in these days when every man appears to think he ought to try to get as wealthy as he can, and love is something he can buy, his wife's a partner that he takes in bizness for a year or two; then one or else the other breaks the ties and looks for something new.

Washington's Irish Army.

In a volume just issued by a Manhattan publisher, statistics compiled by the cleric author indicate among other data that three-fourths of Washington's army contained only Irish men or those of Hibernian descent. The statement is made that authoritative records prove that in a single regiment upward of 150 fighters each bore the Christian name, Patrick. The claim is also set forth that Gen. Warren, of Bunker Hill fame, came of Celtic ancestry.

Modern Artificiality.

We certainly should be downcast at the wholesale artificiality of the age. Most of the people one knows are in reality entirely different from what they seek to appear. To take anybody seriously is well-nigh a heinous offense, and it seems to be regarded as a much greater triumph to produce an imitation that "defies detection" than an enduring work of art. The classes are compounded of shame; the middle classes delight in them.—World.

Fight Sewer With Bulldog.

New York, June 22.—In their fight against the construction of that portion of the Westchester sewer which will pass directly under their house, besides taking twenty-three of their seventy ancestral acres for a power house, the Misses Mattie and Sarah Munn, who live in "Pilgrims' Rest," 172 street and avenue B, Bronx, have purchased a large bulldog. All yesterday the misses, in company with the dog, whose name is Penn, waited for the sewer workmen to appear, but they failed to come. The sisters say the house and land have ben in their family for seventy years, and they are loath to lose any part of their possessions. They mean to contest the construction of the sewer across their premises to the bitter end.

FIRST PUBLIC MEETING IN Y.W.C.A.'S NEW HOME

TOOK THE FORM OF SERVICE OF DEDICATION AND PRAISE.

The doors of the Young Women's Christian Association were thrown open yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock for the first public meeting in the new home. It took the form of a service of dedication and praise and was held in the attractive assembly room. The room was overcrowded with people, it being necessary to use the large hallway and library room. There were about 125 in all present.

Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, president of the association, was in charge of the meeting which was opened with singing, after which Mrs. Mead read appropriate Scripture selections. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, also read a Scripture lesson, which was followed with a solo by Miss Nora Schenck.

Mrs. Mead then announced that the home would be open daily and referred to the blessing it could be made to the city. She introduced Miss Eleanor O. Brownell, of New York, who has been the State secretary of the Y. W. C. A. for New York and New Jersey, but who will leave in a few months for Tokio, Japan, to become secretary to the students in one of the universities there.

Miss Brownell circled her thoughts around the occasion in Christ's life when he was the guest at the home of a Pharisee and a woman, when a sinner annointed His feet with oil. She spoke of the beauty of a life which was willing and dare even to scorn and ridicule for the love of Christ and contrasted such a life with a character represented by the half-hearted superficial Pharisee. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, closed the meeting with prayer and pronounced the benediction. Both before and after the meeting many availed themselves of the opportunity of looking through the building, which had been made especially attractive with floral decorations. All were much impressed with the accommodations and the excellent arrangements for carrying on this most important work for girls and women.

The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with lace, and carried bride roses. The bridemaid wore a gown of blue silk, and carried pink roses. The couple left for a short wedding trip and upon their return will reside in this city. The groom is employed as an electrician at the Pond Machine Tool Works.

ROUNDED UP HOBO GANG

Lehigh Detectives Catch Seven in Drag-Net at South Plainfield.

BEGINNING OF CRUSADE

Authorities Determined to Break Up the Practice of Trespassing On the Railroad.

Chief Miles, of the detective force of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, together with several detectives made a trip over the New Jersey Division of the road yesterday for the purpose of rounding up the hoboes who have been trespassing on the railroad property and stealing wire or anything else that they happened to run across. As a result of the raid seven tramps were caught in the net at South Plainfield, five being from Newark, one from Chicago and one from Perth Amboy. They were bagged near the station and were immediately arraigned before Justice W. E. Smith. The seven prisoners, ranging in age from sixteen to twenty-two years, only had $1.40 among them, and this was collected by the justice, after which they were released for lack of evidence to commit them.

The action on the part of the detective force was the result of trouble at Roselle several days ago, when William McCormick, a section foreman, and two of his men were attacked by a gang of tramps. They were stealing a ride on a coal train and as they passed the section-men, they hurled large pieces of coal at them. One of the men was knocked down and received painful injuries. The others escaped injury.

The attack was reported to Chief Miles and he planned yesterday's raid for the purpose of breaking up, if possible, the wholesale riding and stealing of railroad supplies that has been going on for an indefinite time. They met with no success until they neared South Plainfield and there they found the one gang of seven which was arrested, and a number of other hoboes who got away, evidently receiving the tip that the detectives were out for business.

These "knights of the road" make South Plainfield a convenient stopping place for camping out and catching trains for the east and west. Local authorities make no effort to stop them in their acts of trespassing and stealing railroad property, but the practice has been carried on to such an extent that they recognized the necessity of taking prompt action to bring it to an end. The detective force will maintain its vigilance until the practice is broken up.

STOVE POLISH BLEW UP, INJURING SERVANT

HOT STOVE AND PATENT ARTICLE PROVE TO BE BAD COMBINATION.

Kate Svenska, a servant employed at the home of Louis McIntosh, Arlington avenue, bought a package of stove p olish of a peddler on Saturday. Early yesterday morning she applied some to the kitchen range, in which a fire was burning, and as a result sh ehad a narrow escape from serious injury and is suffering from painful burns.

As soon as the stuff was laid on the range it burst into flame with a loud report. The flame shot up about the girl's breast and shoulders, setting fire to her waist. She beat out the waist, but not before her breast and arms had been burned. The stuff burned out on the stove without further damage.

The girl went to the hospital, where her burns were dressed. Her injuries are not serious.

CLARENCE ROOME HURT IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT

THROWN FROM MACHINE BY THE BREAKING OF THE STEERING GEAR.

The breaking of a pin in the steering knuckle of an automobile owned and driven by William J. Roome,Jr., of Sycamore avenue, nearly resulted in a serious accident yesterday morning, while Mr. Roome and his younger brother, Clarence, were riding in the vicinity of Road Ending. The machine was travelling about twelve miles an hour, when the break occurred, causing Mr. Roome to lose entire control of his big machine.

The front wheels ran in a zig-zag course across the road, wrenching the machine at every turn. Before the elder Roome could bring his machine to a standstill, his brother was thrown headlong from his seat and landed in the gutter a distance of twenty feet away. When he fell his entire weight came on his elbow,and at first it was believed that the bones in the arm were broken.

Repairing the machine temporarily, the injured man was hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital, where Dr. B. VanD. Hedges was summoned.He made an x-ray examination at once and while he discovered no broken bones, he found several ligaments badly torn and out of place. These being reset, the young man was taken home. He will not be able to use his arm for several weeks. That the elder Roome was not injured seems almost a miracle.

There was no damage to the machine other than the breaking of the pin and this was repaired in a few minutes at one of the local auto garages.

TROLLEY JUMP A MYSTERY.

Car Leaves the Track from Apparently No Cause At All.

A. P. S. C. trolley car, eastbound, jumped the track near Bound Brook, just after rounding a curve, at 12:40 o'clock this morning, and gave the passengers a scare by slewing across the roadway. Nobody was hurt and the car was not damaged.

The cause of the jump is a mystery. The car was on the straight track, with a heavy guard rail supposedly doing its part toward preventing such things, an dwhen the rail was examined afterward it was found to be in good condition. Examination of the car trucks showed nothing wrong there. Several Plainfielders were on the car. They were jiggled around with the rest of the passengers, and one or two of them complained of sore feelings, which may assay $25 to $50 per feel.

MARCONNIER'S CHILDREN DAY.

Oak Tree Chapel Holds Attractive Exercises; Mr. Clark a Speaker.

The Children's Day exercises of Marconnier chapel, postponed from the date first fixed, was held yesterday afternoon. They were enjoyed by a good-sized gathering. The platform was prettily decorated with flowers.

The talented pupils recited and sang well, and the program proved to be most attractive. Rev. J. Lansdale, the pastor, conducted the exercises. Robert Clark, Jr., of this city, and A. C. Bechstein, an Oak Tree friend of the chapel, spoke. Their remarks were most interesting and made a lively impression on the children.

Credit for the splendid singing is due Horace J. Martin, Sr., of this city. He spent a number of weeks training the school, and led the choruses.

SELF DEFENCE WILL BE THADDEUS PAYNE'S PLEA

HE IS TO BE TRIED THURSDAY: S. S. SWACKHAMER WILL DEFEND HIM.

Self defense is the plea that Thaddeus Payne, the negro who shot Lee Johnson, also colored, in March, in a poolroom on East Front street,will set up. His trial will begin Thursday. He was arraigned in the County Court this morning, on a charge of atrocious assault.

Payne, who came north from his hiding place in the south to surrender himself after the police had practically given up hope of tracking him, asserts that Johnson knocked him down, and that he was in fear of his life when he shot. He says he is confident of substantiating his plea, and surrendered because of that feeling.

Payne alleges that Johnson kicked and struck him until his nose bled before he was moved to shoot. At the time of the shooting the police said the characters of the two men were such that it was hard to believe that Payne shot without some excuse. First reports of the shooting had Payne pulling the revolver and opening fire for no other reason than that Johnson had jeeringly refused to repay a borrowed quarter. S. S. Swackhamer will defend Payne.

REPORT STIRS LAWYERS

Grand Jury's Presentments Result in Call to County Bar Association.

MEETING WEDNESDAY

Members of the Petit Jury Invited to Attend and Join In Discussion of the Charges.

The recent presentment of the Union County Grand Jury, which refers to the system of drawing jurors, has s ostirred the lawyers who practice in the courts, that the Union County Bar Association has called a special meeting for Wednesday at Elizabeth, and the members of the petit jury have been invited to be present.

The meeting will be held chiefly for the purpose of discussing questions relative to the report of the Grand Jury wherein it condemns the system now in vogue of drawing juries. It is understood that the leading members of the Bar Association have been anxiously waiting for an opportunity to urge a reform in the method of drawing juries, and it is reported that the association will endorse that portion of the Grand Jury report.

For a long time it has been the opinion of many persons interested in court matters that the system of drawing jurors has resulted in the county having what is termed the "professional juror," one who is quite likely to be chosen prior to each term of court. This being true, the one to be picked is often quite likely to be friendly to parties in the county who m ay be directly or indirectly interested in cases that are to be tried. One prominent citizen of Plainfield in speaking of the matter today said that under the present jury system it is almost next to impossible to secure conviction in certain cases no matter who the witnesses may be or how strongly the case may be presented, and it is time that the system is changed.

While it is known that there are lawyers in the county who are inclined to depreciate the importance of the Grand Jury report the truth of the statements made are substantiated by many who are in a position to know and who are closely associated in court matters.

CLINTON AVENUE DEFEATS CRIPPLED Y.M.C.A. NINE

HOWARD THE ONLY PITCHER AVAILABLE FOR LISTMAN'S TEAM.

Blood poisoning, affecting his leg, prevented Minford from going into the game for Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon, and as a result Clinton Avenue had but little trouble in winning. The score was 7 to 2.

Tracy Howard was the only pitcher Captain Craig had on the field. The youngster, backed well and industriously, pitched a game that surprised the Clinton Avenue batters. They expected a cinch, but only in one of two places was the going any too easy. There was never any doubt as to the outcome, but none of the West Enders had time to loaf.

It was said after the game that Minford might be out of the game for the rest of the season.

One of our clients owed $45 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Thieves were again active in town Friday night. The cellar under Mont's plumbing store was broken into and a pump valued at $25 was taken. They also tried to gain an entrance into H. C. Smith's candy and cigar store, but the noise of breaking a window in the rear of the store awoke Mrs. John G. Cook, and she opened the window and scared two men away. The work was no doubt done by local talent, as the pump was found Saturday hidden in the Central Hotel barn. The local police are working on the case but no arrests have yet been made.

Saturday's game, in six out of the nine innings, was one-two-three-out affair for Dunellen. Notwithstanding the apparent onesidedness of the contest, the several hundred fans enjoyed the game. Dunellen has a team which if they once settle down will make any team in the league hustle to win. Peacock pitches a good game and keeps up a good heart, although the support given him would have broken the heart of any pitcher.

Crescent Division, U. R., Knights of Pythias, accompanied by visiting Knights and the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, decorated the graves of the departed members of the order, yesterday afternoon, who are buried in the local cemetery.

But one error was charged against the local team in the game Saturday afternoon with Dunellen. The locals are no doubt putting up the fastest fielding game of any team in the league.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Muir and child, of Newark, were the guests over Saturday and Sunday of Mrs. Muir's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Meyer, of Park avenue.

The B. Y. P. U. meeting was the only evening service held last night at the Baptist church, Rev. T. Moore-Smith being out of town for the afternoon and evening.

The members of the Epworth League held an interesting weekly meeting last night in the classrooms of the Methodist church.

Andrew Bender, a member of the faculty of the Borough High School, who has accepted the position of professor in chemistry at the Lebanon Valley College in Pennsylvania, left town on Saturday to spend the summer in the mountains of Pennsylvania. His successor in the borough school has not been secured as yet.

ARE MOMENTS OF ANXIETY.

Those Following Winning of Derby and Reasons Why.

The anxiety of owners of race horses competing in the Derby do not immediately end as the horses pass the judges. The fatal "objection" may snatch the laurels from the victor. The possibility discovered itself over Caractacus' race. The owner had striven in vain to get a jockey of repute. His offer of a life annuity of £100 a year to Gostley in case of success had been declined. A stable boy named Parsons had eventually to be trusted, and, to the surprise of the learned, he got the horse home, winning by a neck. Going to scale, the lad could not draw the weight. In breathless silence the bridle was sent for and that just enabled him to balance the scale. But now Lord Stamford appeared to object that only his own horse and two others had gone the full course. The winner and the rest were already past the starting post when the flag fell. Admiral Rous looked at his watch. "Twenty minutes," he said. "An objection to hold good must be lodged within a quarter of an hour. And so the stable boy's win passed into the records, but the owner of Caractacus declared that not for £1,000 a moment would he again endure the agony of that short period following the race.—London Saturday Review.

WEEDS THAT ARE VALUABLE.

Medicinal Properties in Many Plants Looked on as Pests.

It is not a matter of common knowledge that some of the weeds "infesting" the land will produce the crude drugs which to-day in large part are obtained by importation from abroad. Alice Henkel, an assistant of the government's plant industry bureau, says that the roots, leaves and flowers of several of the weed species regarded as plagues in the United States are gathered, prepared and cured in Europe, and not only for useful commodities there but supply to a considerable extent the demands of foreign lands. There are weeds in this country against which extermination laws have been passed which hold in their leaves, stems or roots medicinal properties which have a value in the work of preserving the health of the nation. It is possible in ridding land of weeds in order that crops may be grown to make of the uprooted "pests" a source of income. Moreover, it is possible to maintain upon land given over as worthless for crop-growing purposes a weed plantation, which after the harvest will prove itself to be not less profitable than some of the tilled fields.

$350,000 in Coats of Arms.

There are sufficient people in England and Scotland paying the annual tax imposed by the inland revenue upon the use of armorial bearings to produce a sum of $350,000 each year. The great bulk of this sum is paid by people who care not an atom either about their family or their arms, but pay the tax regularly simply because they have carriages or plate heraldically decorated. The really old families of the realm, however, use armorial emblems for decorative purposes to an extent almost incredible in the eyes of those familiar with them only on note paper, table silver and carriage panels.

How the Pendulum was Found.

Like many of the commonest mechanical instruments in daily use, the invention of the pendulum is due entirely to chance. Galileo, when under 20 years of age, was standing one day in the Metropolitan church of Pisa, while some painters were at work on the ceiling of the church. A suspended lamp which was hanging before the altar was disturbed in some manner, and the scientist was struck with the almost perfect regularity with which it swung back and forth. The idea of measuring time by such an instrument found instant generation in his brain, and he completed the system in use to this day.—Sunday Magazine.

Common Sense in Diet.

As man was created for a varied and mixed diet, he has abundant opportunities for selecting his food and supplying his individual needs. In most cases appetite is the surest guide to healthy digestion and proper nourishment. This certainly is the common sense view that must appeal to all rational feeders: "Eat with regularity and in accordance with the demands of hunger such dishes as have always been regarded as innocuous, and remember that, as a rule, it is neither meats nor bouillon nor wine nor spices nor coffee which poison us, but their abuse."

His Vain Threat.

Here is a verbatim report of a conversation overheard in a New York elevated train: He—What would you do if some other man told you he loved you? She—Don't be silly: He—But I mean it. What would you do? She (impatiently)—I don't know what I'd do. He (fiercely)—Well, I know what I'd do. She—What? He—I'd kill him. She (serenely)—I don't suppose you'd ever know anything about it.

Mathematics in the Kitchen.

Mrs. Dickenharry—For goodness' sake, Mary, how long did you boil those eggs? The New Cook—Half an hour ,mum. Mrs. Dickenharry—But didn't I tell you that three minutes was enough for an egg? The New Cook—Yessum. But I biled ten of 'em.

THE SCRAP BOOK

THE SCRAP BOOK for July is issued in two sections—two complete magazines, each with its own cover and its own table of contents. One of these sections is an ALL-ILLUSTRATED magazine; the other is an ALL-FICTION magazine. Each is a mammoth magazine in itself. The one presents an overwhelming array of human interest articles and illustrations: the other an enormous tonnage of fiction—160 pages of absorbing stories.

Ten years ago I created a new type of magazine—the ALL-FICTION magazine. Now I am creating another distinct type—the ALL-ILLUSTRATED magazine. This is the age of specialization. The conventional magazine, with its smattering of illustrations and its smattering of fiction and its smattering of special articles, doesn't contain enough of any one thing to make it satisfying. The ALL-FICTION magazine and the ALL-ILLUSTRATED magazine, joined together as a unit, strengthen each other, and make something really big and forceful and convincing.

The Only Way to Know a Thing is to Try It

The two-section magazine idea is brand-new to the world. It is not quite new with me, however, as I have given it, at odd times, four or five years of thought. It first came into my mind in response to a desire to couple, in some way, the strength of the all-fiction magazine with the illustrated features of the conventional magazine. It has been a difficult problem to work out. Now that the idea is perfected, I wish to see what there is in it. It looks to me to be very good, but the only way to know a thing is to try it.

Two Magazines for a Quarter—Easy Money

The price of this two-part magazine is twenty-five cents, which is equal to twelve and one-half cents a magazine. Most magazines which were selling at ten cents have been advanced to fifteen cents. THE SCRAP BOOK in two parts means two magazines for twenty-five cents against thirty cents for two fifteen cent magazines.

LAST OF LONDON'S OLD INNS.

Travelers of To-day Stop at the Tavern of Pickwick and Sam Weller.

A century ago London was noted for its coaching inns. To-day only one remains in London proper to recall the gayety of coaching parties that assembled in the comfortable parlors for an evening of pleasure. George's inn, the last of the famous taverns where the nobility of England gathered in years gone by was probably the most popular that lined the roadways of the English capital. It was through his association with the people who frequented George's inn that Charles Dickens began to attract widespread attention as a novelist and writer. More than three score years ago he was a familiar figure when revelry held sway in the now antiquated tavern. Here it was that Mr. Dickens met Mr. Pickwick and the various characters he immortalized in "Pickwick Papers" and bounded at once into popular favor as a humorist and close student of character. The attractiveness of the old inn is still maintained at a high standard, and it is to-day a favorite stopping place for travelers and coaching parties. Nothing has been removed from the place to dim the memories of the past. The same old-fashioned chairs, benches, tables and furniture are there that were in use a century ago, and the decorations have never been altered. Ownership has remained with the same family for many generations, and it is said the present owner is a direct descendant of the man who originally opened it.

QUALITIES OF THE OYSTER.

One Particularly Good Point Which Bore Might Emulate.

A San Franciscan has discovered a new method of cutting short recitals that promise to become too long-winded. An acquaintance of his, who has a local reputation as a bore, was one day holding forth at some length when the Californian interrupted him with: "By the way, did I ever tell you the story of the oyster?" On receiving a negative reply, he continued: "It seems that when oysters are taken from the sea they often open their shells so that the juice or liquid runs out. As this is undesirable, the experienced oyster gatherer has a tub of water close at hand into which the oyster is plunged as soon as it begins to open its shell." "Well, and what then?" asked the other as the narrator paused. The San Franciscan smiled. "Oh, after a while the oyster learns to keep its mouth shut," he remarked quietly.

Great Slaughter of Salmon.

In the Sea of Okotsk the salmon are suicidal and one of the most startling examples of the spendthrift side of nature may be found in the rivers that run into this sea. When six years old the salmon begin a voyage of death. Ascending the river of their infancy they race in countless thousands upstream until lack of food and lack of elbow room kill them off. A recent traveler declares that, however many millions of salmon may run up the river, not one ever reaches the sea again alive. What becomes of the rivers of dead salmon? The seagulls wheel down upon the scene and feast upon their eyes, scorning anything less dainty. Bears, wolves, foxes and sledge dogs are made comfortable for the year.

To Tell Horse's Character.

It is easy to tell a horse's character by his nose, according to an army officer. If the profile has a gentle curve and at the same time the ears are pointed and sensitive, the animal may be depended on as being gentle and at the same time high-spirited. On the other hand, if the horse has a dent in the middle of his nose it is safe to set him down as treacherous and vicious. A horse with a slight concavity in the profile will be easily scared and needs coaxing, while one that droops his ears is apt to be both lazy and vicious.

Lye Ruins Eyeglasses.

A Ludlow woman learned by experience what any chemist could have told her, that lye will ruin eyeglasses, says the Kansas City Star. The woman was making soap and splashed a drop or two of the mixture on her glasses. She took a cloth and endeavored to clean them, but was amazed to find that all the colors of the rainbow were reflected in the lenses. No amount of washing would remove the colors, and it was necessary to get new lenses.

Corn and Wheat Food.

It is a matter of custom rather than of reason that we should use so much wheat and so little corn in our daily ration. Practically all the wheat produced is converted into food for man. It is probable that not one bushel of corn in 50 raised in this country goes upon the table. That is a regrettable anomaly when we consider that two bushels of corn can be produced to every bushel of wheat on a given area and that the national corn crop is four times the national wheat crop.

Cut Flowers.

To preserve cut flowers a small lump of ammonia should be placed in the vase. This will not only keep them fresh, but will also help to destroy the unpleasant odor that so often arises from flowers whose stalks have a tendency to become slimy. Flowers of this description should have a wee bit snipped from their stalks every time the water is changed and also before arranging them for the first time.

LOST TO RARITAN.

Dunellen Field Club Drops Its First Game, 7 to 5.

The Dunellen F. C. lost its first game of the season to the Crescent baseball team of Raritan, Saturday afternoon. The batting of Murphy and the fielding of the Raritans were the features of the game.

Dunellen secured three of their six hits off Anderson in the eighth inning, but fast fielding by the Raritans kept the Dunellenies from crossing the rubber.

Munsey's New Idea.

An innovation that is without question the greatest that ever happened in magazine publication has come with the first appearance of the newest Munsey idea for July. Like all of Mr. Munsey's undertakings, it is a little startling, but it will grow on you. Briefly, it is a magazine in two volumes—under separate covers, but under one name. The name is The Scrap Book—a magic name that made a great magazine a great success from the start. Mr. Munsey says there isn't room enough within one cover to make a big enough and strong enough magazine to satisfy the reader of today. The Scrap Book in its new form is the largest magazine ever published—the biggest money's worth to be had. Its conception seems only natural to the man who has achieved fame by sizing up the wants of the reading public and then filling the want.

BOSS IN HIS OWN COURT.

Montana Judge Refused to Listen to Point of Law.

At one time, the supreme court issued a supervisory writ directing Judge Clancy, of Montana, to make a certain order in a case, either granting or refusing a right to Amalgamated, so that the matter might be finally determined in the higher tribunal. When this was brought to the judge's attention, he announced that he would take the matter under advisement. The judge had taken other matters under advisement and they had never been heard of afterwards; it was one way of allowing Heinze ample time to extract valuable ore bodies from the disputed ground. "Under the decision of the supreme court, we are entitled to an immediate order," said L. O. Evans, the Amalgamated attorney, who presented the matter in court. "Well, I'm not going to give it to you," came back the reply from the bench. "Our only recourse will be another appeal to the supreme court," said Mr. Evans. "You can go to the supreme court, or —anywhere else you please," said the judge. "This court can be punished for contempt—" "Go away, go away," shouted the judge, waving his long arms belligerently toward the lawyer. "You talk like a town fool I used to know back in Missouri. Bailiff, adjourn court."—McClure's Magazine.

FAITH IN HER NINE LIVES.

Cat Took Chances in Flying Leap from Burning Building.

During a fire in the tenement house at 124 West One Hundred and Second street the other day a large black cat, with shiny yellow eyes, appeared on a window sill of the fifth story. Behind it a dull red glow and an occasional puff of smoke gave warning that the flames were rapidly approaching. Puss understood, and, after a short walk on the sill, launched herself into space. The flight through the air was like that of a squirrel, the poise being perfect and the legs spread out as widely as possible. The cat descended in a long, graceful curve, and when she struck the pavement the feet were quickly bunched together and there was no "dull thud." For a single instant the cat paused, as if to recover from the shock, and then, with a long-drawn meouw and every hair on end, dashed along the street and disappeared in the darkness.—N. Y. Sun.

Remarkable Funeral.

A remarkable funeral, among the mourners being 100 of the deceased's descendants, 85 of whom were comparatively small children, many of them babies in arms, recently took place at Adamsville, York county, Pa., when Mrs. Rebecca Godling Gadfelter, of that place, was laid to rest. There were 40 grandchildren and 45 great-grandchildren, besides the sons and daughters of the deceased, of whom there were five, all the offspring of Mrs. Gadfelter's first husband, who died some years ago. The great number of children, all of whom live in York county, attracted the attention of the mourners and friends and made such an impression that the minister, Rev. Adam Stump, dwelt particularly on their presence and the large family connections of the dead woman.

Rodney's Feathered Ally.

April 12 is the anniversary of Rodney's timely but much controverted victory over De Crasse, in which he received assistance from an unexpected ally. While the new manoeuvre of "breaking up the line"—really invented by Capt. Douglas—was being executed, a shot shattered the hencook and a little bantam cock escaped into the rigging. From this coign of vantage, whenever the Glorieux fired her broadside into the Formidable, he would hurl back a prolonged crow of defiance at the Frenchman. This "produced mighty merriment among the seamen, and inspired them with a proper spirit for the business." As a reward for his public services, the plucky little bird was reprieved from the cook, and passed the rest of his days ashore as a petted pensioner.

Satisfying Congregation's Curiosity.

Rev. C. N. Wright, Wardle Vicarage, Rochdale, for a personal reminiscence, writes: "In my third living there was a very crowded congregation the first morning I officiated. The parishioners were evidently curious as to the build, color of hair, etc., of their new vicar. As a matter of fact I was, though a young man, very bald. A little thought would have caused me to make my first appearance on any morning but the eighth, but it was the eighth, and in the Psalms, which were read and not sung, I had to say: 'My sins are more in number than the hairs of my head."—London Globe.

In a German Law Court.

A German law court was the scene lately of an amusing incident. The magistrate, a tiresome and long-winded person, was deciding a small case in which the plaintiff claimed damages for abuse. "To call a man a 'pig' or a 'dog,'" ruled the judge, "is certainly an insult; but to say that he is a 'pig-dog' is inoffensive, for no such animal exists." The plaintiff glared at the bench. "Schweine-hund!" he remarked with bitter emphasis.—T. P.'s Weekly.

More Than One.

"The average woman," said Grumbell, "has but one idea, and that's dress." "Huh!" snorted Marryat, "my wife usually has at least a dozen ideas, and they're dresses."—The Catholic Standard and Times.

SPINSTER'S THOUGHTS.

Love is that thing which makes you believe what you know is not true.

A remembered kiss is like an exclamation point in the mental landscape.

It is fearfully discouraging when we are good to find how monotonous and lonely life is.

When a man is willing to go to church with a girl he is terribly fond of her, for the time being.

There is at least this one good point about being married—that, while you are, you cannot be so foolish again.

One of the queerest things about a man is the way he thinks that the woman who loves him should adore his faults.

Strange that even when a man is married and has freckles on his face or is bald, that he still thinks girls should like him.

It is doubtful if Briareus could have managed as many packages with all his hundred hands as does the modern woman with only two.

INTERESTING BITS.

WHEN WOMEN MEET.

"How do you like my new hat, Louise?"

"I think it is beautiful, Lucy."

"I am so glad you like it. You have such excellent taste."

"Yes, but er—I think that pink bow would look more chic on the right side instead of the left."

"Really, I—"

"A white bird? How odd you talk! Why—"

"And those beads! In my opinion—"

"Never mind your opinion. I don't care to hear it. If I didn't know any more about millinery than you do, I would wear a sunbonnet. So there!"

And now people wonder why Lucy and Louise don't speak when they meet.—Chicago Daily News.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

Nothing Doing.

There was a man in our town,

His business kept going down—
An advertiser? No.

Proof.

"Does your husband love you?" we asked.

"Madly, devotedly!" she answered.

"Are you quite sure?"

"Quite. How can I doubt? He has shut me up here in this little cage of a place, where he expects me to spend all my time, with nobody's company but his own. If he does not love me, why does he take so much trouble to make me miserable?"

And there shone in her fine eyes the beautiful strong light of unshaken confidence.—Puck.

The Silver Lining.

"Terrible accident you had on your road," observed the sympathizing friend.

"Oh, not so bad," replied the railway president, cheerily. "You see, there ain't a single one can be identified except the engineer and a couple of firemen."—Puck.

A Pertinent Query.

Lady of the House—Why don't you go to work? Don't you know that a rolling stone gathers no moss? ?

Tramp—Madam, not to evade your question at all, but merely to obtain information, may I ask of what practical utility moss is to a man in my condition?

Bizby's Effort.

"Bizby said that when he was making that speech at the banquet the other night he was so rattled he didn't know what he was talking about."

"He may not have been rattled. Not a soul who heard him had the faintest idea of what he was talking about."—Chicago Journal.

Sure to Kill.

When the celebrated physician, Sir Henry Holland, told Sydney Smith that he had failed to kill either one of a brace of pheasants that had risen within easy range near the latter's home, the witty divine asked:

"Why did you not prescribe for them?"

After the Reward.

Lady—What is it, little boy?

Little Jim (carrying a cat)—I came to claim the reward you offered for the return of your canary.

Lady—But that is a cat.

Jim—Yes; but the canary is inside the cat.

Only to Pay the Bills.

Husband — Another new dress! Where do you suppose I shall get the money from to pay for it?

Wife—You must excuse me. I didn't marry you to give you financial advice.

Life as a Game.

"Life," remarked the sententious bachelor, "is like a game of cards."

"It's more like a game of chess from my point of view," rejoined the married man. "I invariably move once a year."—Chicago Daily News.

Poets Will Never Organize.

De Cash—Why don't you poets form a union?

Poet—Where would we get the money to pay our dues?—Judge.

Tied and Untied.

"Was their marriage a failure?"

"Oh, no. They were divorced before it had a chance to be that."—Judge.

THE STORY OF THE OUTLAW.

Bad Men of the West Classified and Analyzed.

Emerson Hough constitutes himself the historian of the outlaw, believing the truth about "the bad man" of the west is sufficiently thrilling and meaning to present merely truth. There were outlaws of all nationalities, according to Mr. Hough, but the prizetaker among them was the western white bad man, who in a land which the law could not protect, like the great region on the frontier, reverted to the ways of Goth and Teuton forbears. There were genuine bad men and imitation bad men, and Mr. Hough thus differentiates them: "Throughout the west there are two sorts of wolves—the coyote and the gray wolf. Either will kill and both are lovers of blood. One is yellow at heart and the other is game all the way through. Outwardly both are wolves, and in appearance they sometimes grade toward each other so closely it is hard to determine the species. The gray wolf is a warrior and is respected, the coyote is a sneak and a murderer, and his name is a term of reproach throughout the west."

TURNED OUT BY NATURE.

Many Things of Use That the Old Dame Manufactures.

Nature is something of a manufacturer herself. In the case of a certain cactus marvelous natural pottery is produced. Woodpeckers excavate nests in the trunk and branches, and to protect itself the plant exudes a sticky juice, which hardens, forming a woody lining to the holes made by the birds. Eventually the cactus dies and withers away, but the wooden bowls remain. As a weaver nature also produces fine work. Certain tree barks and leaves furnish excellent cloth, as, for instant, the famous tapa cloth used in the South sea islands. Nature is a glass-maker, too. By discharging her lightning into beds of quartz sand she forms exquisite little pipes of glass. She makes valuable ropes of various kinds in the shape of tropical vines and creepers, and she is even a lacemaker, as witness the lace tree of the West Indies.—Indian Review.

Excludes Draughts.

Fresh-air cranks, who believe in having an abundance of fresh air during the sleeping hours, will find the ventilating canopy of interest. The problem of properly ventilating a room to allow the admission of all the fresh air possible is often hard to solve, as it is invariably impossible to prevent draughts, which naturally must be avoided. By the use of the ventilating canopy, the sleeper is perfectly safe from draughts, it being even possible to place the bed in front of the open window. The framework of the canopy is secured firmly to the head of the bed, the covering being placed over all portions but the front. The head and upper portion of the body are thus protected from all draughts, the fresh air, nevertheless, having full egress in front.

Sunken Funds Recovered.

Some idea of the work done by submarine divers in recovering treasure from sunken ships can be gotten from the following figures just published: From the steamship Malabar was recovered more than $1,250,000; from the steamship Alphonso XII., $450,000; from the steamship Hamilla Mitchell, $250,000, and from the steamship Carnatic, $200,000. The complete list is long, but these figures from Popular Mechanics give an idea of the enormous value of the treasures which the greedy waves have swallowed and the inducement to invest large capital, construct ingenious and expensive machinery, and run great risks in raising "watered" stock.

Metals in Bad Odor.

A German scientist has just declared that every metal has its characteristic odor. Not every one can detect the odor of cold tin, copper or aluminum, but when pieces of such metals are heated to a moderate degree they give off strong smells, distinguishable by anybody. At higher temperatures metals lose all trace of smell, but again give off an odor on being heated after a lapse of several hours in a cold state. Coined silver and gold often have a suspicious taint.

PREROGATIVES OF RANK.

Why Jed Resigned as Chief of Brambleville Fire Department.

The Brambleville postmaster looked out with a frown from his barred window at the returned traveler who was questioning him. "I can't go out o' this pen o' mine till the mail's distributed," he said, with resentment. "The new rules and regulations don't hardly let a man breathe. What was it you asked me about the fire department?

"No, Jed isn't chief any more. That's all owing to the city folks that come here now and try to run our whole village.

"There was a little spark of a fire down in one o' their cottages, an' because our fire department didn't get there quite as quick as they expected they 'instituted inquiries'—I'm giving you their own words—and when they found the two ladders had been in Jed's orchard, an' that had made a little delay, they rained such a lot o' talk that Jed resigned.

"As he said, if the chief o' the fire department hasn't got the right to borrow a couple o' ladders from the engine house when he needs 'em to pick his fruit, who has?

"But you can't reason much with these city folks. They're a kind of a high-handed lot."—Youth's Companion.

CAN'T SING AND LOOK PRETTY.

That Is Why One Woman Has No Vocal Ambitions.

"Of course it's nice in some ways to have a beautiful voice, but I'm glad I don't sing," said the pretty woman as she applauded perfunctorily after the soprano solo. "Yes, I am fond of music, but that is sufficient. If I could be tempted to sing, what would happen to my good looks? I think it is not silly for a woman to wish to look well at all times.

"A woman never looks pretty or beautiful when she sings. She invariably twists her mouth to one side and makes her face appear crooked. I have keenly observed the last ten singers I have heard, and every one of them opened her mouth on a bias. I haven't the slightest idea why they do it, unless the muscles of one side of the face are stronger than those on the other, and in the effort to sing the stronger muscles do the most work. I suppose men do the same thing, but generally they wear mustaches to cover their mouths.

"If one shuts one's eyes a song always is enjoyed more, for there is something disturbing about a pretty woman deliberately making herself a fright by stretching her mouth in song."

The Window of Refuge.

Scarcely a single tourist who drives down the stately Prado, in Havana and turns off into the fashionable Malecon along the sea knows the significance of the ever open window which he notices in an ancient building on his left. For centuries it has been the custom to leave this window open day and night for the reception of stray infants, of those poor little unfortunates born under such circumstances that their parents cannot claim them. They are left on the window sill, chiefly during the silent hours of the night, and when found are taken care of by various priests, who bring them up in the Catholic faith and usually urge them to become priests or nuns. Very few ever discover their rightful parents.

Lesser of Two Evils.

The burglar's wife was in the witness box and the prosecuting attorney was conducting a vigorous cross-examination.

"Madam, you are the wife of this man?"

"Yes."

"You knew he was a burglar when you married him?"

"Yes."

"How did you come to contract a matrimonial alliance with such a man?"

"Well," the witness said sarcastically, "I was getting old and had to choose between a lawyer and a burglar."

The cross-examination ended there.—Tatler.

His Shortcoming.

"No, sir," said a clerk to his employer, "I don't think there's anything unreasonable in my asking for an increase of salary. You may remember that you promised me a rise when I had been with you a year."

"I know I did," rejoined the employer; "but didn't I make it conditional upon your having given me every satisfaction?"

"And in what way, sir, haven't I given you satisfaction?" asked the clerk.

"In what way?" replied the employer, with a show of anger. "Do you think you are satisfying me in asking for an increase of salary?"

Town Enriched by Earthquake.

With all the harm that earthquakes do," said a rug dealer, "it is pleasant to hear of an entire town that an earthquake enriched.

"The town I mean is Ouzoun-Ada, on the Caspian sea, the terminus of the Trans-Caspian and Samarkand railway. Ouzoun-Ada in the past had a miserable port, but a few years ago an earthquake visited her and on its departure she found herself the richer by a harbor deep enough to float the largest ships.

"Since that fortunate visit Ouzoun-Ada's population and wealth have trebled."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Jabez Enjoyed the Pone Pudding and the Cat Got the Punishment.

The late Senator Pugh, of Alabama, practiced law for many years in Eufaula. A Eufaula man said of him the other day:

"In an eloquent speech on circumstantial evidence I once heard Senator Pugh drive home the danger of this sort of evidence with a good story.

"He said that a Eufaula woman made one of those corn pone puddings for which the ladies of our state are famous. She put the pudding on a shelf to cool and then she went out to have a dress fitted. Her little son Jabez was left alone in the house.

"Jabez played with his toys till he got hungry. Then he put a chair beneath the shelf, climbed up and ate all of the delicious pone pudding that his small interior would possibly hold. To conclude, he did a strange thing.

"He caught the cat, dabbled her four paws in the soft yellow custard in the bottom of the dish and then set her down. She scampered through the kitchen into the dining-room and parlor and thence out of doors. On the bare boards of the kitchen, on the dining-room's red carpet and on the parlor's carpet of green she left impartially small golden footprints, very neat, very conspicuous. The boy smiled softly to himself.

"And that evening, on his father's return he heard a wild scampering below, the banging of the front door, a terrific mewing and the sharp crack of a rifle.

"Then little Jabez smiled softly to himself again.

"'Ah, me!' he said, 'there goes another victim of circumstantial evidence.'"

IMMIGRANTS AT WINNIPEG.

Canadian City Where Fifteen Languages Are Spoken.

Winnipeg is where they do things. This is really the place where the frontier was abolished by the real estate regicides. A kingdom is sold daily in Winnipeg, an army is marched in to occupy it over night.

The yards of the Canadian Pacific railway alone in Winnipeg have over 120 miles of trackage, and they need it. The immigrants come by battlion—Englishmen in caps, Scotchmen in bonnets, Breton French in blue coats, Germans, Swedes, Norwegians, Austrians, Mennonites, Galacians—all manner of furtive folk and wild.

There are 15 known languages in the Winnipeg schools, and a lot too late to classify. When you see a stranger you cannot tell whether or not he is within the range of human speech. You bitterly reflect only that he is one of those who have wiped out the old frontier, lost it forever to those who love the wilderness.—Outing Magazine.

Indian Sign Language.

When an Indian paints his cheeks in scarlet lines and daubs a yellow square on his forehead the world knows that he is in love.

When he covers his face with zigzag black lines upon an ochre base it is his purpose to—an, I'm almost ashamed to say it—to get just as skated as he possibly can.

When red circles are on each cheekbone and a rectangle of blue is on the forehead the young brave is going out to steal a paleface horse.

When he paints white rings around his eyes he is running for office, he is a candidate for medicine man or councillor, and the white rings signify that he ought to be elected because he has the wisdom of the owl.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

A Russian Pastime.

If the human jaws need some occupation in the intervals of meals and gossip, says Health Culture, masticators could learn a lesson from the peasants of southern Russia, who exercise their teeth on the hard seeds of the Caspia sunflower.

There is not a suspicion of a stimulant about it, no chewing gum dyspepcia or navy plug nuisance.

It is a pastime and, incidentally, an excellent dentifrice.

Bribery in Business.

It is not to be denied that our commercial ethics need bracing up. The secret commission, the direct bribe, the many-headed monster "treating," the masked present, all these form an obstacle in the path of the honest and direct business. They may seem harmless little practices enough carried out on a small scale; but in the bulk they represent a formidable element which has perceptible effect on business generally.—Drapers' Record.

Couldn't Get Poached Eggs.

"I'll have some poached eggs, this morning," said the thespian, as he seated himself at the breakfast table.

"Very sorry, sah," replied the dusky waiter, "but our eggs won't poach."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, sah, you see dis is a dog town,' where de theater folks comes to try dere plays, and consumquently de condition of de eggs is such as to evade poachin', sah."—Yonkers Statesman.

Cheering a Seasick Passenger.

"Steward, how long will it be before we get into the harbor?"

"About an hour and a half, ma'am."

"Oh, dear, I shall die before then."

"Very likely, ma'am. But you'll be all right when you've been in shore ten minutes."—Marine Journal.

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

But utter and almost speechless astonishment awaited Old Cy at the icehouse when he visited it the next morning, for the venison was gone, not a bird remained, and one of the two strings of trout had vanished.

In front, on the sand, was the same tell-tale moccasin tracks.

"Wall, by the Great Horn Spoon! if that cuss hain't swiped the hull business," Old Cy ejaculated, as he looked in and then at the tracks. "Crossed over last night," he added, noting where a canoe had cut its furrow, "an' steered plumb for my icehouse! The varmint!"

But Martin was angry, thoroughly angry, at the audacious insolence of the theft, and the thought that just now this sneaking half-breed was doubtless enjoying grilled venison and roast partridge in some secure shelter. It also opened his eyes to the fact that this chap would hang about, watching his chance, until they started out of the wilderness, and then capture the girl if he could. For a little while Martin pondered over the situation and then announced his plans.

"There's law, and officers to execute it," he said, "if a sufficient reward be offered; and to-morrow you and I, Levi, will start for the settlement and fetch a couple in. I'll gladly give $500 to land this sneak behind the bars. If he can't be caught, we can at least have two officers to guard us going out."

All that day he and Levi spent in hunting. Another deer was captured, more birds secured, and when evening came plans to meet the situation were discussed.

"You or Ray must remain on guard daytimes near the cabin," Martin said to Old Cy. "My wife and Chip had better keep in it, or near it most of the time; and both of you must sleep there nights. One or the other can fish or hunt, as needed. We must be gone a week or more, even if we have good luck; but fetching the officers here is the best plan now."

Levi was up early the next morning, and had the best canoe packed for a hurry trip ere breakfast was ready. No tent was to be taken, only blankets, a rifle, a bag of the simplest cooking-utensils, pork, bread and coffee. A modest outfit—barely enough to sustain life, yet all a woodsman carries when a long canoe journey with many carries must be taken.

There were sober faces at the landing when Martin was ready to start—Chip most sober of all—for now she realized as never before how serious a burden she had become.

No time was wasted in good-bys. Martin grasped the bow paddle, and with "Old Faithful" Levi wielding the stern one, they soon crossed the lake and vanished at its outlet.

And now, also, for the first time, Angie realized how much the presence of these two strong and resourceful men meant to her. All that day she and Chip clung to the cabin, while Old Cy, a long, lanky Leatherstocking, patrolled the premises, rifle in hand.

"We hain't a mite o' cause to worry," he said when nightfall drew near. "The pesky varmint's a coward, 'n' knows guns are plenty here, an' we folks handy in usin' 'em. I've rigged a fish line to the ice house door so it'll rattle some tinware in the cabin if he meddles it again. I sleep with one eye 'n' both ears open, an' if he comes prowlin' round night-times, he'll hear bullets whizzin' an' think Fourth o' July's opened up arly."

But for all his cheerful assurance, time passed slowly, and a sense of real danger oppressed Angie and Chip as well. Ray shared it also. He was not as yet hardened to the wilderness, and like all who are thus tender, its vast somber solitude seemed ominous.

Only the hermit, with his moonlike eyes and impassive ways, showed no sign of trouble. What this half-breed wanted, other than food, he seemed not to understand; and while he helped about the camp work and followed Old Cy like a dog, he was of no other aid.

One, two, three days of watchful guard and evenings when even Old Cy's cheerful philosophy or Ray's banjo failed to dispel the gloom, and then, just as the sun was setting once again, a canoe with one occupant was seen to enter the lake and head for the landing.

CHAPTER VII.

An unexpected canoe entering a lake so secluded and so seldom visited as this lake must needs awaken the keenest surprise, and especially in the case of a party situated as this one was. Ray, who had just returned from a berry-picking trip over at the "blow down," and Old Cy, carrying his suggestive rifle, were at the landing some time before this canoe reached it, while Angie and Chip waited almost breathlessly on the cabin piazza. A stout, bare-headed Indian, clad in white man's raiment, was paddling. He glanced at the two awaiting him at the landing, with big black, emotionless eyes, and then up to the cabin.

As his canoe now grated on the sandy beach close by, he laid aside his paddle, stepped forward and out, drew his craft up, and folding his arms glanced at Old Cy again, as if waiting for a welcome. None was needed, however, for on the instant, almost, came an exclamation of joy from Chip, and with a "Hullo, Poppy Tomah," she was down the bank, with both her hands in his.

A faint smile of welcome spread over his austere face as he looked down at the girl, but not a word, as yet, came.

Old Cy, quick to see that he was a friend, now advanced.

"We're glad to see ye," he said, "an' as ye seem to be a friend o' the gal's, we'll make ye welcome."

The Indian bowed low, and a "How do," like a grunt, was his answer. A calm, slow, motionless type of a now almost extinct race, as he seemed to be, he would utter no word or move a step farther until invited. But now, led by Chip, he advanced up the path.

"It's Tomah, old Poppy Tomah," she said with pride, as Angie rose to meet them, "and he's the only body who was ever good to me."

"I am glad to see you, sir," Angie said, with a gracious bow and smile, "and you are welcome here."

"I thank the white lady—I not forget," came the Indian's dignified answer with a stately bow.

Not a word of greeting for Chip or of surprise at finding her here—only the eagle glance, accustomed to bright sunlight or to following the flight of a bird far out of white man's vision.

"We shall have supper soon," Angie added, uncertain what to say to this impassive man, "and some for you."

It was a deft speech, for Angie, accustomed to take in every detail of a man from the condition of his nails to the cut of his clothing, as all women will, had ere now absorbed the appearance of this swarthy redskin, and was not quite sure whether to invite him to share their table or say nothing.

But the Indian solved his own problem, for spying the outdoor fire to which Old Cy now retreated, he bowed again and strode away toward it.

"Me cook here?" he said to Old Cy. With an "Of course, an' you're welcome to," the question was settled.

Chip soon drew near, and now for the first time the Indian's speech seemed to return, and while Old Cy busied himself about the cooking, these two began to visit.

Chip, as might be expected, did most of the talking, asked questions as to Tim's place, when he was there, and what they said about her running away, in rapid succession. Her own adventures and how she came here soon followed, and it was not long before he knew all that was to be known about her.

His replies were blunt and brief, after the manner of such. Now and then an expressive nod or grunt filled in the place of an ordinary answer. He knew but little about the recent happenings at Tim's place, as he had stayed there only one night since Chip had departed with her father—as he was told. He had been away in the woods, looking for places to set traps later, and had no idea Chip was here.

As to Pete's movements, he was equally in the dark, and when Chip told him what her friends here suspected, he merely grunted. As he seemed to wish to do his own cooking, Old Cy, having completed his task, offered him a partridge and a couple of trout fresh from the icehouse, also pork and potatoes, and left him to care for himself.

He became more sociable later, and when supper was over and the rest had, as usual, gathered on the piazza of the new cabin, he joined them.

And now came a recital from Ray of far more interest to these people than they suspected.

"I saw a bear over back of the ridge this afternoon," he said, "or I don't know but it was a wildcat. I'd just filled my pail with berries, when way up, close to the rocks, I saw something moving. I crouched down back of a bush, thinking it might be a bear, and if it was, I'd get a chance to see it nearer. I could only see the top of its back above the bushes, and once I saw its head, as if it was standing up. Then I didn't see it for quite a spell, and then I caught sight of its back again, a good deal nearer, and then it went into one of the gullies in the hog-back. I didn't wait to see if it came out, but cut for home."

"Did this critter sorter wobble like a woodchuck runnin'?" put in Old Cy.

"No, it just crept along evenly," answered Ray. "I'd see it when it would come out between the bushes."

"'Twa'n't a b'ar," muttered Old Cy, and then, as if the unwisdom of waking suspicion in Angie's mind occurred, he added hastily, "but mebbe 'twas a doe, walkin' head down 'n' feedin'."

No further notice was taken of Ray's adventure. The sight of deer everywhere about was a ten-times daily occurrence, and Old Cy's dismissal of the matter ended it.

His thoughts, however, were a different matter. Full well he knew it was no bear thus moving. A deer would never enter a crevasse, nor a wildcat or lynx ever leave the shelter of woods to wander in open sunlight.

"I'll go over thar in the mornin'," he said to himself; "I may git a chance to wing that varmint 'n' end our worryin'."

CHAPTER VIII.

Old Cy's suspicions were correct. It was neither bear, deer, nor wildcat that Ray saw skulking along the ridge, but the half-breed.

Believing Chip's father had taken her out of the wilderness, or more likely up-stream to find a place with these campers, he had come here to seek her. To find her here, as he of course did, only convinced him that his suspicions were true and that her father had thus meant to rob him.

Two determined impulses now followed this discovery: First, to make the girl he had bought a prisoner, carry her into the woods, and then, when the chance came, revenge himself on McGuire. No sense of law, or decency even, entered his calculation. He was beyond such scruples, and what he wanted was his only law.

The fear of rifles, which he knew were plenty enough at this camp, was the only factor to be considered. For days he watched the camp from across the lake, hoping that the girl he saw canoeing with a boy so often might come near enough for him to make a capture. Many times, when darkness served, he paddled close to where the cabin stood, and once landed and watched it for hours.

Growing bolder, as the days wore on, he hid his canoe below the outlet of the lake and taking advantage of this outcropping slate ledge with its many fissures, secreted himself and watched.

But some shelter, at least to cook and eat in, he must have, and this he found in a distant crevasse of this same ledge, and from this he sneaked along back of it until he could hide and watch the camp below. From this vantage-point he saw that the girl no longer went out upon the lake, but remained near the cabin; then later he noticed the two men leave the lake one morning. This encouraged him, and now he grew still bolder, even descending the ridge and watching those remaining at the cabin, from a dense thicket.

From this new post he saw that but one man seemed on guard, and almost was he tempted to shoot him from ambush and make a dash to capture his victim. Cautious and cunning, he still waited a chance involving less risk.

And now he saw that certain duties were performed by these people; that one man and the boy always started the morning fire; that the girl invariably went to the landing alone for water, at about the same time. Here for the moment she was out of sight from either cabin, and now in this act of hers, he saw his opportunity to land from his canoe near this spot before daylight, and hide in the bushes fringing the shore here and below the bank, watch his chance and seize and gag her before an outcry could be made. To tie her hands and feet and to push the other canoe out into the lake, thus avoiding pursuit until they could get a good start, was an easy matter.

It was risky, of course. She might hear or see him in time to give one scream. The old man who had said foolish things to him, and now seemed to be on guard, would surely send bullets after him as he sped away; but once out of the lake, he would be safe. It was a dangerous act; yet the other two men might return any day, and with this in prospect, this wiley half-breed now resolved to act.

Old Cy was up early that fatal morning. Somehow a sense of impending danger haunted him, and calling Ray, he unlocked the cabin door and began starting the morning fire. He wanted to get breakfast out of the way as speedily as possible, and then visit this ridge, feeling almost sure that he would find where this half-breed had been watching them.

When Ray came out, and before the hermit or Chip appeared, Old Cy hurried over to the ice-house, and now Chip came forth as usual, and without a word to anyone, she took the two pails and started for the landing. It was, perhaps, ten rods to this, down a narrow path winding through the scrub spruce. The morning was fair, the lake without a ripple.

Old Tomah, her one and only friend for many years, was here. A something Ray had whispered the night before, now returned like a sweet note of music vibrating in her heart, and as if to add their cheer, the birds were piping all about.

For weeks the cheerful words of one of Ray's songs had haunted her with its catchy rhythm:—

Dar was an old nigger and his name was Uncle Ned,
He died long 'go, long 'go."

They now rose to her lips as she neared the lake. Here she halted, filled a pail, and set it on the log landing.

DIAMOND DUST.

"Lou" Wiltse, who is pitching for the Johnstown Tri-State LeagueClub has not been meeting with great success this season. Nearly all of the games in which he has pitched, the luck has been against him.

"Phil" Smith has been taking a couple of weeks' vacation from ball playing. His plans for the rest of the summer are not yet settled upon.

The New York Giants are hard losers. Just because they have been dropping several contests of late the team seems to have lost its usual vim and enthusiasm.

The Philadelphia Nationals, under the guidance of William Murray, are making an excellent showing this season. Although they may hot win the pennant it is possible that they will make it interesting for the leaders.

Now that the Giants are on their own happy hunting ground it is to be hoped that they will brace up and give the fans a sample of genuine baseball.

The efforts of the Inter-City Amateur League to give the local fans good baseball should be supported. All of the players are working hard to put up a fast game and encouragement should be given them.

In the absence of Secretary Listman, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, Captain Howard Craig will manage the Y. M. C. A. team.

Thus far the race for the amateur league pennant seems to lay between Y. M. C. A., Clinton Avenue and Scotch Plains, while Dunellen and Bound Brook are trailing behind.

The fact that the Clinton Avenue players have been together longer than the members of other teams in the amateur league counts considerable in winning games. They play a much better game together. Y. M. C. A. is making improvement in this direction and should not be far behind in team work.

GOLF.

It is hoped by followers of the sport that Alex Ross, the winner of the national open tournament in Philadelphia, last week, will accept "Marty" O'Loughlin's challenge to a home-and-home match. The Plainfield lad is not afraid to meet the crack Scotch player under conditions that are both equal and fair and there is no doubt but that he would make his senior hustle to win.

Jerome D. Travers was one of for players in the national open tournament to tie with a score of 324. He was thoroughly disgusted with his showin, blaming the conditions of the course for a good part of his failure to do better.

Leighton Calkins, as secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, was one of the officials in charge of the open tournament in Philadelphia.

Next month "Marty" O'Loughlin will play in the open tournament to be held at VanCortlandt Park, New York, under the auspices of the New York Golf Club. Knowing this course so well he should make a strong showing.

There are not many places of the same size of Plainfield and North Plainfield that can support two golf clubs, in fact there are a number of places much larger that can boast of no golf at all. Both organizations here are enjoying prosperity and the game is exceedingly popular with the members.

Among the members of the Plainfield Country Club who are missed from the course these days are Alexander Gilbert and George A. Chapman. They have been playing frequently at the Park Golf Club with some of the older players.

Clarence Lyons, of the borough, is among the active members of the Westfield Golf Club and is generally found competing in the various club events.

DUNELLEN PROVES EASY FOR THE 'PLAINS TEAM

MANAGER PENNY'S PRANCERS SHOWED A LACK OF GINGER.

The Scotch Plains team had no trouble in defeating Dunellen in the amateur league contest at the 'Plains Saturday afternoon. The final score was 8 to 1. "Jack" Peacock, who has just joined the Dunellens, pitched a fine game, striking out nine men, but the ragged support given him and the failure to secure a hit when needed, made the Dunellen team outclassed.

The 'Plains started scoring in the first, four hits being made, Mehaffey's two base hit to center and Frentz's three base hit to left, bringing in three runs. Timely hitting, wild throws and a comedy of errors, enabled the home team to score another run in the fourth inning, two in the fifth and two in the sixth inning. Dunellen got in one lone run in the sixth. Mack got a hit, Frentz threw high to first and the former went to second on the error. Hanson then made a safe drive to center, scoring Mack. The 'Plains team changed pitchers in the sixth inning. Hewitt going in and Frentz covering first base, in place of Allen. The score:

A reception followed the ceremony.

Disturbed the Neighborhood.

Miss May Willis, of West Second street, this city, and Isaac Perry, of Harrison avenue, were found along Greenbrook road, the borough, last night by Chief Marshel Weiss, acting in a disorderly manner. The woman, who has appeared in the borough court before, was intoxicated and boisterous, disturbing the neighborhood. The pair was arrested and will be given a hearing before Recorder Dolliver tonight.

Gets Increased Pension.

Through the efforts of Congressman Ira W. Wood, Francis M. Whitely, of the borough, has been granted an increased pension of $15 a month under the act of Feb. 6, 1907.

—Neuman Brothers, the fruit specialists, now have a large assortment of Colburn berries. Various grades at various prices.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

"The Harbinger," the Park Avenue Baptist church weekly bulletin, will be suspended for the summer after next Sunday.

A strawberry festival will be held under the auspices of the women of the Christian church, on the lawn adjoining the church, tomorrow night.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet Friday night to consider the topic of "The Story of the Bible in Foreign Lands." Miss Louise Harral will be the leader. This will be the last Friday night meeting for the summer.

On Thursday night a strawberry and ice cream festival was held at Marconnier chapel for the benefit of the chapel found. There were about 150 people present and a fine program consisting of piano and violin music was enjoyed. Everything was sold out and the affair netted about $45. The women of the chapel, who had the festival in charge, are highly gratified over the success of it, socially and financially.

PRODDED HIS MEMORY.

Little Tommy Helped His Mother Out to Her Mortification.

Mr. Urban was always late to dinner. He arrived home on a certain evening, as usual, 20 minutes behindhand. His wife was entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Fortune. Greeting the guests with effusive cordiality he said:

"If I had known this pleasure was in store for me, I should certainly have arranged my business so as to be at home earlier."

"Why, Harry," sighed his wife; "I told you."

"I beg your pardon, love; but you are certainly mistaken this time. You probably forgot to mention it. On the whole, I'm glad you did. It is a delightful surprise."

Mrs. Urban was a spirited woman. This unjust accusation came near overthrowing her courtesy. Her lips parted, then shut decisively; but a slight frown lingered on her forehead.

Little Tommy read her face. He knew all about his father's poor memory, and he felt it his duty to refresh it and defend his mother.

"Why, pap," he piped up, "don't you recollect? Mamma told you to be sure to come home early to-night because the Fortunes were going to be here, and you said: 'Oh, the devil!'" —Philadelphia Record.

VALUE OF SELF-RELIANCE.

Better Than "Easy Money," Says Charles G. Dawes.

This is a hard world in business. It always has been, and always will be. There are many good and generous men in it. There are many who will lend a helping hand to you in your adversity, but in the time of need you will not find them among the men who tried to get you to embark in speculation with your little surplus and to sell you something which would help you to "easy money."

Be self-reliant. Make your own investigation in investments. When you cannot, put your money in a good savings bank. Distrust the financial demagogue as you distrust the political demagogue. Keep your hand on your pocketbook as you travel through life —first, to give always in proportion to your means to those who are poorer; second, to hold from those who would take through force or fraud what you need for yourself and yours. You will then, writes Mr. Dawes, in the Saturday Evening Post, have your hand where most of the other fellows have only their eyes. In this alone you will have the advantage of them.

Courage.

Gen. H. M. Robert in an address in Philadelphia said that it was impossible for a woman to love a man without courage—that to the coward woman's love was denied.

"Men know this," Gen. Robert appended afterward, "and therefore the slightest imputation on their courage is felt horribly. The mind magnifies it till it becomes as great a slur as—as—

"But let me tell you a story.

"A city man went hunting. After he had banged away for some hours without success two boys who had been following him approached and the older said:

"'Say, mister, if you're out for sport and ain't afraid to pay for it, my brother'll let you shoot at him for two hours for a quarter.'"

Hot-Weather Refuge.

Rev. E. W. Webber, a Maine minister, who was located for a while in a Georgia town as pastor of a Universalist church, occasionally relates this story:

He was talking with William Dodson, ex-president of the Georgia senate.

"I suppose you feel the heat greatly down here in the summer, don't you?" queried Mr. Webber of the southern man.

"Well, it does get pretty warm here sometimes," admitted Mr. Dodson, "but every time I feel too warm I think of the visit I once made to Boston, and it sends the cold shivers all over me."—Boston Record.

Life a Childish Pleasure.

A wealthy woman with diamonds up to her knuckles was telling of a man she knew who was going abroad on a cattle steamer.

"He is going for his health," she said. "He is very delicate, but he is so poor. Why should a man who has no health endeavor to preserve the little he has? With no money to make life agreeable and so little life left in his body, why should he keep on wanting to live?"

One of her listening friends who is not particularly encumbered with this world's goods, spoke up. "I suppose he takes a sort of childish pleasure in it. Most of us do."

Poet in Training.

"Did you beat the carpet, dear?"

"I did," replied the poet.

"And the stovepipe—have you taken it down?"

"I have."

"That's a dear! Now go and dig in the garden for exercise, and then you may go to your garret and write love songs for groceries!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Tommy's Discovery.

A little city boy out in the suburbs for the first time remarked as he looked out of the window in the morning and saw numberless dandelions on the lawn:

"Oh, mamma, just look—the grass is all covered with freckles!"

CLING TO ANCIENT RITES.

Moroccans Still Offer Sacrifices to Propitiate the Powerful.

A strange custom still exists here, that of sacrificing live animals to propitiate those in power. An instance of it occurred the other day when three ragged women, veiled, dirty and poverty stricken, came staggering up the hill to the flagstaff which stands in the middle of our camp, half pushing, half carrying two sheep bound and helpless. At the foot of our banner staff they laid the beasts down and sticking a knife into their throats left them there to die by slow inches. No cries, no wailing, they huddled together and sat motionless awaiting Allah's will. The interpreter interviewed them and discovered that they were the wives of a Moor whom the new Kaid had imprisoned for the usual sin—the ownership of riches. This brigand plundered everything and turned the women out to starve. Hearing of the approach of a Bashador, a friend, no doubt, of our lord the sultan, they came to offer sacrifice that he might have pity on them. Alas! nothing can be done, the Kaid is all powerful, even the sultan is helpless. Sometimes a bullock is hamstrung on our road. Strange to say the sacrificed animal cannot be used for food by the petitioners, but our escorts profit and drag off the carcasses with happy grins.—National Review.

JUST HOW IT HAPPENED.

"If yo' will dess puhmit me to specify a word or two, pahson," respectfully said a stranger who had entered Ebenezer chapel just before the beginning of the sermon, "I'll take pleasure in infawmin' de bruddren and sistahs yuh dissembled dat Puhsidin' Eldah Fishback enawmously regrets dat he can't be wid yo'-all to-day, as expected, uh-kaze he's dead. A Captain of Industry.

A Kansas politician was asked by his wife to lay aside politics long enough one day to dig the potatoes in the garden. He consented and after digging for a few minutes he returned to the house and said he had found a coin. He washed it off and it proved to be a silver quarter. He put it in his jeans and went back to work. Presently he went to the house again and said he had found another coin. He washed the dirt off of it and this time it was a silver half dollar. He put it in his jeans. "I have worked pretty hard," said he to his wife. "I guess I'll take a short nap." When he awake he found that his wife had dug all the rest of the potatoes. But she found no coins. It then dawned upon her that she had been "worked."

Samples Changed Hands.

It was in a country tavern where a newly arrived commercial traveler was holding forth. "I'll bet my case of samples," he said, "that I've got the hardest name of anybody in this room." An old farmer in the background shifted his feet to a warmer part of the stove. "Ye will, will ye?" he drawled. "Wa-al, I'll have to take ye up. I'll bet $10 against your samples that my name'll beat yourn." "Done," cried the salesman. "I've got the hardest name in the country. It is Stone." The old man expectorated. "Mine," he said, "is Harder."

Fooled the Wise Men.

Leibnitz, one of the great men of literature, who died in 1716, wished to join a society of alchemists who were prosecuting a search for the philosopher's stone. He compiled a letter from the writings of the most celebrated alchemists and sent it to the society. The letter consisted of the most obscure terms he could find and he himself, he said, did not understand a word of it. Afraid to be thought ignorant the society invited him to its meetings and made him secretary.

Addicted to Profanity.

An aged negro was called as a witness in an Alabama court. Before he was sworn the presiding magistrate directed the usual question be put to the negro: "Do you know the nature of an oath?" The old man shifted himself from one foot to the other before replying. A sly grin crept into his face. "Well, jedge," said he, "I caint say how 'tis wid mos' folks, but yo' honah, I reckon it's sorter secon' nature wid me."

A Compliment.

"Of course," said Miss Clumsay, "Mr. Kidder's language is not always elegant, but he can be very complimentary in his rough way." "Yes?" asked Miss Wise. "Yes. He says I'm a bird." "Huh! So is an ostrich."

NEED FOR DOG CATCHERS

Movement to Have Muzzling Ordinance Enforced and Rid Streets of Danger.

S. P. C. A. IS INTERESTED

President Randolph Says Municipality Should Take Action—Policemen Can Testify to Presence of Vicious Animals.

Preparations are being made to have the police department enforce the muzzling ordinance. Every year at this time a general demand for steps to make the city safe from stray dogs is received at police headquarters, and Chief Kiely is expected to issue orders to meet it with vigorous action. The S. P. C. A., which is seeking to perfect arrangements for the humane killing of strays and crippled small animals by electricty, is interested in the movement to prevents accidents from the presence of vicious, mad, or supposedly mad dogs on the streets.

The rigid enforcement of the ordinance requiring all dogs to be muzzled or led on the street is felt to to the only way in which to maks the people feel safe, and actually to safeguard them. The police are to be instructed to report all dogs, the owners of which are known, when seen on the street unmuzzled or unleashed, and proceedings will be taken in the city court. In connection with the movement there is a strong demand that the city appoint competent dog catchers, or authorize the S. P. C. A., giving the society funds for the purpose, to take charge of rounding up stray and unmuzzled dogs.

Speaking on the subject this morning, former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, president of the S. P. C. A., said that he believed the city should take steps to curb the stray dog nuisance.

"While our society is dedicated to the care and assistance of dumb beasts," he said, "there is no overlooking the fact that homeless mongrels and stray dogs are a positive danger, andwhere there is no one to give them care it is the part of wisdom, as well as humanity, to put them painlessly out of the way. I am not criticising anyone or any department when I say that it seems to me the city should appoint good dog catchers and make full arrangements for the disposition of the strays."

It is said that the number of stray dogs is unusually large in the West and East Ends. Not a few of the dogs owned by citizens have vicious habits that make them dangerous, to which the policemen themselves can testify. Hardly an officer on the force goes over his beat at night, especially those on bicycles, without having experience with snapping dogs. More than once an officer on a wheel has been compelled to shoot his revolver to save his legs from the teeth of a persistent canine pursuer.

There are any number of women, and a certain number of men, who are afraid of all dogs, and the presence of unmuzzled beasts on the streets in what is popularly supposed to be the "mad dog season" keeps them in a state of nervousness whenever they go along public thoroughfares. In addition to preventing actual accidents, a general enforcement of the muzzling ordinance and active work by competent dog catchers would take away much of the terror that now lurks in a walk outdoors for the dog-fearing woman.

Warning to Citizens.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, makes his announcement, requesting all residents of the city to clear their yards and cellars of inflammable materials and rubbish before July 4. Owners or occupants of factories, stores, etc., are especially requested to give this matter particular attention and help in every way possible to reduce the danger of fire.

Brick Pavement Again.

The next meeting of the Common Council will be held on Monday night July 1, when the ordinance providing for the laying of brick pavement in the business section of the city will come up for third and final reading, after a public hearing is granted.

Postmaster Improving.

Postmaster E. H. Bird, who recently underwent an operation, is much improved and was able to go out today for the first time. He expects to return to his duties at the postoffice later in the week.

DR. ANDREW RAYMOND TO LEAVE UNION COLLEGE

WILL BECOME PASTOR OF FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, BUFFALO.

Rev. Dr. Andrew Van Vranken Raymond, a former pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city, will shortly resign as president of Union College at Schenectady, N. Y., to become pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Buffalo, N. Y. Announcement of the fact was made known at Buffalo yesterday, following a meeting of the First church congregation when it was stated that Dr. Raymond would accept the call if extended him.

The committee appointed by the church to select a pastor travelled upward of 20,000 miles investigating candidates and spent thousands of dollars in the quest. Johnston Ross, of Cambridge, Eng., and Rev. Mr. Hutton, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, were the only ones seriously considered aside from Dr. Raymond.

Dr. Raymond will receive a salary of $10,000 a year, the use of a beautiful parsonage on North street and two months' vacation annually. The First church is rated as the richest in Buffalo.

While serving as president of Union College, Dr. Raymond had a most valuable assistant in his wife until illness made it impossible for her to continue and she died two weeks ago just as the Commencement program was at its height. Mrs. Raymond had many warm friends in Plainfield as she was very active during her husband's local pastorate.

DEATH SUMMONED HER WHILE PICKING FLOWERS.

Woman Taken Ill In Garden Retires and Dies Presumably of Heart Disease.

Elizabeth, June 25.—Teresa Turzay, aged thirty-seven, a Hungarian, died suddenly Saturday night at her home on Garabaldi avenue, in Essex county, near Mt. Olivet cemetery. The woman had been picking flowers in her garden, when she complained of feeling ill, and going into the house laid down on the bed. Her condition became rapidly worse, and her husband went for Dr. Pierre A. Banker, of Elizabeth. When the physician reached the house the woman was dead.

Dr. Banker made an examination and came to the conclusion death was probably caused by heart disease. He turned the case over to the Union county physician, who will communicate with the Essex county physician. The body meanwhile is at James J. Higgins' morgue, Elizabethport.

The woman is survived by her husband, John Turzay, and seven children, the youngest four years, the oldest a youth of sixteen, who is in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Neither father nor mother could speak English. Dr. Banker said yesterday the woman's death was solely due to natural causes, and that a report circulated that she had taken carbolic acid was absurd. The couple have been several years in this country and lived happily together.

Warren Chapel Festival.

The Christian Endeavor Society, the Missionary and Aid Societies, of Warren chapel, are making elaborate arrangements for the festival to be held tomorrow afternoon and evening on the lawn at Somerset street and Fairview avenue, for the benefit of the chapel fund. There will be a sale of home-made cakes, bread, candy, pastry, etc., and an added attraction will be a band of music. A friend of the chapel will treat all the children from the Children's Home in the afternoon, and there will be special attractions for the children at that time. Should it rain the festival will be held on Thursday and should it rain then it will be held at the same time in the chapel.

Washington Street Bridge Ablaze.

Jacob Voehl, Jr., of the plumbing firm of Voehl &Waldron, of East Front street, discovered a fire burning on the Washington street bridge of the New Jersey Central, yesterday afternoon. A telephone message to fire headquarters brought out No. 3 hose wagon. When the apparatus arrived at the bridge, the firemen were informed that the blaze had been extinguished. The damage was trifling.

WILL ELECTROCUTE DOGS

S. P. C. A. Arranging For Unusal Method of Killing Stray Animals.

AT THE DYNAMO WORKS

Samuel Rushmore Offers Free Use of Current—Municipal Supervision of the Canine "Death Chamber."

Means for the swift and painless killing of stray and suffering dogs and cats by electricity are being arranged by the S. P. C. A. of this city Dr. Middleton O'M. Knott, the society's veterinary advisor, and Dr. T. S. Davis are the committee in charge of the plans.

The electrocution "chamber" was made a possibility by Samuel Rushmore, head of the Rushmore Dynamo Works. He saw the ease with which one of his dynamos could be made to administer quick death to dogs and cats, and he proffered the free use of his plant for the purpose. The offer was accepted, contingent upon the satisfactory arrangement of certain details, and Drs. Knott and Davis were appointed to shape the plans.

The question chiefly considered in connection with the project was that of municipal supervision. President L. V. F. Randolph and the members felt that it would not do to inaugurate any such method of execution without the official knowledge and sanction of the municipality. The committee is at work along the lines dictated by that feeling, and if the electrocution method is adopted, there will be municipal supervision of the contrivance. Other things being arranged, it will be easy to use the force in the Rushmore machines to kill small animals instantaneously.

The society met yesterday afternoon at President Randolph's home on East Front street. Gratifying reports of the work were received. An increased general interest in the work of the society has been manifested. People who had been careless in their treatment of dumb beasts have begun to reckon with the society, a moral effect which the organization knew would follow its formation.

Among the questions considered yesterday was that of placing more drinking fountains about the city. No action was taken, but the subject will be continued until a definite decision, the wisest under the existing circumstances, is reached.

After the meeting the members were entertained socially by Mr. and Mrs. Randolph. A tour through the garden and greenhouses was much enjoyed.

HENRY WORTHAM VINDICATED.

The Indictment Against Him Dismissed by the Court at Elizabeth Yesterday.

Judge Atwater, sitting in the Quarter Sessions Court at Elizabeth yesterday, dismissed the indictment returned by the Grand Jury two weeks ago against Henry Wortham, of this city. The indictment was dismissed on the motion of Assistant Prosecutor John K. English, who stated to the Court that, in view of new evidence in the matter which had been brought to his attention, he moved that the indictment be dismissed.

Wortham, who, at the time of his arrest, about two months ago, was working for Dr. Pittis, was charged with stealing a bicycle belonging to Charles Hardaway which had been left in Dr. Pittis' barn, of which Wortham had charge. Wortham stoutly denied stealing the bicycle, and the action of the Prosecutor yesterday completely vindicated him.

The counsel for Wortham in the matter was W. S. Angleman, and to his efforts is due Wortham's exoneration from the charge.

Men's Club First Outing.

The Men's Club of Grace M. E. church, recently organized, has decided to open the charter to all male persons from sixteen years and over. The club has been formed for the purpose of advancing the social and moral welfare of the men of North Plainfield and the present membership is fifty-two. The club will hold its first outing on Saturday at the Watchung Spring Water Company's spring on the mountain. The members and their wives are invited. A stage will leave Grace M. E. church at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. A feature of the afternoon will be a baseball game between the married and single men. The club will meet Monday night at Grace church to nominate officers and perfect the details of organization.

TWO MURDER TRIALS AT THE NEXT TERMS

MAN AND WOMAN MAY BE INDICTED BY THE GRAND JURY.

It is said to be more than probable that Union county will have two murder trials to engage the attention of the county courts within the next few months. There is a strong indication, it is said, that Charles Ferdio, who fatally shot Fred Rash, a young man of Elizabeth, two weeks ago, and Mrs. Charles Rash, colored, who killed her white husband in Roselle Borough, last Friday night, will both be indicted for murder by the Grand Jury.

Returning home one night with his parents from a visit, and as the trio neared the house, Fred Rash got the front door key from his father, ran ahead to open the door. As he mounted the steps he was shot by Ferdio, an employe of the car works in Elizabeth. Ferdio claimed that he thought the young man was running after him, and that he shot in self-defense. Young Rash and his father pursued Ferdio a block or two, when the former dropped dead. An examination showed that a bullet had pierced the heart. It is said that Rash and Ferdio were not acquainted with each other.

The second murder was committed Friday night in Roselle Boroug. Charles Rash, aged 24 years, white, had quarreled with his colored wife, about cleaning and cooking a fish for supper. She secured a revolver in the house and, it is said, deliberately walked to the back door and shot her husband, and then cut him about the body and head with a knife which he had held in his hand.

MILL SUPERINTENDENT SHOT BY OPERATIVE

WOUNDED IN THREE PLACES; SHOOTER NEARLY MOBBED, SAVED BY POLICE.

James Ryan, superintendent of the Somerset Woollen Mills, at Raritan, was shot and badly wounded, last night, by Joe Guiglio, a mill operative whom Ryan discharged yesterday after he had threatened to kill the superintendent. The latter's wounds are not fatal.

Guiglio met the superintendent at the postoffice at 8 o'clock. He asked for the pay due him, and Ryan told him to apply at the office. Guiglio's reply was to draw a revolver and fire three shots. One bullet ploughed along Ryan's temple, another passed through his leg, and the third inflicted a flesh wound in the abdomen. Ryan dropped and the Italian started to run away. He was captured by the police, and taken to the town jail.

An angry crowd of mill operatives talked lynching for a while, but the police held them in check before the jail. Guiglio had a narrow escape from mob violence on his way to jail.

"Gould Detective" Punished.

New York, June 25.—Convicted of giving false testimony in connection with the Howard Gould separation proceedings, Lieutenant William F. Peabody of the Central office, was summarily dismissed from the police force yesterday by Commissioner Bingham. By the Commissioner he was branded as a "liar," and "unfit to be a member of the police force." During the trial before Deputy Commissioner Hanson last week Peabody at first denied any knowledge of a telegram sent by him from Baltimore to George Sholes bearing on the Gould troubles, and later, after pleading for mercy, admitted he had sent the message. It was shown conclusively that he had gone to Baltimore in connection with the Gould proceedings. He was tried also on the charge of being absent without permission and with disobeying orders.

Chimney Fire.

A chimney fire was discovered at 10 o'clock this morning at the home of Michael Newman, on West Fifth street, and a still alarm summoned No. 3 hose wagon from fire headquarters. Three hand extinguishers were used before the fire was put out. The damage was slight.

Anniversary Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Walter, of East Third street, will observe their tenth wedding anniversary on July 12, with an evening party. Fifty invitations have been sent out.

Friends' School Outing.

The members of the Friends' first-day school left this morning in a special trolley car for Sewaren, where they will enjoy their annual outing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Hooley and caughters, of Rockview avenue, have gone to Naragansett Pier, R. I., for the summer.

REPORT ON STREET BIDS

The Councilmanic Committee Finds Warren B. Travell Low on Four of Those Submitted.

HE MAY GET FIVE

Hassam Company Will Probably Waive Its Bid On West Second Street In His Favor.

The street committee from the Common Council will submit a report at the July meeting on the bids received last week for macadamizing several streets as specified in the ordinance previously adopted. As the bids now stand the Hassam Pavement Company, of Worcester, Mass., is low on one street, West Second street, its bid being 57 cents per lineal foot, and while the company may want to do this work, although it is but one street, there is a possibility that the company may waive its bid and let the next lowest bidder have it. In that case Warren B. Travell would receive it.

Mr. Travell was low bidder on four streets, as follows: Cottage place, $1.02; Park lane, 98 cents; Elmwood place, $1.15, and College place, $1.16. C. M. Meeker was the lowest bidder on six streets, as follows: Randolph road, 92 cents; Arlington place, 95 cents; Denmark road, $1.96; Sycamore street, $1.60; Hillside avenue, $1.80, and West End avenue, $2.14.

It is hardly thought that the Hassam Pavement Company would want to undertake the contract for one single street, and yet inasmuch as the company has the contract for laying a block of its concrete pavement on Somerset street, the borough, it might want to accept the contract for West Second street. However, it is up to the Common Council, after the recommendations of the street committee, to decide how the appointment of the bids shall be made and this will probably be done at the next meeting.

C. M. Meeker was the lowest bidder for the work of building a portion of the Plainfield avenue storm sewer, but as there are several ways of constructing the sewer the exact cost for the same cannot be determined at present. This will probably be settled before the next meeting of the Common Council.

TRIES TO KILL WIFE, THEN FIRES FURNITURE.

Cranford, June 25.—Nicholas Coyle, of Woodside avenue, crazed by whisky, Saturday night attacked his wife with a revolver, but missed his aim. He then seized a shotgun and chased the woman into the woods, where she hid herself while he searched in vain for her.

Returning to his home he removed the furniture to the yard and, after pouring kerosene oil on it, set fire to it. The police were notified and when they arrived upon the scene they found Coyle dancing and yelling around the fire.

He resisted arrest, but was overpowered and dragged to the lock-up. Justice of the Peace W. W. Mendell held him in $1,000 bail to keep the peace and fined him $100 for carrying a revolver. The man was committed to the county jail in default of bail.

Gets $30,000; Kills Himself.

South Norwalk, Conn., June 25.—Frank C. Randle, of Winnipauk, jumped into a mill pound and drowned himself yesterday morning, when he learned that his father, who died last week, had left him $30,000. The father had conducted a little country store, and had been Postmaster at Winnipauk for forty-five years. It was not thought that he had any means, and when the administrators of the estate informed Frank of its value he fainted. Grief over the loss of his parent had weakened the boy, and it is thought that his mind gave way. Within sight of many of the neighbors he undressed on the bank of the pond and dived in where the water was thirty feet deep. They thought he was going in swimming, and he drowned before they realized the truth.

Child Breaks Her Arm.

Esther Franks, the nine-year-old daughter of a Polish truck gardener living on Johnston avenue, tripped over a hose in the yard yesterday morning, and broke her arm. The break was set at the hospital, to where Franks took the child.

Birthday Surprise.

In honor of her seventeenth birthday, a number of friends of Miss Nellie Clarkson, of East Second street, tendered her a surprise party last night. Games, music and dancing on the porch were features of the affair.

Y. M. C. A. TO ESTABLISH SCHOOL FOR THE SUMMER

HAS BEEN PLANNED TO HELP YOUNG MEN AND BOYS.

For the purpose of helping boys and young men in the city who were behind in their past year's studies, the Y. M. C. A. has planned to conduct a summer school for six weeks, beginning July 8 and ending August 16. The hours of study will be from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock every morning, except Sunday. The plan has the endorsement of Principal Ira W. Travell, of the Plainfield High School, and Miss Day, principal of the Grammar School, and they have promised to help in the work so far as possible.

The school is not intended only for those who did not pass their examinations, but for any boy or young man who would like to take up any branches of study from the common school course to that of the High School, and it will afford an excellent opportunity for a young man to brush up on his studies if he proposes to go to college or enter business at any future time. The charges for the course will be nominal.

The association has engaged as a teacher for the school, Miss Edna Burr, a graduate of the Plainfield High School, Mt. Holyoke College, and who has been teaching for two years in the High School, and during the past year has been teaching at the Whittier School. She is thoroughly competent to teach all branches of study.

Any boy or young man wishing to join the summer school can do so by communicating with Secretary Kenneth Robbie at the Y. M. C. A., or his assistants, and paying the fee for the course. Already assurances have been received that a number will join, thus making the school an assured success.

'PLAINS MAN ACCUSED OF ROBBING PLUMBING SHOP.

Warren MacCauley, Arrested Last Night—Recently Figured in Stabbing Affray.

Warren MacCauley and Frank Hengler, both of Scotch Plains, were arrested by County Detective Galatian last night, charged with entering Louis Morel's plumbing shop last Friday night and stealing a pump and other articles. They were locked up at Westfield and this morning were arraigned before Justice Toucey. Hengler proved an alibi and was released but MacCauley was committed to jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

An attempt was made to enter Clifford Smith's confectionery store the same night Morel's place was robbed and Smith took the matter up with the county authorities. Galatian was placed on he case and finally secured evidence that led him to believe that MacCauley and Hengler were the guilty men.

MacCauley is the man who recently was severely stabbed by Charles Olsen and for which Olsen will stand trial at Elizabeth Thursday.

Mrs. Sage Gives $300,000.

New York, June 25.—Mrs. Russell Sage has given $300,000 to found the Russell Sage Institute of Pathology to perform the duties of pathologists for the City Hospital and the City Home for the Department of Charities on Blackwell's Island. It is the desire of Mrs. Sage that this institution make a specialty of research into the problems of all diseases, and more especially into those incident to old age. This is the first time in New York that there has been a co-operation of private beneficience and city support in the development of scientific work in any institution, but there is a precedent in Frankfort, Germany. There the endowment of a pathological institute by Baron Van Senkenburg has raised the City Hospital of Frankfort into one of the greatest scientific hospitals in Germany. The City Hospital of Boston has also received private endowments.

Haywood Alleges Plot.

Boise, Idaho, June 25.—From stories of cruel and wanton murders charged to the Western Federation of Miners the scene in the Haywood trial was yesterday turned to the alleged atrocities of mine owners and detectives in their employ. Another picture was thrown on the canvas by Clarence Darrow, attorney for the defense, in his opening address, in which he declared that Haywood was the victim of a plot by which the mine owners hoped to destroy the Miners' Federation. The political and industrial strife in Colorado with which the world is familiar with skilfully woven into one story. Mr. Darrow declared that the enmity of the labor officials as compared with various political factions was like a summer zephyr compared to a tornado.

FAILS TO GET DAMAGES

CASE WAS NOT PROVEN

C. A. Marsh's Successful Defense in Suit of Mrs. Sabochar Against Mr. Williams—Tried at County Court Yesterday.

Judgment for the defendant was obtained yesterday in the Union County Court by Craig A. Marsh in the case of Isabella Sabochar against Edward P. Williams, the action having been brought to recover damages alleged to have been sustained in a runaway accident on Darrow avenue during Carnival week. Three suits, is is said, were threatened, and this was the first to be instituted.

Mrs. Sabochar alleged that her horse was so badly injured as a result of a collision with the runaway animal that it was rendered unfit for use. According to her story two women were seated in a surrey, the horse being tied to a tree in front of Mr. Williams' place. Mr. Williams, she declared, untied the horse and threw the reins down, despite the fact that the two women had told him that they knew nothing about driving.

Mr. Williams alleged that he was requested by the two women to untie the horse and that he complied with the request and handed the reins to a middle-aged woman, who had changed from the back seat to the front seat for the purpose of holding the reins. He declared that before he had gotten fifty feet away he saw the horse turning around and making such a short turn that the surrey was in danger of upsetting, when suddenly the front wheels broke loose and the horse started on a trot, whereupon he caught the horse by the reins and delivered it to some man who came forward at that moment. Mr. Williams and Mrs. Lippincott, who was near by, further testified that Mrs. Sabochar's horse was not anywhere in the vicinity and that there was no collision whatever. In addition Mr. Williams said that he did not doubt that Mrs. Sabochar's horse was injured, but he knew that the injury did not happen at the place she specified, for her horse was not there at the time he untied the horse. Beekman & Spencer were counsel for Mrs. Sabocher.

Lost District Court Case.

M. Armstrong, a plumber, lost his suit on contract against Elizabeth T. B. Winthrow, in the District Court, this morning. He sued for $30, alleged to be due on plumbing work done at the home 503 East Seventh street. He sued to recover $30 for testing pipes. The defense contended that he engaged to do the work "according to the rules and regulations of the Health Bord," and that the testing for which he asked pay was required by the Health Inspector and the rules under which he worked. Judge Newcorn ruled that there was no cause for action. Francis J. Blatz appeared for the defendant.

Miss Willis Goes to Somerville.

Miss Willis was given twenty days in the county jail, and was taken there this morning by Chief Marshal Weiss. Perry and Reinmann were each fined $3 or five days. The fines were paid.

Memorial For Fire Horse.

Jerry, the old fire horse that died two weeks ago, is to have a monument. The memorial is being prepared by Capt. George Feiring who trained Jerry at the No. 3 fire house. Capt. Feiring was the only one who could handle Jerry so as to bring out the best in him. There was a great bond of affection.

NEWARK'S STORE BEAUTIFUL
BROAD, NEW AND HALSEY STREETS

$90.00 Parlor Suites for $50.00.

One of a Number of Splendid Offerings from America's Greatest Furniture Store

It stands to reason that any house buying furniture in the quantities we do (and there are mighty few in the United States) can secure concessions from the makers which redound not only to our profit, but to those who buy of us. So when we go to a maker and tell him that we will take so many parlor suits, say one hundred of a pattern, if he will make them up at a price, we usually get what we ask for because any manufacturer knows what it means to be able to put men to work on a big order of one pattern.

This accounts for the extraordinary price we are able to make on these parlor suites, and the price will prevail all week if we have enough of the suits to go around.

These Parlor Suites are one of the newest designs on our floor, not having been shown more than a month. The frames are in mahogany finish, highly polished, slightly carved on solid wood, enhancing its beauty; legs have claw feet; back of sofa and chairs are rounded; upholstery work is of the best quality; the covering is green panne plush, green silk plush, cream damask and cream tapestry in beautiful patterns; the regular price is $90, but we will receive orders all this week at only $50

REED ROCKERS.

Base is of hard wood; body of reed; continuous roll arms and top; back in pretty woven designs of spindles and reed; entire chair nicely shellacked and smoothly finished; our price only $2.25

EXTENSION DINING TABLES.

Built of oak in nicely golden finish, highly polished; very plain but neat design, and particularly well constructed. The round top is 42 inches wide and may be extended to five feet; regular price of these tables is $16.50; the special price for Tuesday and Wednesday (two days only) will be $12.50

FOLDING OR ADJUSTIBLE LAWN CHAIRS.

Here is a simple, substantial, inexpensive chair for use on porch or lawn, that will give the maximum of comfort at minimum cost. The woodwork is strong; all corners are rounded and the framework thruout finished with two coats of good varnish, making it nice and smooth. Back and seat are of heavy grade material attached to the rungs by means of slot or spline, instead of simply being tacked on, thus insuring it against tearing loose. The chair can be adjusted to four different comfortable positions, and when desired can be folded up into a flat package. Our price is only $1.25

PORCH ROCKERS.

Substantial and reliable rockers that will give comfort and ease and lots of service. Flat reed seat; flat slats in back, broad flat, comfortable arms; base work strongly constructed; finished in light natural color or painted green; on sale for double the money, but we have made the price $2.25

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

With Manager Listman confined to his bed, waiting for a return of strength after an operation for appendicitis and Pitcher Minford out of the game on account of blood poisoning, the Y. M. C. A. team is in a position that is causing its partisans a bit of worry. Conover is said to have made himself ineligible to pitch longer for the nine, and George Dupee is more or less of an unknown quantity. What the team will be able to do to overcome the handicap and keep within striking distance of the pennant, is a question.

Sh! Whisper it softly, but there are young men who make a practise of betting on the Inter-City league games. Nobody has been discovered making book or engineering pools, but it is a fact that real money is being wagered on the contests. Y. M. C. A. was heavily backed Saturday, according to one of the players in the game. The backers must have had the creeps when they saw Tracy Howard go into the box.

Minford, suffering from blood poisoning, will be unable to do the slab work for the Y. M. C. A. for several weeks, and Captain Craig is fortunate in having such a good man as George Dupee to take his place. George is in first class condition, having pitched nearly every Saturday this season. He and Walter Nelson will be the battery for the game at Crescent Oval on Saturday, when Scotch Plains will be the opposing team.

Clinton Avenue will journey to Dunellen on Saturday and once more try conclusions with the team at that place. Now that Peacock has joined the Dunellens the team should do better work.

Since Jim McGuire took hold of the Boston Americans they have been playing much better ball in all departments.

The Springfield Republican ranks the college teams as follows: Brown, Cornell, Princeton, Pennsylvania, State, Fordham, Harvard, Holy Cross, Williams, Yale and Vermont.

A total of thirty-seven runs have been made against the New York Americans in the last four games; also a total of forty-nine hits.

The ball that laid Catcher Bresnahan low struck Roger's cranium so hard that it bounded out to First Baseman Ganzel, who caught it on the fly.

With the rise of the thermometer Willie Keeler's batting average is beginning to climb. Willie is clipping off two and three a game nowadays.

Judging by the work in both the National and American Leagues, the efforts of Presidents Pulliam and Johnson in behalf of clean ball is bearing fruit.

College baseball captains for next season have been elected as follows: Princeton, Harlan, outfielder; Dartmouth, Skillin, pitcher; Georgetown, Simons, outfielder; Cornell, Heilman, shortstop; Villanova, Savage, third base; Brown, Raymond, outfielder; Holy Cross, Barry, shortstop; Exeter, Connelly, third base; Andover, Reilly, first base; Pennsylvania, Cree, shortstop; Tufts, Atwood, pitcher; Washington and Jefferson, Ramsey, third base. It is probable that Tad Jones will be Yale's next year's captain

Plainfield, N. J., June 25, 1907.

Much of the time at the annual convention of police chiefs of the United States and Canada, just concluded at Jamestown, was devoted to discussing the practice of carrying concealed weapons and a systematic campaign against it was advocated. The Union county delegates, of whom Chief Kiely was one, were prominent in the proceedings and in view of recent occurrences in both Elizabeth and Plainfield, they were in a position to relate how readily murder can result from the prevalence of a pistol or knife at hand during a quarrel. A man who goes about with a deadly weapon concealed in his clothes is a menace to society and no one has more reason to dread him than these same police officers, who are constantly in danger of a bullet wound or knife thrust. The fact that they have taken the matter up as a body to urge severer penalties for the practice is an evidence that it may quickly be stamped out. City Judge Runyon has always handled cases of this kind without that least bit of leniency and his example is being followed by magistrates throughout the county. A term in the penitentiary will prove the right sort of reminder every time a man who has no business to is found with a weapon in his clothing.

State Architect George E. Poole kept away from the Assembly investigating committee while Inquisitor Backes was probing the State building scandals and trying to get essential facts from favored Contractor Lawton and "State Plumber" Tobin. As the Backes report says, the State architect was at the State House, but he failed to appear before the committee, even after a doubt had been cast upon his relations with the contractor. Mr. Poole unbosoms himself in a communication to the Governor, but his proper course was a sworn statement to the Assembly committee. There is an unraveled mystery in the mutilated accounts of Contractor Lawton that must needs be cleared up. The book that contains certain alterations should be microscopically examined to find the name that was written over, evidently for concealment. The investigation will fall far short of effectiveness if certain points now obscure are not cleared up. If the examination sustains the statements of State Architect Poole to the Governor a necessary act of justice will be done to a man unjustly reflected upon.—Newark Morning Star.

Postmaster Sentenced.

Trenton, June 25.—William Applegate, former postmaster of Alpha, Warren county, was arraigned today in the United States District Court for sentence on a charge of having embezzled funds of the Postal Department. The thefts occurred some time ago and Applegate fled to Canada and the secret service men had a long hunt for him. Judge Cross sentenced him to six months in the Essex county penitentiary and to pay a fine of $400.

PLANNING NEW RARITAN BRIDGE AT BOUND BROOK.

Somerset Freeholders May Erect New Structure to Connect with South Bound Brook.

A new bridge across the Raritan river that will connect Bound Brook with the Borough of South Bound Brook, is projected. The Board of Freeholders of Somerset county is considering the matter, and it is thought the bridge will be built at an early date, especially as the present one, built in 1875, has been condemned.

For the purpose of securing the erection of a more substantial structure than the Board of Freeholders of the county have in mind at present the Bound Brook Improvement Society has taken the project in hand and is securing the co-operation of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Philadelphia and Reading, the Baltimore and Ohio and the Lehigh Valley railroads and the Public Service corporation for the erection of a bridge that will be used by the trolleys, automobiles and wagons as well as foot passengers, and that will be located at a point fully 1,000 feet west of the present structure. The co-operation of the railroads is being secured because it is expected they will erect a union depot alongside of the proposed bridge.

The plan is to have the new bridge elevated and sufficiently high to clear all railroad tracks as well as the river, and the Delaware and Raritan canal on the South Bound Brook side. The proposed bridge would be approached in the vicinity of Main and Church streets, Bound Brook, and the bridge proper would be reached by means of a gentle incline that would be too steep for teaming purposes. The union depot which would be placed between the Central and Lehigh Valley railroads opposite to Church street, would be reached from the bridge by means of a gentle descent, there being plenty of room for the purpose. By the erection of the new bridge the subway near the present Lehigh Valley station would not be needed.

GOURLEY GROOMS BLACK TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

Democratic State Chairman Thinks Man Stokes Defeated Would Reunite the Party.

"What is new in politics?" William B. Gourley, chairman of the New Jersey Democratic State Committee, was asked yesterday in Jersey City. Mr. Gourley was at the time in the office of State Tax Commissioner and former Democratic candidate for Governor Charles C. Black in a reference case. Mr. Gourley replied:

"Nothing, except that the Democratic party must get together and find a good man as candidate for Governor."

Looking at Mr. Black he said:

"I think it's Black's year. I believe he would be acceptable to everybody if he would run, and that it is his chance to get even for the defeat he received three years ago."

"I am not thinking about it," Mr. Black said when asked what he thought of the proposition. "The sound of a brass band and serenade would make me sick. But I suppose if matters drifted along and the convention should nominate me there would be no way of getting out of it, unless I had previously declared that I would not accept a nomination. If I so declared nothing could swerve me from my purpose."

PENNSY ROAD TO BUILD INTO SOUTH BOUND BROOK.

Plans to Extend Millstone Branch to Get Freight Traffic of Big Factory.

For the purpose of getting the output of the Standard Paint Company's plant, at South Bound Brook, to market more quickly than is now possible, the Pennsylvania railroad is about to build an extension of its Millstone branch to South Bound Brook.

The extension which has been surveyed will start from a point about two miles southeast of Millstone and reach to South Bound Brook in a northeasterly direction, skirting the old racetrack and the Fleischman farm and entering South Bound Brook by way of Elizabeth street.

The output of the paint company at present is mainly shipped by canal, although some is shipped by the Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley railroads, both of which are on the Bound Brook side of the Raritan River, and a quarter of a mile away from the works. The work of building the road will be begun as soon as the right of way can be obtained.

Pittsburg Society Shooting.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 25.—Major T. Lemuel Harper yesterday afternoon made a desperate attempt on the life of Levi De Wolf, a prominent and wealthy broker. With a revolver in each hand Major Harper walked into the office of Mr. De Wolf, in the Columbia Bank Building, Fourth avenue and Wood street, a few minutes after 3 o'clock and began shooting at his intended victim. For some time there has been bitter feeling between the two men, and back of the whole affair is said to be a scandal likely to shake Pittsburg society to its very foundations. Both Harper and De Wolf refuse to discuss the causes leading up to the shooting. Their friends are equally reticent.

KELLER MAY RESIGN.

It Is Said Rector Will Quit Church For Harmony's Sake.

Rumor has it that Rev. John Keller will sever, next Sunday, his connection with Trinity Episcopal church, Arlington.

For several years there has been dissatisfaction in the congregation and although the majority has always stood by Rector Keller there is opposition enough to him, it is said, to cause him to resign in the interest of harmony.

Rev. Mr. Keller is the minister who was shot several years ago by Thomas Barker, of Arlington, after Barker's wife had told her husband a story which prompted the assault.

Barker was convicted in the Hudson County Court and sentenced to five years in State Prison, but was pardoned after having served a portion of his term.

Rev. Mr. Keller could not be seen yesterday, and Bishop Edwin S. Lines, head of the diocese, said nothing had yet been settled in regard to the matter, and that anything that is to be said on the rumored resignation must come from Rector Keller.

Pittsford Dead Five.

Rochester, N. Y., June 25.—Five persons were killed and a score more or less seriously injured in the wreck late Sunday night on the Auburn branch of the New York Central Railroad one mile east of Pittsford, when passenger train No. 230, which leaves Rochester at 10:35, crashed head on into a freight train. The collision took place on a sharp curve at a point known as Mitchell's farm. The smoking car was telescoped and four of the fifteen passengers instantly killed. The fifth victim was Emmet Lyons, son of James Lyons, the engine driver of the freight, who was in the cab with his father and who died in a Rochester hospital yesterday morning.

Havana Cigars Will Go Up.

New York, June 25.—Leading tobacconists of New York city manifested much interest yesterday in the cable despatch from Havana which told of the threatened destruction of the imported cigar business in this country through the prolonged strike of cigarmakers in Cuba, together with a short crop. Representatives of the American Tobacco Company, the United Cigar Stores Company, the Waldorf-Astoria Segar Company and several of the largest independent dealers admitted that the supply of imported Havana cigars was exceedingly short in this country and that in all probability prices would soon be advanced.

6253 JOHN M. EVANS.

Lewis Said to Have Confessed.

West Chester, Pa., June 25.—Caught in the trap of his own confession, according to District Attorney MacElnee, that he threw little Mary Robbins Newlin to die in the hole in his farm in which her body was found, after tying part of a burlap bag about her head, Irwin R. Lewis is in the county jail here, awaiting trial on the charge of murdering the child. After an intensely dramatic recital of Lewis' admissions by the District Attorney, the Coroner's jury in Avondale returned a verdict yesterday afternoon that the child came to her death from asphyxiation at Lewis' hands.

One of Ninety Saved.

Valparaiso, Chile, June 25.—The British steamship Santiago, of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, carrying a crew of eight-six men and four passengers, foundered during a gale off Corral. The fourth mate was saved, but the rest of the crew, including the captain and the passengers, were drowned. The lost steamer was a sister ship of the Arequipa, which foundered at her moorings in Valparaiso Bay during a fearful storm in June, 1904. The responsibility for the catastrophe in both cases is laid on the captains.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The entertainment given last night in Washington Hall for the piano fund of the Baptist church was a success. The solos by Alfred and Edwin Springer were well received; also those by T. A. Linaberry and his son, John Linaberry. The parody on "Silver Threads Among the Gold," which hinted of a Fourth of July celebration, was well rendered by T. A. Linaberry. Those who furnished the entertainment were Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Linaberry, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Springer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson, George May, Monroe Pyatt, Robert Horn, Jr., Phil. Smith, Edwin Springer, and John S. Linaberry. After the entertainment there was a dance and ice cream and cake were served. Albert Naylor's orchestra, of Plainfield, furnished the music.

"Phil." Smith, accompanied by his cousin, Melville Brown, of Brooklyn, will sail on the Steamship Philadelphia for Europe on July 24.

Arrangements are being made to hold a Fourth of July celebration at New Market, similar to the one planned for this place.

Miss Jennie DeLaney has returned to her home in New Brunswick, after a visit with her cousin, J. S. Linaberry.

Mrs. Alfred Springer entertained a company of friends from Plainfield, yesterday.

HELO GIRL GOT IT ALL DOWN.

"Hello! Is this the Grand Hotel?" asked the man at the 'phone.

"It is," sweetly responded the young woman at the other end.

"Will you please ask Mr. Henry Perkins, who is stopping there, to ring me up this afternoon?"

"Yes, sir. Who shall I say he is to ring?"

"D. B. Feeley."

"B. D. Greeley?"

"No! No! D. B. Feeley."

"P. Beef Healey?"

"No! Can't you get it? Listen—D. B. Feeley. Understand?"

"Spell it, please."

"D.— get that? A, B, C, D—get it? B—understand? A, B—all right? F, E, E, L, Y,—Feeley. Got it? All right. Just tell him to ring me up. He'll know what it means."

When Mr. Perkins returned to the hotel he received a memorandum saying, "Please call up Mr. A.B.C.D.A.B.E. E. Yelly."—Judge.

He Was Justified.

It was a case of breach of promise. The defendant was allowed to say a word in his own behalf.

"Yes," he said, "I kissed her almost continually every evening I called at her house."

The counsel for the plaintiff was pleased.

"Then you confess it?" he said.

"Yes, I do confess it. But I had to do it."

"You had to do it. What do you mean?"

"That was the only way I could keep her from singing."

The jury gave a verdict for the defendant without leaving their seats.

Mean of Him.

"John," snapped Mrs. Blazeup, at supper, "you take those long rides all alone in your automobile and I bet you never even think of me?"

"That's where you are wrong, Maria," replied Mr. Blazeup, as he filled his gasoline tank, "I think of you every time I look at the machine."

"Indeed, sir. And what is the resemblance?"

"Why, it is so expensive, contrary and highly explosive."

And then he ran over and shut himself up in the garage."—Chicago Daily News.

Too Much for Pa.

Visitor—Well, Tommy, I hear you have brand-new twin sisters."

Tommy (sadly)—Yessum, that's what it is.

Visitor (surprised)—What does your father say about the dear little angels?

Tommy—He doesn't call them angels, and he doesn't say nothin'. He just goes 'round knockin' over chairs and kickin' the dog and throwin' things at the cat. Oh, he's awful glad, I don't think!

A Growing Practice.

Servant (sarcastically)—Yes, our practice is certainly getting bigger."

BETWEEN FRIENDS.

"How did I look in my new ball dress last night?"

"Oh, you were simply beautiful—nobody recognized you at first.—Fliegende Blaoetter.

Sure!

This world is all a circus show,
Where oft to gain renown
One must impersonate, you know,
A veritable clown.
—Judge.

Too Clumsy.

"No," said the customer in the phonograph emporium, "I don't like this style of horn."

"You don't?" replied the clerk in surprise. "Why, that style of horn breaks the record."

"That's just the trouble. It breaks the record every time I put it on."—Chicago Daily News.

Would Improve.

Neighbor—My! but that's a bilious color you've painted that house of yours.

Other Neighbor—Yes; but it won't stay that way. You see, I mixed a lot of pepsin syrup with the white lead when I painted it.—Judge.

Fashion Is Ever Changing.

Mrs. Shopper—Is that hat that was $35 this morning the same price still?

Milliner—Certainly! Why not?

Mrs. Shopper—Well, it's not such a new style as it was then.—Judge.

Easily Satisfied.

Matilda—Have you spoken to papa?

Bertie—Yes; I asked him through the telephone, and he answered, "I don't know who you are, but it's all right."

It Wasn't the Custom.

Eve—I haven't a thing to wear.

Adam—You are not supposed to wear anything.—Judge.

COMPLETED PROGRAM FOR ELKS CONVENTION

GREATEST REUNION IN ORDER'S HISTORY AT PHILADELPHIA NEXT MONTH.

With the exception of some minor details, the program for the Convention and Reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, which is to be held in Philadelphia during the week of July 15 is complete and is now presented to the public. A large delegation from Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, will attend.

From reports received from all sections of the country, it is expected that upwards of 150,000 visitors will be in Philadelphia during the Convention, and the Executive Committee of Philadelphia Lodge, No. 2, of which Chester P. Ray is chairman, confidently hopes and looks for the co-operation of the people of that city in the entertaining of this mighty host of strangers. The committee is now raising an entertainment fund of $100,000.

Of such large proportions is an Elk's convention that Councils have taken official recognition of the event and a joint committee has been appointed to co-operate with the local committee of Elks. Mayor Reyburn has also expressed himself as interested in the convention and will do all his official position enables him to make the convention week the most memorable in the city's history.

Expects Hosts on Sunday.

A large number of delegations, particularly those coming from distant points, are expected to arrive on Sunday, July 14. All trains will be met by the reception committee, who will escort the visitors to their hotels. Ladies accompanying special delegations will be taken to their hotels in automobiles, tally-hos and special cars. Baggage will be immediately transferred by special wagons to hotels.

Monday, July 15.

Entertainment of Grand Lodge members, which will include a trip on the Delaware River, visiting Cramp's and other shipyards, League Island Navy Yard, forts and all other points of interest. A stop will be made at Washington Park, where luncheon will be served. The time of embarkation will be at 11 a. m., and the return made at 5 p. m.

The formal opening of the Grand Lodge will take place at the Grand Opera House at 8 p. m., where the guests will be welcomed by the Governor, the Mayor, and other officials. At the same hour the bands will discourse patriotic airs in Independence Square.

Tuesday, July 16th.

The Grand Lodge opens in business session at 11 a. m., at the Garrick theatre. On that day Washington Park-on-the-Delaware will be the scene of what will be the greatest festal occasion ever attempted by any organization. Every Elk in the world is invited to come to this unprecedented feast. The ocean will be scoured for shell fish, the rivers for their denizens feast unparalleled. The only thing necessary for admission is an Elks card and the official badge.

Boats will leave Arch street wharf every hour, no tickets being necessary to Elks, identification as above stated being made by the badge and visiting card. These boats will make trips up and down the river before proceeding to Washington Park.

In the evening a concert at Independence Square and at 11 o'clock the singing of the 11 o'clock toast on City Hall plaza.

Wednesday, July 17th.

In the morning a trip through Fairmount Park, that embraces within its domain 3,341 acres, with unsurpassed natural scenery that has inspired artists from every corner of the world. Hundreds of monuments are within its environs, chief of which is that magnificent piece of work of art, the bonze equestrian statue of George Washington erected by the State Society of the Cincinnati at a cost of $250,000 and is one of the most imposing monuments in America. Then there are the Lincoln Monument, Grant Cobain, Memorial Hall, with its collection of rare exotics and its famous and wonderful "sunken garden," and then the beautiful Wissahickon, where nature runs riot. No other great city in the world can boast of such a park.

At 11 a. m., a massed band parade of 3,000 musicians will take place, each lodge having a band of thirty or more pieces entered in this feature and in the general parade receiving $100, besides having a chance to win the special first prize of $300 for the largest and best appearing band, or the second prize of $150.

In the afternoon a trip to Willow Grove. The Victor Herbert Orchestra has been especially engaged to play during the Reunion Week, and on this day the famous Strawbridge & Clothier Chorus of 1,000 voices will sing.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday.

The great parade of all the lodges of the Order will take place on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, and at night special illuminations and band concerts. This parade will be the largest and most magnificent ever seen in Philadelphia. Thousands of dollars in prizes will be awarded to those participating. The official trip to Valley Forge is scheduled for Friday, and on Saturday the official excursion to Atlantic City will take place.

Other features may be added to this program, and altogether the week should be the liveliest Philadelphia has ever experienced.

The GIRL from TIM'S PLACE

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

step by step, this human panther advanced. A slow, cautious, catlike movement, without sound, as each moccasined foot touched the sand. Nearer and nearer that unconscious girl it crept! Now 20 feet away, now ten, now five!

And now came a swift rush, two fierce hands enclosed the girl's face and drew her backward on to the sand.

Ray and the hermit were beside the fire, and the Indian just emerging from the hut where he had slept, when Old Cy returned from the icehouse.

"Where's Chip?" he questioned.

"Gone after water," answered Ray. And the two glanced down the path.

One, two, five minutes elapsed, and then a sudden suspicion of something wrong came to Old Cy, and, followed by Ray, he hurried to the landing.

One pail of water stood on the float, both their canoes were adrift on the lake, and as Old Cy looked out, there, heading for the outlet, was a canoe!

One swift glance and, "My God, he's got Chip!" told the story, and with face fierce in anger, he darted back, grasped his rifle, and returned.

The canoe, its paddler bending low as he forced it into almost leaps, was scarce two lengths from the outlet.

Chip was in that canoe!

His avenging shot was stayed.

One look at the vanishing canoe, and his own, floating out upon the lake, told him the tale, and without a word he turned and, plunging into the undergrowth, leaping like a deer over rock and chasm, vanished at the top of the ridge.

CHAPTER IX.

While Chip, bound, gagged and helpless in the half-breed's canoe, was just entering the alder-choked outlet of this lake, 20 miles below and close to where the stream entered another lake, four men were launching their canoes.

"It was here," Martin was saying to Officer Hersey, "one moonlight night a year ago, that a friend of mine and myself saw a spectral man astride a log, just entering that belt of reeds, as I told you. Who or what it was, we could not guess; but as that spook canoeman went up this stream, we followed and discovered our hermit's home."

"Night-time and moonshine play queer pranks with our imagination," Hersey responded. "I'm not a whit superstitious, and yet I've many a time seen what I thought to be a hunter creeping along the lake shore at night, and I once came near plugging a fat man in a shadowy glen. I was up on a cliff watching down into it, the day was cloudy, and 'way below I saw what I was sure was a bear crawling along the bank of the stream. I had my rifle raised and was only waiting for a better sight, when up rose the bear and I saw a human face. For a moment it made me faint, and since then I make doubly sure before shooting at any object in the woods."

And now these four men, Levi wielding the stern paddle of Martin's canoe, and Hersey's deputy that of his, entered the broad, winding stream. The tall spruce-tops, meeting darkened its currentless course, long filaments of white moss depended from every limb and as they twisted and turned up this somber highway, the air grew stifling. Not a breeze, not a sound, disturbed the solemn silence, and except for the swish of paddles and faint thud as they touched gunwales, the fall of a leaf might have been heard. So dense was this dark, silent forest, and so forbidding its effect, that for an hour no one scarce spoke, and even when the two canoes finally drew together, converse came in whispers. Another hour of steady progress, and then the banks began to outline themselves ahead, the trees opened more, a sign of current was met, and the sun lit up their pathway.

By now the spectral beard had vanished from the trees, white clouds were reflected from the still waters, and the gleam of sandy bottom was seen below. The birds, inspired perhaps by the absence of gloom, also added their cheering notes. Nature was smiling once more, and not a hint or even intuition of the fast-nearing tragedy met those men.

And then, as a broad, eddying bend in the stream held their canoes, by tacit consent a halt was made.

Martin, his paddle crossed on the thwarts in front, dipped a cup of the cool, sweet water and drank. Levi wiped the sweat from his face, and Hersey also quenched his thirst. The day was hot. They had paddled ten miles. There was no hurry, and as pipes were drawn forth and filled, conversation began. But just at this moment Levi's ears, ever alert, caught the faint sound of a paddle striking a canoe gunwale. Not as usual, in an intermittent fashion, as would be the case with a skilled canoeist, but a steady, rhythmic thud.

"Hist," he said, and silence fell upon the group.

In the wilderness all sounds are noticed and noted, by night especially, because then they may mean a bear crawling softly through the undergrowth, or a wildcat, yellow-eyed and vicious, creeping near. But by day as well they are always heeded, and the crackle of a twig, or the sound of a deer's foot striking a stone, or any slight noise, becomes of keen interest.

And now, from far ahead, came the steady tap, tap, tap. It soon increased, and then it assured those waiting, listening men that some canoe was being urged down stream.

Without a word they glanced at one another, and then, as if an intuition came to both at the same time, Martin and Hersey reached for their rifles.

On and on came the steady thump, thump.

Just ahead the stream narrowed and curved out of sight. A few foam flecks from an unseen rill above floated down. The white sandy bottom showed the clear water.

And then, as those stern-faced, watching, listening men, rifles in hand, almost side by side, waited there, out from behind this bend shot a canoe.

"My God, it's Pete Bolduc! Look out!" almost yelled Levi, and "Halt! Surrender!" from Hersey, as two rifles were leveled at the oncomer. Then one instant's sight of a red and scarred face, a quick reach for a rifle, a splash of water, an overturned canoe and with a curse the astonished half-breed dived into the undergrowth.

Two rifles spoke almost at the same instant from the waiting canoes, one answered from out the thicket. A thrashing, struggling something in the filled canoe next caught all eyes, and Levi, leaping into the waist-deep stream, grasped and lifted a dripping form.

It was Chip!

A brief yet bloodless tragedy, all over in less time than the telling; yet a lifetime of horror had been endured by that waif, for as Levi bore her to the bank, cut the thongs that bound her, and freed her mouth from a pad of deerskin, she grasped his hand and kissed it.

And then came another surprise; for down a sloping, thick-grown hillside, something was heard thrashing, and soon Old Tomah, his clothing in shreds, his face bleeding, appeared to view.

Calculating to a nicety where he could best intercept and head off the escaping half-breed, he had crossed four miles of pathless undergrowth in less than an hour, and reached the stream at the nearest point after it left the lake.

How Chip, still sobbing from the awful agony of mind, and dripping water as well, greeted Old Tomah; how Hersey, chagrined at the escape of the half-breed, gave vent to muttered curses; how Martin joined them in thought; and how they all gathered around Chip and listened to her tale of horror, are but minor features of the episode, and not worth the telling.

When all was said and done, Old Tomah, grim and silent as ever, although he had done what no white man could do or would try to do, washed his bloody face in the stream, drank his fill of the cool water, and lifting Pete's half-filled canoe as easily as if it were a shingle, tipped it, turned the water out, and set it on the sloping bank.

"Me take you back and watch you now," he said to Chip. "You no get caught again."

And thus convoyed, poor Chip, willing to clasp and caress the feet or legs of any or all of those men, and more grateful than any dog ever was for a caress, was escorted back to the lake.

All those waiting at the cabin were at the landing when the rescuers arrived. Angie, her eyes brimming, first embraced and then kissed the girl. Ray would have felt it a proud privilege to have carried her to the cabin, and Old Cy's wrinkled face showed more joy than ever gladdened it in all his life before.

Somehow this hapless waif had grown dearer to them all than she or they understood.

There was also feasting and rejoicing that night at Martin's wildwood home, and mingled with it all an oft-repeated tale.

Old Cy told one end of it in his droll way, Martin related the other, and Chip filled up the interim. Levi had his say, and Hersey supplied more or less—mostly more—of this half-breed's history.

Old Tomah, however, said nothing. To him, who lived in the past of a bygone race which looked upon lumbermen as devastating vandals ever eating into its kingdom, and whose thoughts were upon the happy hunting-grounds soon to be entered, this half-breed's lust and cunning were as the fall of the leaf. Were it needful he would, as he had, plunge through bramble and brier and leap over rock and chasm to rescue his big pappoose, but now that she was safe again, he lapsed into his stoical reserve once more. Shadowy forms and the mysticism of the wilderness were more to his taste than all the pathos of human life; and while his eyes kindled at Chip's smile, his thoughts were following some storm or tempest sweeping over a vast wilderness, or the rush and roar of the great white spectre.

"Chip is good girl," he said to Angie the next morning, "and white lady love her. Tomah's heart is like squaw heart, too; but he go away and forget. White lady must not forget," and with that mixture of tenderness and stoicism he strode away, and the last seen of him was when he entered the outlet without once looking back at the cabin where his "big pappoose" was kept.

More serious, however, were the facts Martin and Hersey now had to consider, and a council of war, as it were, was now held with Levi, Old Cy and the deputy as advisers.

What the half-breed would now do, and in what way they could now capture him were, of course, discussed, and as usual in such cases, it was of no avail, because they were dealing with absolutely unknown quantities. The facts were these: Bolduc, a cunning criminal, fearless of all law, had set his heart upon the possession of this girl. Her story, unquestionably true, that he had paid a large sum for this right and title, must inevitably make him feel that he would have what was his at any cost. His first attempt at securing her had been thwarted. He had been shot at by minions of the law,—an act sure to make him more vengeful,—his canoe had been taken, and what with the loss of the girl, money, and canoe also, one of his stamp would surely be driven to extreme revenge.

He was now at large in this wilderness, knew where the girl and his enemies were, and as Hersey said, "He had the drop on them."

"I believe in standing by our guns," that officer continued, after all these conclusions had been admitted. "We are here to rid the woods of this scoundrel. We have five good rifles and know how to use them. The law is on our side, for he refused to surrender, and returned our shots; and if I catch sight of him, I shall shoot to cripple, anyway."

Old Cy's advice, however, was more pacific.

"My notion is this feller's a cowardly cuss," he said, "a sort o' human hyena. He'll never show himself in the open, but come prowlin' 'round nights, stealin' anything he can. He may take a pop at some on us from a-top o' the ridge; but I callate he'll never venture within gunshot daytimes. His sort is allus more skeered o' us'n we need be o' him."

In spite of Old Cy's conclusions, however, the camp remained in a state of siege that day and many days following.

Angie and Chip seldom strayed far from the cabin. Ray assumed the water-bringing, night and morning. Old Cy and Levi patroled the premises, while Martin, Hersey, and his deputy hunted a little for game and a good deal for moccasined footprints or a sight or a sign of this half-breed.

Hersey, more especially, made him his object of pursuit. He had come here for that purpose, his pride and reputation were at stake, and the thousand dollars Martin had agreed to pay was a minor factor. He and his mate passed hours in the mornings and late in the afternoon watching from wide apart outlooks on the ridge. They made long jaunts up the brook valley where the smoke sign had been seen, they found where this half-breed had built a fire here, and later another lair, a mile from the cabins and in this ridge. Long detours they made in other directions. Old Tomah's trail in the forest was crossed; but neither in forest nor on lake shore were any recent footprints of the half-breed found. Old ones were discovered in plenty. An almost beaten trail led from his lair in the ridge to a crevasse back of the cabins, but to one well versed in wood tracks, it was easy to tell how old these tracks were.

A freshly made trail in the forest bears unmistakable evidence of its date, and no woodwise man ever confounds a two or three days' old one with it. One footprint may not determine this occult fact; but followed to where the moss is spongy or the earth moist, a matter of hours, even, can be decided.

GOLF.

Among members of the League of Connecticut Golf Clubs and the Hudson River Golf Association there is not a general indorsement of the clash between their tournaments and the amateur championship. A few of the members would take a chance at the Euclid Club in the national but for the home attraction, which they feel bound by loyalty to support. They point out that no tournaments are scheduled for July 4, 5 and 6 or July 18, 19 and 20, so that it would have been easy to avoid a conflict with the championship dates, July 9 to 13. The conflict is one that only punishes the players in question, for there is an assurance from every side of a record entry in the national championship. Massachusetts, which took such a prominent part through its professionals in the open championship, will be represented by a dozen or more of its amateurs at Cleveland. The factors that have made them so keen is the victory of J. G. Anderson in the Massachusetts championship, with the general prominence of the younger set in the competition, coupled with the poor showing of Jerome D. Travers and Fred Herreshoff, two of the Metropolitan Golf Association's strongest players, in the open championship. The Philadelphia amateurs did not enter for the open in great strength, yet A. W. Tillinghast made a good showing and would have been among the placed men with little doubt but for a collapse from the heat in the last round. Philadelphia will be well represented at Cleveland, while as to New York a half dozen bunches of good golfers are going to the championship in automobiles.

Herbert Jaques, of the Country Club, Brookline, who attended the open championship as a committeeman of the United States Golf Association, had several conferences with officials of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association. That organization had voted to hold its second annual championship at Brookline if the course could be obtained, and Mr. Jaques said there would be no difficulty about that. In a tentative way he suggested October 22, 23 and 24 for the tournament, which would be the days immediately before the Boston, New York and Philadelphia team matches for the Lesley cup, on Friday and Saturday of that week. An open tournament is scheduled for Brookline on October 17, 18 and 19, so that a brilliant fortnight of competitive play should result if the Eastern dates are ratified. Aleck Smith won the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association last fall at Fox Hills, and he will be at Brookline to defend it. Aleck Ross, the new open champion, with the other Bostonians, will be awaiting him, and Smith will have to be on his game to win out.

All members of the Metopolitan Golf Association are eligible to the thirty-six hole medal play handicap at the Wykagyl Country Club, New Rochelle, on Saturday. There will be two games and two set prizes, but no competitor may win more than one prize. Entries close with the Wykagyl secretary, James R. Turner, 25 Broad street, tomorrow.

There are no amateur championship candidates in the National Freight Traffic Golf Association and the Eastern committee feels no compunctions at claiming July 10, 11 and 12 for the third tournament at the Fox Hills Golf Club. In 1905 D. N. Bates won the medal round at Fox Hills with 91 and H. B. McClellan won the chief cup, while last year J. S. Bartle had the score honors with 83 and the chief cup went to C. F. Seeger. There were also tournaments last year at Hot Springs, Va., and Highland Park, Ill., while last January the clan went to Palm Beach to play for some more cups. The object of the organization is to hold golf tournaments to encouareg a better acquaintance among traffic men of America who are dierctly connected with the freight interests of industrials and railroads. The members come from all parts of the country and one, F. M. Volk, of the Holland-America line, resides in Holland. There are three tournament committees, the Southern, Western and Eastern. The latter will have charge at Fox Hills, and the members are C. M. Booth, F. T. Bentley, George Morton, H. W. Beyers and E. J. Henry.

The invitation tournament at the Morris County Golf Club, for which dates had been asked for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is not to be held until September 26, 27 and 28. The dates are the same as the Morristown horse show. In the road coach class the entries are to drive from Madison to the show grounds and will pass the links.

KILLED BY ELEVATOR.

Death of a Perth Amboy Man Recalls a Noted Case of Polygamy.

Perth Amboy, June 25.—James Lindley was crushed by the fall of an elevator Saturday afternoon at the Raritan Copper Works and died of his injuries on the way to the hospital. He was forty-five years old and had been in Perth Amboy eight years, working as pipefitter and machinist for the plant where he was killed. He came he from Ansonia, Conn., where he was at one time a member of the municipal police force.

Lindley received a great deal of notoriety a few years ago by the discovery that his wife, from whom he had been divorced, was at various times the wife of seven men. He was the fifth on the list and married her with no knowledge of her checkered matrimonial career. He was steward of the hotel which she conducted at Stamford, Conn., at the time. Lindley's relatives are his mother and sister, who live at Suffren, N. Y. He was a member of Goodwill Camp No. 19, Woodmen of the World.

BISHOP HAD READY EXCUSE.

At Least as Good as Many Made for Divorce Laws.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale, at the divorce reform congress in Washington, said of certain divorce laws: "The apologists put forward for these laws remind me of the apology that a gourmet bishop once made during Lent. The bishop happened to sit at dinner beside an irreverent young woman. He ate his oysters, and then, with flashing eyes, a heightened color and every indication of enjoyment, he fell to upon a plate of rich turtle soup. The young woman, watching the bishop swallow this costly food, could not restrain a sneer. 'I thought,' she said, 'that you fasted during Lent, bishop?' The bishop put down his spoon and allowed his face to become pensive. 'Ah, I do fast in Lent,' he said. 'I subsist chiefly on fish.' He swallowed a lump of meat worth about half a dollar. 'Turtle,' he added, 'is a kind of fish.'"

ANIMALS FIGHT IN SHACK.

Connecticut Man and His Watchdog Had Lively Session.

From Bristol's woods, in Southern Prospect, a village near Waterbury, Conn., a wildcat pursued a big deer until from exhaustion it fell through the roof of the side hill hen shack of Edson Black. Guinea fowls set up a great commotion, and with the deer's desperate struggles for liberty, cooped up in a shack 15x12, with nearly 80 fowls, there was such a racket that a trusty watchdog awoke Black. He went to the henhouse to find 32 fowls trampled to death, every pane of glass and all the roosts broken and the deer dying of a broken neck. Its flanks were lacerated from the claws of the wildcat, tracks of which were in the coop, where it remained until frightened away by the approach of Black.

Deserts of Asia.

Just north of the Himalaya mountain range in Chinese Turkestan lies a belt of land which is watered by north flowing rivers. These, however, do not flow anywhere, but lose themselves in the sand of the desert. The worst deserts of American are mere child's play to the desert conditions in this part of Asia. In many places there were formerely, one thousand or two thousand years ago, a condition of soil and climate so that they could support a considerable population. There are the remains of villages and even cities, which must have had water in large quantities in places now far distant from any reliable source of supply. So dry is the country that ruins of wooden houses which have been exposed to the weather for ten centuries or more have hardly the beginning of decay.

Jap Turkeys.

The wife of one of the early missionaries to Japan, wishing to entertain some friends, sent out an old domestic to hunt up a turkey. After a whole day's inquiry he found one, and in due time a large and beautiful roast was served up, glorious, perfect—ah yes, perfect; so much so that the knife utterly refused to mar its perfection. The old serving man was summoned. "Where did you buy that turkey?" "At the Temple of Kinkakuji." "Why, what was it doing there?" "It was the sacred Tia Wara." "Did they say it was a good bird?" "Oh, yes, honorable presence, they recommended it highly. They've had it 15 years and two moons themselves."

Use of Rubber Restricted.

Probably no substance is adapted to a greater variety of uses than rubber, but its applications are restricted by the limited supply and high cost. Among the purposes for which it has great advantages but is not likely to be extensively employed is that of paving roadways. A rubber pavement laid at a London railway station in 1881 was in 1902 worn down to five-eighths of an inch in its thinnest place. Notwithstanding the scarcity of the material, the cost was less than three times as great as that of wood, and its life has been more than 20 years instead of the four years which the wood or asphalt would have endured.

Bill Nye and Maartens.

The presence in this country of the distinguished Dutch novelist, Maarten Maartens, recalls the story of his election in the spring of 1895 as an honorary members of the Author's club of New York. When the name Joost Marius M. Van der Poorten-Schwartz came to the attention of the membership committee there was a gasp of astonishment. Finally the late Bill Nye came to the rescue with the suggestion that the first half of the name should be acted on at once, but that the last half should be held over until the autumn, when the weather would be cool.—The Bookman.

Meaning of Babylon.

Babylon was great. She used science and she used art, but she abused humanity. She invented sundials, but forgot to regulate with justice the hours of labor. She could calculate a star's eclipse, but not her own. No state has been more guilty of the waste of human life. And when we see her ruins lying like a vast, mysterious autograph scrawled over the desert her history appears to be full of warning.—From W. R. Paterson's "Nemesis of Nations."

ASSEMBLYMAN ACCEPTS

Mr. Perkins Glad to Debate Buck Bill With Rev. Mr. Stifler.

"MARTYRDOM OF BURKE"

Union Legislator Pays His Compliments to Anti-Saloon Leaguer, and Charges Misrepresentation.

Assemblyman Randolph Perkins last night gave out an open letter addressed to the Rev. James F. Stifler, of Westfield, replying to the recent one from the clergyman, inviting him to a joint discussion of the Buck Local Option bill. Mr. Perkins expressed pleasure in accepting the challenge and puts the fixing of a date up to the clergyman. Here is the letter which bears date of yesterday:

Dear Sir—In answer to your favor of recent date, inviting me to come to Roselle for the purpose of discussing the local option bill introduced by Mr. Buck at the last session of the House, I beg to state that I shall be glad to attend at any time that may meet with your convenience and that of your parishioners.

I have no doubt that the gentlemen who have signed the letter addressed to me are interested in the matter, and that they are also interested in good legislation generally; and it is partly for that reason that I say I shall be happy to come to Roselle and give an account of my conduct as their representative in Trenton.

Involved in your invitation, however, is another proposition, which must be made the subject of separate reply. The gentlemen who have signed the letter say that they have constituted the officers of the organization known as the Anti-Saloon League, their servants in the prosecution of the local option bill, and that they have invited J. Frank Burke to report at the same time the results of his efforts at the last Assembly; and, after assuring me that I will be accorded equal courtesy with Mr. Burke, the letter concludes with an apology for its publication in the press previous to its receipt, by me, on the ground that public men were inviting me to a public meeting, and that it, therefore, seemed proper to make the contents of the letter public.

Mr. Burke has, for several months past, been attempting to thrust himself athwart the public eye. His first means to that end was to make an outcry of "conspiracy," against the judiciary committee of the House knowing that neither Mr. Alexander Mr. Klenert nor myself would let the charge pass unchallenged, and that the consequent investigation would give him the notoriety he sought. At that investigation Mr. Burke testified that he was a professional lobbyist, receiving $3,000 per year for his services. Those who heard the testimony were quite convinced that his methods proved his worth.

You, of course, know that after hearing all of the evidence the members of the House, both Democrats and Republicans, censured Mr. Burke for circulating false and unfair statements concerning the members of the judiciary committee, and excluded him from the privileges of the floor.

Posing on his martyrdom, this gentleman has been going about the State decrying every legislator who can see anything in the political horoscope that does not resemble his pet measure. His methods have been notoriously unfair. Has he not, time and again, charged Mr. Tillman with "ducking" the Local Option bill, knowing that at the time this measure came before the House Mr. Tillman was lying at home at the point of death?

I ask if the gentlemen who have signed the communication addressed to me stand for such misrepresentation? I do not believe they mean to. But whether they do or not, I will not go upon the public platform to debate with a detractor of the stamp of Mr. Burke.

It may be that the letter sent to me was published previous to its receipt, because "public men were inviting me 'to a public meeting;'" but when they tell me they have constituted Mr. Burke their agent, that they have hired a public hall, invited their agent to make a report on his efforts in Trenton, and then invite me to be present at the same time to discuss the same subject, it looks very much as though it were intended that I should enter into a debate with Mr. Burke, and that the publication of the letter was expected to have some coercive force, I am unwary, but when such preparations have been made, and I am assured that I "will be accorded equal courtesy with Mr. Burke in every respect," it does seem that an effort has been made to put me in a position where I could not gracefully de-

I. H. BOEHM RETIRES FROM ACTIVE BUSINESS

WILL TRAVEL ABROAD TO ENJOY A REST AND BETTERING HEALTH.

To better his health and enjoy a much needed rest, Ignatz H. Boehm, who for thirty-five years has conducted a dry goods store on West Front street, will retire from active business. He has completed arrangements to place the management of his store in the hands of dry goods men of wide experience, and will go on a trip abroad with his family.

Announcement of the change was made this morning. While Mr. Boehm will not say that his retirement from active management of the business is permanent, it is unlikely that he will content himself from now on with only general supervision of the establishment, allowing the active management to remain in the hands of the new men.

M. and A. Tepper, of Selma, Ala., are the men who will take charge of the store. They are young men, energetic, and thoroughly trained in the dry goods business. They conducted a large store in Selma for eleven years.

Mr. Boehm started in business, with his brother, the late David Boehm, where John Wirth's bakery now is. They remained there five years. The business has been in its present location for thirty years. Four times Mr. Boehm, winning more and more trade by upright and generous dealings, has been compelled to enlarge his store. When he started in the business covered a floor space twenty-four by eighty-five feet. Today the space required is 165 by 663 feet.

Mr. and Mrs. Boehm expect to sail for Europe early next month. They will be gone until fall, at least, and may stay abroad longer.

TEMPORARY ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF Y. M. C. A.

LOCAL YOUNG MAN WILL FILL RESPONSIBLE POSITION UNTIL THE FALL.

Martin B. Stutsman, of this city, is to take Wilbur Andrews' place as temporary assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A., when the latter leaves this week. Mr. Andrews came here to serve until called upon to fill a position he had already accepted when the vacancy in this city occurred. The place he goes to is at the Y. M. C. A. of New Haven, Conn., where he began his Y. M. C. A. work.

Mr. Andrews came here from the Bedford branch of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., where he did exceptionally good work. His services at the local association have been valuable and his departure is regretted. Mr. Stutsman will fill the office until fall, when he will resume his studies at the New York University. A permanent assistant secretary will be appointed at that time. Mr. Stutsman is a former president of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. He is the second boy to hold the office.

MISS EBEL BECOMES MRS. SAMUEL J. JOHANSEN.

Ceremony Takes Place at Home of Bride's Parents On Watchung Avenue.

Miss Louisa Bertha Ebel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ebel, of Watchung avenue, and Samuel James Johansen, of Scotch Plains, were married last night at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. J. Duerschner, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church, officiating. There were about twenty-five guests present to witness the ceremony. The home was attractively decorated with flowers and ferns.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held. The couple went to Philadelphia, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will reside in Plainfield upon their return. The bride was organist at St. Peter's Lutheran church for several years, and the groom is a machinist in the employ of the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works. Many gifts of use and value were received by Mrs. Johansen.

Carnival For Fresh Air Home.

The carnival for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, to be held Fourth of July afternoon and evening on the vacant lot, opposite Truell Hall will offer many attractions, including fancy articles, candy, cake, toy, Japanese booths, fish pond, shooting gallery, fortune telling, ice cream and a restaurant. Each booth will be elaborately decorated. It is expected that Miss Sara Curry and possibly some of the children will be there. The affair promises to excell the one held last year, and special efforts are being made to secure the desired amount to carry on this charitable work.

MONEY FOR OUR ROADS

To Keep Union's Highways Well a Larger Apropropriation is Needed.

FREEHOLDERS ACTIVE

Trying to Get More Money From Auto Tax—The Law May Be Changed.

Aroused to a realization of the fact that it will soon be seriously handicapped in its efforts to keep the roads of Union county in first-class condition with the appropriation allowed under the State law, the Board of Freeholders at the next session of the Legislature will have introduced a bill by which Union county will receive a fairer proportion of the State automobile tax fund. At the same time an effort may be made to have a bill introduced allowing the freeholders to make a larger proportion for road maintenance than at present. It is felt that the present fund is inadequate.

Of the $50,000 which the State derives from the tax on automobiles and divides among the counties for the maintenance of so-called "State aid" roads Union county gets the ridiculous amount of something like $150, only three miles of road coming under that classification. This is due to the fact that Union constructed its roads under the old county road law, and was therefore left out when, under the newer State aid law, it was provided that the automobile fund be divided proportionately to the miles of road built under the new statute. All other counties took advantage of this provision, but it was too late for Union. The equity of Union's claim to a proper share of the State fund or about $2,000, there being about forty miles of road which the proposed statute would convert into State aid road, would not be denied, it is thought.

While it is said on good authority that at the same time an effort will be made to secure the passage of a law allowing counties to make a larger appropriation than the five per cent of the original cost of the roads, or $17,500 in Union, members of the Road Committee will not confirm the report. An official identified with the movement for good roads declared to a reporter today that larger appropriations would be absolutely necessary because of the increase in automobile traffic. He said that repairs which originally sufficed for five years, were now sufficient for less than half that time because of the wear and tear of the heavy autos.

To the autos also is laid the blame for the increasing dust nuisance which is occupying the attention of the county officials. In Essex county the Board of Freeholders has instructed counsel to draw up a bill calling for larger appropriations for road repair, the increase to be used for the abatement of the dust nuisance. The method by which this increase is to be secured, it is proposed, shall be a larger tax on automobiles. It is probable that the Union county board will lend its support to the movement, members of the Road Committee being a unit in favor of the proposed statute.

But though the funds at hand may not be sufficient, the county officials are attempting to abate the dust nuisance as far as possible and probably next week will lay oil over about ten or fifteen miles of road. The expense entailed is just $100 per mile. The efficiency of the oil treatment will be tested and should it prove a real remedy more extensive use may be made of it. Union county is practically taking the lead in the abatement of the dust nuisance.

Whether the move to get a fair portion of the State automobile tax fund fails or not, an effort, with the same general end in view, will be made to have St. George avenue, between Rahway and Elizabeth, made a State road.

The Roads Committee of the board yesterday made its regular monthly inspection of the county roads.

There have been several complaints lately that the county roads are not receiving the proper attention.

INTERESTING TALE FROM BURLINGTON

READS WELL, BUT LACKS THE SWEET ESSENCE OF TRUTH AND CHILLY FACT.

After an absence from Burlington, which he left four years ago in peculiar circumstances, and having been mourned as dead by his wife and family, Charles P. Brewin, formerly a prominent tailor, has been located in this city, working as a journeyman tailor, according to stories published in New York papers, under Burlington date lines, this morning. Alfred Woolman, of Burlington, while in this city a few days ago, the stories declare, met Brewin in the street, but the latter declared that his name was Johnson and not Brewin.

The story could not be confirmed in this city. The police had heard nothing about the alleged occurrence, and there is an impression that some Burlington romancer is seeking to earn vacation money by the exercise of his ability as a writer of fiction. The rest of the story, as it appears in the New York papers, is as follows:

Frank P. Brewin, a son accompanied by William Brewin, a brother, came to Plainfield, located their relative, and with difficulty convinced him that his name was Brewin, he persisting that it was Johnson. Ever since he went away he has wandered within a short radius of New York city.

It was on November 9, 1903, when Brewin mysteriously dropped out of sight. A week after his departure his hat and a note were found in a Jersey City ferryboat. It was believed that he had committed suicide.

Mr. Brewin suffered from sunstroke while in the army, and physicians were of the opinion that it had affected his brain. He is thought to have been mentally unbalanced at the time of his wandering away and that he is still affected. His health was not good, and it was thought he would not live many months.

Brewin was one of the most prominent men of Burlington, where he had been in the tailoring business for thirty years. He was a deacon of the First Baptist church, and belonged to several lodges and stood well socially in the city. The son has not yet been able to persuade his father to return home.

BOROUGH YOUNG MEN PLAN LONG WALKING JAUNT

START TOMORROW ON 400 MILE TRIP TO THE ADIRONDACKS.

An instructive method of spending a vacation has been planned by Lester Brokaw and Tracey Howard, two North Plainfield young men, who start tomorrow on a 400 mile walk. They will proceed by way of Peapack and Bernardsville to the Delaware Water Gap, thence along the Delaware river to New York State. Their destination is to be Northfield, N. Y., a summer resort in the Catskills, where they have sojourned with their parents at various times.

The pedestrians count on making the distance in about fifteen or twenty days, and will divide the daily stretches so as to bring them to the larger towns and cities at night. They will carry nothing beyond stout walking sticks and a few necessary toilet articles.

Both young men are familiar with jaunts of this nature, having taken several in previous years. On one trip they roughed it over the mountains of Pennsylvania and had experiences varied enough for three vacations in looking over coal mines and other sights in the Wyoming valley.

G. A. R. Encampment.

Arrangements are practically completed for the annual State G. A. R. encampment in Ocean City, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. The encampment will bring about 1,400 delegates alone, representing the posts throughout the State, and no doubt they will be accompanied by thousands of visitors.

Goldsack's Trial Next Week.

Robert E. Goldsack, who was arrested while performing his duties as a clerk at the local postoffice and was subsequently released on bail for his appearance in court, will enter his plea in the United States Court at Trenton on Monday morning.

May Save Eyesight.

DeWitt C. Giles, of Piscataway, who suffered severe injuries as the result of a gun exploding in his hands a few weeks ago, has left the hospital. While the sight of one eye is gone, it is believed that the other one may be saved.

"MAY MACK" A TRAVELER

Bay Mare Has Hauled Illinois Couple 11,000 Miles and Trip is Not Ended.

REST AWHILE HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Judson Enjoying a Novel Outing—Their Destination Washington, D. C.

Arthur Judson and his wife, who left Rock Island, Ill., 190 miles the other side of Chicago, on May 9 in a buggy for a drive to Washington, D. C., arrived in Plainfield yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock and resumed their journey behind their four-year-old bay mare May Mack at 8 o'clock this morning. They are going to the national capital to visit their daughter and to do a little sightseeing on the side.

Mr. Judson is fifty-seven years old and is as sound as a dollar. He was born up in the woods of Harlem, and a big hankering came over him to return to the East and see how things were getting along. He sold out his business as a contractor and builder in Rock Island, hitched up May Mack, the pride of his heart, and started out in his buggy with Mrs. Judson, intending to make the trip by easy stages and to see all that was to be seen.

"We've travelled about 1,100 miles," he said yesterday, and "we've had a glorious time. We have jogged along from town to town, regulating our itinerary by the accommodation afforded by the different places along the route. We haven't had a single accident and had only four days of wet weather which compelled us to lay up in hotels. We have averaged, I should judge, about twenty-five or thirty miles a day, and the greatest distance we covered in any one day was forty-one miles. We have met lots of nice people and some queer ones and altogether we have enjoyed a mighty interesting vacation.

"We found good roads all the way excepting for about forty miles in Ohio. There we ran up against stones and had to go slow. In New York the State engineer seems to be the whole push. Every once in a while we would run across a sign announcing that a road was closed by order of the State engineer while repairs were being made. Sometimes we paid attention to the signs and sometimes we didn't. When we drove ahead we often had to go across fields or cut over ditches before we could reach the main turnpike. There's a big opportunity for the State engineer to change his methods of doing business. I can't for the life of me see the necessity of digging clean across a twenty-five foot road in making repairs. Why not work one-half of it at a time and let teams and automobiles pass by? Why compel people to go miles out of their way?"

Judson was obliged to make frequent inquiries to find out if he was on the right road to New York. He said that he was surprised to find the people of Indiana particularly ignorant of directions and how to get from one place to another. In New Lenox the principal business man of the town couldn't tell him how to drive to the next village.

"At Valparaiso, Ind.," Judson said, "I was told that it was a mite of seven miles to Union Mills. We drove May Mack about an hour and a half and met a man who informed us that Union Mills was fifteen miles distant. We finally got there and learned that we had travelled all told exactly seventeen miles from Valparaiso."

While stopping in Hoboken, prior to resuming their journey, Mr. and Mrs. Judson made trolley trips to Stamford, Conn., Yonkers and Coney Island on sightseeing tours, and also took the Third Avenue L to Bronx Park. Mr. Judson said that after his return from Washington he proposes to buy an acre or two of land somewhere between New York city and Yonkers and will build a home for himself in his old age. He will select a site outside of a city to please Mrs. Judson, who says the city is "too hot and too stuffy" to suit her.

"I never could hang my wash in a window the way they do in New York," she said.

The Judsons stabled their rig at the Plainfield Cab Company stables while in town and they put up at the Belmont Hotel, close by. Mr. Judson is very enthusiastic over the trip, and as her husband says, she is getting fat on it. Mr. Judson spoke well of Plainfield so far as he was able to see it, and said that he was delighted with the roads in this part of the State. The couple left this morning at 8 o'clock to continue their journey to Washington.

Mrs. Charles Speer, her son and daughter, of Bangor, Pa., are visiting Mrs. Speer's sister, Mrs. Joseph C. Martin, of Duer street.

BAR ASSOCIATION NOT TO ACT ON PRESENTMENT

Calmer Judgement Prevails After Mr. Marsh Argues Against Action on Grand Jury's Findings.

COURT THIS AFTERNOON

Judge Swayze Will Receive Two Murder Indictments—Presentment Was Against An Alleged "System."

Acting upon the advice of President Craig A. Marsh, of this city, the Union County Bar Association, at a special meeting held in Elizabeth, this morning, took no action regarding the report of the Grand Jury in reference to the method of selecting juries. Mr. Marsh made a brief statement in which he said that in his opinion any action the association might take could be construed as a censor of the Grand Jury and this he believed it preferred to avoid.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Marsh, there being present the petit jury as well as a number of members of the association. Several lawyers spoke briefly of the Grand Jury's presentment affecting the system of drawing juries, stating that they thought it was a reflection on the present petit jury, which they declared to be composed of an exceptionally fine body of men, in fact, above the average. This opinion was concurred in by some of the lawyers, but after Mr. Marsh spoke, it was unanimously agreed that it would be wise not to take any action.

The Grand Jury has requested Supreme Court Justice Swayze to meet them this afternoon at 5 o'clock, and he has announced his intention of being present at that time. At that time, it is understood that two indictments for murder will be handed up to the court. That any reference will be made to the Grand Jury's presentment regarding the illegal selling of liquor is problemmatical. The subject has caused no end of discussion throughout the county and especially in Elizabeth and Mr. Fisk and his colleagues are being congratulated on every hand for their fearless and timely exposure of a "system" detrimental to good government.

At 5 o'clock this afternoon, Justice Swayze will instruct the Grand Jury with respect to the matters which he took under advisement last Friday; to hear further reports of the Grand Jury, and to inform the petit jurors whether or not they are legally privileged to defend themselves in court against the presentment of last week.

Justice Swayze is expected to inform the petit jurors that they have no such right.

The Grand Jurors stand by their charges, several of them stating today that if the criticisms of their course are continued, they will take still more radical action.

In court the majority of the petit jurors wish to say, if they get the opportunity, that in their opinion, the Grand Jury hears only one side of the case, that is, the complainant's, and is left without an inkling as to what the defense may be. They want to point out to the court, they say, that the two dollars a day received for serving as jurors is small compensation for some of the men in the panel, who lose much more than that because of the neglect of their business while serving the State.

They desire to declare, in effect, it is said, that Union county never had a panel of higher grade, that the majority of the men on the petit jury are men of responsibility and standing in the community, that Judge Atwater himself revised the list after the sheriff had made his selection.

Elizabeth—John A. Bamberger, Fred Bender, Jr., James H. Bigelow, Thomas Cary, Thomas Dowd, John G. Hall, Peter L. Hughes, Harry Jenkinson, Louis M. Kling, Daniel PJ. Leonard, Andrew S. Lovejoy, James W. Martin, Carl Marz, Bernard McLain, Robert McCracken, Herbert A. Pierson, John Porter, Charles A. Rizzo, Jacob C. Rolston, Leonard Sauer, Charles Schnepel.

DROVE HIS CRIPPLED WIFE FROM THE HOUSE

WOMAN APPEALS TO POLICE FOR PROTECTION, AND RECEIVES SHELTER.

Driven from her home near Washington Rock, she alleged, by her husband, Adolphine Foucault, wife of a harness maker, applied for protection at police headquarters yesterday afternoon. She is being cared for at the Industrial Home, pending steps to have North Plainfield township take action in the case. She is middle-aged, and has an artificial foot.

Mrs. Foucault came to the Home Monday night. She speaks but little English, and Superintendent Ten Eyck could not understand much of her tale. He gathered that it was a police case, however, and sent to headquarters. Arrangements were made to get the woman in the morning, but before the officers started she slipped from the Home and disappeared. She wandered into headquarters shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon and made her appeal for help.

With the aid of a French-speaking friend, Chief Kiely learned her story. She said her husband drinks heavily, and that while drunk Monday night he beat her with a stick and chased her out of the house.

She was sent back to the Home. Chief Kiely will call the attention of the township to the case today, and ask that the woman be cared for there, and that a warrant be issued for the arrest of the husband.

M'ADAMS RE-ELECTED TO COUNTY ELECTION BOARD

WALTER L. HETFIELD, SR. HIS ONLY OPPONENT FOR THE PLACE.

The Union County Democratic Committee held a meeting at Elizabeth last night for the purpose of electing a member of the county Board of Elections to succeed Robert McAdams. The Plainfielders placed Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., in nomination and made a strong fight for him but McAdams was re-elected by a good majority.

The committee which conducted the Martine testimonial dinner submitted a report showing that after all expenses were paid there was a balance of $43. The fact that there was a surplus at all was surprising to the county committee, as no expense had been spared to make the affair a success and it was supposed that a deficit would have to be made up.

"I thought we would have to dig down for a couple of dollars, at least," said one of the Plainfield members this morning, "and I would gladly have given twice that amount. The dinner was the most successful affair the committee has ever conducted and much credit is due those who arranged it."

WILL RESUME BUSINESS.

A. L. Cadmus Preparing to Rebuild the Commercial Mills.

A. L. Cadmus, whose Commercial Mills were destroyed by fire last week, is preparing to resume business as soon as the debris can be cleared away and the insurance is adjusted. Mr. Cadmus is now disposing of the grain, hay, oats and flour which were damaged by water and as soon as this is done he will begin the work of rebuilding his brick mill.

As stated a few days ago the loss is not much more than one-quarter of that at first reported and as a result of the eighty per cent. insurance claus in his policies he will not lose over $50. The expense of putting a top and roof on the mill building will not be heavy and Mr. Cadmus will be able to start business again as soon as that is done.

Wing Walls Completed.

The fourth and last wing wall on the West End avenue bridge was completed today by the contractor, Arthur E. Smith. The work was started two months ago, Mr. Smith being given until July 1 to complete the job. He could have finished it several weeks ago, but another contract which he had at Dunellen was more urgent and he wanted to get through with that one first. The walls are well and substantially built and if the work meets with the approval of the freeholders in Union and Somerset counties, it will be accepted. The city and borough will now be obliged to fill in and grade about the bridge.

WORKS WONDERS.

A Wonderful Compound—Cures Piles, Eczema, Skin Itching, Skin Eruptions, Cuts and Bruises.

Doan's Ointment is the best skin treatment, and the cheapest, because so little is required to cure. It cures piles after years of torture. It cures obstinate cases of eczema. It cures all skin itching. It cures skin eruptions. It heals cuts, bruises, scratches and abrasions without leaving a scar. It cures permanently. Plainfield testimony proves it.

Thomas Haskard, of 941 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was a member of Co. A, First Regt., N. J. Vols., under Col. Montgomery. I was out in 3½ years of the Civil War and was wounded once in the leg and once in the neck. During the Rebillion I contracted itching piles and they bothered me off and on ever since. No one who has not suffered from this trouble knows what the irritation is. I tried about every salve, wash and ointment known in the hope of finding a cure but nothing helped me until I got Doan's Ointment and it took just three boxes to put me in shape so I could rest nights and cure me so that I have been free ever since from any trouble arising from piles."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

This has been one of the most active social seasons at the Plainfield Country Club in its history. Scarcely a day passes but that several luncheons and dinner parties are given. The members enjoy the afternoons and evenings on the hill-top where it is always cool and comfortable. Among the social events at the club this week will be a dinner party tomorrow night to be given by Mrs. George A. Beaton for twenty guests.

The golf players at the Plainfield Country Club are becoming famous for tie scores, showing how closely matched they are in the game. On Saturday five contestants were tied with a net score of 79 for the Golf committee cup, and the highest handicap was 4, allowed E. B. Shoemaker.

Among the events scheduled for the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday will be the finals for the June cup, play for the Scratch cup, the Golf committee and Green committee cups.

The event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday will be the qualifying round, active members only, in both classes, for the Governor's cup, which will be played for at handicap match play in July. This round will be at handicap medal play, the players in Class B to add 10 to their handicaps. The lowest sixteen net scores to qualify.

Special events for the remainder of the season have been arranged by the tournament committee of the Fox Hills Golf Club as follows: July 4—Independence Day medal, offered by W. W. Lowery (annual competition), eighteen holes; also qualifying round for cup presented by Col. Hugh O'Donohue. August 3—Two ball foursome, match play, prizes presented by B. A. Bullock. September 3—Labor Day cup, eighteen hole handicap. September 14—Thirty-two to qualify at eighteen holes for President's cup, presented by Joseph J. O'Donohue. October 26—Fox Hills championship for Armstrong medal, sixteen to qualify. November 5—Election Day cup, presented by A. H. and P. W. Pogson, eighteen hole handicap; also captain's prize, presented by B. S. Bottome and William Boyd. November 28—Thanksgiving Day cup, eighteen hole handicap.

Commencing Saturday, July 6, there will be play every Saturday during the month for the July cup at the Park Golf Club. This will be a handicap competition, eighteen holes, medal play, open to all members. The five lowest net scores each day of play to score points as follows: First, five points; second, four points; third, three points; fourth, two points; fifth, one point. The contestant who scores the greatest number of points shall become the permanent holder of the cup.

If such a thing is possible "Marty" O'Loughlin will have some of the crack "pros" at the Plainfield Country Club this season to meet him in a match. He is particularly anxious to meek Aleck Ross, the winner of the national open championship at Philadelphia.

It is the combined efforts of the officers of the Plainfield Country Club working in harmony that brings such satisfactory results on the golf course and tennis courts, as well as in the social affairs at the clubhouse.

DIAMOND DUST.

Knight, the former third baseman on the Philadelphia American League team, has not been playing as strong a fielding and hitting game since he joined the Boston Americans.

There will be considerable interest in the game at Crescent Oval, Saturday, when the Y. M. C. A. nine will cross bats with Scotch Plains. Two weeks ago when these teams met at the Plains, the association boys were defeated and they are determined to get even. George Dupee will be on the slab and Walter Nelson will do the backstop work.

The Clinton Avenue team, which plays at Dunellen on Saturday, is holding its own and promises to be a most important factor in the amateur league race. The nine is in first class condition.

Marsh, who is covering the initial bag for the Y. M. C. A. team, is improving in his work every week, both in fielding and with the stick. He is one of the best first basemen in the league.

Gilman, who is playing the outfield for Clinton Avenue, is doing fine work in the field and at the bat since he recovered from an affection of the eye.

Both New York teams are having their troubles these days, especially the Giants since their return from the western trip. They find it difficult to defeat even the tailenders of the league.

Heyniger, who has two years yet at Princeton, promises to be the mainstay of the Tigers in the pitching department next season. It was due to his great work in the box this season that the orange and black nine scored so many victories.

First Saturday Half Holiday July 6th; closing at noon, but not open Friday nights till July 12th; closed July 4th.

Grand New $22.50 Silk Dresses at - - $12.75

Beauty and Superb Style—We are told by wholesalers and customers that we sell more silk dresses than all other Newark stores together. We do not know about that, but we do know that the sales of these pretty dresses have doubled and trebled over any previous season; if this is the effect, what is the cause? Simply that our dresses exceed in value—styles are better, make better, and the women of Newark have come to know this; we do not buy promiscuous lots and then advertise suits at 1-3 their worth; where this practiced there may be two or three suits as advertised, but when these are picked (as they are always by first customers) balance are worth the price marked, or, at least, not the great bargain claimed. Here one spit is as desirable as another; all of excellent, beautiful taffeta silk and foulards; stripes and dots, high neck and "jumpers" sleeves and yoke of pretty filmy lace; dresses that impel admiration; dresses that are serviceable; full waists, wide skirts, side pleated folds on bottom; great variety of colors; true value, $22.50, at $12.75

SILK FROCKS FOR $9.98.

The Season's Dress Sensation.

No house is showing suits that come near matching these at so low a price—and none is likely to, for the maker from whom we get these doesn't make a business of turning out low-priced suits and is simply favoring us as a matter of reciprocity for other business we send him.

How could any maker produce such dresses as these regularly without actual loss?

We had the great satisfaction of personally selecting the silks that enter into these dresses and suits, and we can assure you that no prettier fabrics have been seen this season.

Four choice models to choose from—both waist and jumper styles, with side-plaited, cluster-plaited and box-plaited skirts, with broad bands around the bottom of the skirt, with piping of contrasting color. They are made of splendid chiffon taffetas in black, blue and brown and blue and white, brown and white and black and white stripes and checks. It requires no stretch of the imagination to value these garments at $18.50 to $25, yet we are going to dispose of them until our contract is completed at the phenomenal price of $9.98

Pony Coats and Etons of Black Silk, Pongee and Covert, trimmed with braid, embroidery and lace; values $12.50 to $22.50; special priced $7.50

Extraordinary Three Days' Sale

UNTRIMMED HATS at 50c.

If these are not the greatest values ever offered in seasonable untrimmed hats we know little of millinery selling.

Here are offered forty dozen smart untrimmed hats of plain and fancy braid, embracing practically everything that is new and desirable in both shape and color in a variety most unusual at this time of year, due to the cool season; hats that have been selling at prices ranging from $1 to $2.95, to be offered while the lots last during the next three days at only 50

Lace and Embroidery Medallions

At Less Than Half Price.

A lucky strike—this lot of beautiful bits of lace which a maker favored us with at a price that doesn't begin to cover cost of making. The variety of designs is large and includes pretty Festoons, Panels, Squares, Round and Oblong Shapes. These may be employed to advantage in the beautifying of either waists or dresses. You will find them most desirable in every way—fine qualities, superb patterns—all new. Many are heavily embroidered. Prices are at most no more than half.

Judging by the excellent work of Jack Peacock, as a pitcher for the freshmen team at Princeton, he will be a valuable man for the 'Varsity nine one of these days.

When it comes to stick work Jack Martin and his brother, Brit. Martin, of the Clinton Avenue team, do not have to take their hats off to any other player in the league. They hit the ball at the most opportune times.

Scotch Plains is strong in fielding and hitting, but the pitching department is the weakest point.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

The Public Library Issues the Following Suggestions for the Summer.

Summer Suggestions.

Are you going away this summer? Would you not like to know more about the points of interest on your trip?

Or perhaps a European trip is contemplated? The library is rich in books of European travel and has helped many to added appreciation of such a trip.

Are you looking forward to the summer vacation as a time of rest and refreshment? Books are the most restful of companions. Provide yourself with little books which do not weigh down the trunk, and which are easily held—the library can supply you with many such.

Ar are you planning for a summer in town? Why not make it an opportunity to read some of the books you "have always wanted to read?"

Are you a teacher? The library is very good to teachers. Ask about teachers' privileges.

Or, are you a clubwoman, with a paper to write for the winter? Read up now while the books are not so much in demand.

Are there children in the family? The library is prepared to give them especial help in selecting their books, and by the way, the Children's corner is a good place for them to spend part of the warm summer days.

Remember—

That special privileges are given for the summer months.

That the library is one of the coolest places in town, and that the morning hours are the quietest and coolest in which to sit and read the magazines and papers.

That if you get a book or magazine charges to you, you can read it in our Open Air Reading Room, the City Park.

That a postal request, a telephone message, or mailing the library card is all that is necessary to renew a book. Our telephone number is 742-J.

That in the choice of books, courses of reading, or just to help you select "a good book," the library is at your service.

That the Public Library is free to every man, woman and child in the city of Plainfield.

SECRET OF GOOD MANNERS.

Two Theories of the Acquirement—Unselfishness and Conventionality.

Most mothers hold, consciously or unconsciously, one of two theories about the acquirement of manners by their children.

One mother says: "Manners are only the outward sign of the inner nature. If my daughter has a kind heart and a well-trained mind she will behave in a gentle charming fashion. I will teach her compassion, respect for age, unselfish zeal for helping with the world's work. Her manners will take care of themselves."

Another mother says: "My girls will never get on without conventional matters. They shall be taught from babyhood to emulate the speech and bearing of ladies. They shall be instructed in the proper behavior for every occasion. They shall walk and dance and write and speak with graceful perfection."

Neither method produces altogether satisfactory results.

Unselfishness is truly the foundation of good manners, but not the superstructure. Many conventional restrictions have grown about social relations. Some can be explained by the demand of kindness and some cannot. Could a child inter from his desire to help others that he should not eat with his knife? Many offenses against good taste interfere in some way with the rights of others, but many others do not.

Still, no set of rules to produce a polished lady will achieve a result fit for the strain of life. The manners of the French boarding school may adorn the ballroom, but are too likely to fail at the breakfast table or in the crowded car. The woman of perfect manners must reinforce her unselfishness by social rules, and conventionality must be vitalized by the warm desire of others' pleasure. The best of life never "comes naturally," whether in manners or morals.

The secret of charming manners is the desire for them. When the mother wishes them for her daughter as much as she wishes the other goods of the world her daughter will have them.—Youth's Companion.

cline to appear at your meeting, and thus be forced to answer Mr. Burke.

It is quite evident that the communication was not penned by those who signed it, and that if you will pardon the allusion—the hand may have been the hand of Esau, but the voice was the voice of Jacob Frank Burke.

I desire to say that as far as is consistent with my business and public duties, I shall be glad at any time to appear before you personally, or any other person in Union county, and state where I stand on any proposition; but no one has the right to expect me to stand on a platform with a man who has grossly insulted, not only myself, but several of my friends.

More School Room Necessary.

The Somerville Board of Education has under consideration the matter of additional school room. When school opens in the fall it will be necessary to have at least one and perhaps two more rooms. The question of renting rooms outside, which has heretofore proven unsatisfactory, or to erect a four-room addition to the old high school building, which would involve a cost of about $15,000, is what is puzzling members of the board. It is probable that a public meeting will be held in the near future to give the citizens a chance to express their views in reference to the matter. The Board of Education has not as yet completed hiring teachers for the coming school year. The majority of the old ones return, but there are a number of vacancies still unfilled.

Gas, Not Electricity.

Editor, The Daily Press:

My attention has been called to the article in today's Press to the effect that I have proposed to the S. P. C. A. to kill stray dogs and cats at my factory by means of electricity. I have had in use for a number of years a steel tank in which I have disposed of homeless cats and dogs by means of city gas, the same as employed by the S. P. C. A. in a number of cities and I have offered to the local society to provide a shelter and to dispose in this manner of lost or disabled small animals.

Asphyxiation by means of city gas, such as supplied in this city, is the most swift and painless death possible. It is quicker than chloroform and much more certain.

Although horses die instantly from electric shock at much lower pressure than required to kill a man, cats and dogs can stand much higher voltages than man and to kill them by electricity would be most cruel.

The popular idea that death by electric shock is painless is terribly in error and electrocution is, in fact, most barbarous. It has nearly lost my life several times by shock and can testify that while it may appear swift to one witnessing an execution the sensation experienced by the victim is exactly the same as though crushed by being stepped on by a giant or struck squarely by a locomotive going a miler a minute.

Electrocution is much handier for the executioner, but it would be exactly as humane to blow up our murderers with dynamite or to cut their heads off.

Yours truly,
S. W. RUSHMORE.

WILL TAKE CONTRACT.

Hassam Pavement Company Plans to Accept Work for Macadamizing One Street.

Although it was low on but one street, West Second street, in the bids for the macadmized work proposed by the city, the Hassam Pavement Company, of Worcester, Mass., will take the contract if given to it by the Common Council. The company's bid for West Second street was fifty-seven cents per lineal foot, and while it might not net it much profit on this one contract alone, the fact that it has received the contract for laying on block of Hassam pavement on Somerset street, the borough, will enable the company to do the city work at the same time.

Six of the streets proposed to be macadamized and upon which C. M. Meeker was the lowest bidder, will probably receive the contract for them, while Warren B. Travell, who bid lowest on four other streets, will undoubtedly get the contract for them. The matter will be decided at the July meeting of the Common Council.

Steel Rail Conference.

Chicago, Ill., June 26.—Makers of steel rails are holding out the olive branch to the railroads. E. H. Gary, chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, has sent out a personal invitation to every railroad president in the United States asking him to attend a conference between rail makers and railroads which will be held at his office in New York tomorrow. To several of the presidents Mr. Gary has stated that the United States Steel Corporation earnestly desires to make the best steel rail possible, and to make rails which shall satisfy the railroads, their customers. He has also intimated that the steel rail makers are ready to admit that the rails of the "heavier sections," as they are called, have not proved as satisfactory as the former rails of the "lighter sections."

DISTURB EDITOR'S BATH.

Firemen Arrive At His Home to Find Fire Is Only In Stove.

Joseph McFadden, city editor of the Morning Press, of New Brunswick, was taking a bath at home, yesterday afternoon, when the fire department arrived and pounded for admission. The newspaper man poked his head out of a window, so far as he dared, and asked them if he couldn't take a bath on a hot afternoon without being interrupted in that fashion.

"The house is afire," shouted the firemen.

"I hadn't noticed it," replied the city editor. "You must have called at the wrong address."

And he hurried back to finish his wash before the water cooled off. The firemen went home without finding the man who turned in the alarm that gave them the sweltering run. It appears that McFadden started a fire to heat the water for his bath and didn't manipulate the draughts just right, so that smoke poured out of windows and gave the neighbors the impression that the house was afire. As all of the McFadden family, excepting the editor, are spending the summer at Asbury Park, the neighbors thought that the house was empty and was surely burning.

NETHERWOOD AVENUE HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE.

Blaze Originating In Closet Causes a Loss of $300—Patrolman Does Good Work.

A second-story fire, origin mysterious, caused $300 damage at the home of W. L. Aronsberg, of 220 North avenue, this morning. Members of the family were busy about the barn for some time previous to its discovery and it had gained considerable headway before an alarm was turned in from box 18 at 10:30. Patrolman Dobson reached the scene at about the same time and did valiant work with pails of water until a stream from the chemical engine extinguished the flames. They started in a closet at the head of the stairs.

The fire was a hot one while it lasted but the damage was kept down by the department getting to work in short order and striking the heart of the flames in a jiffy. The residents of that section learned through the blaze that hydrants on Netherwood avenue are as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth and if the fire had been a big one the lack of them would have been badly felt. It is probable that somebody will get a hustle on to see that the Common Council is petitioned to put in a few.

Hopes to be Sentenced Next Week.

THE SECRET.

HE.
Have my eyes not told the secret
That has long been in my breast?
Have you, as I lingered with you,
Never known or never guessed?
Need I beg of you to listen,
Need I grope for words to tell,
Since my glances have betrayed me,
Since you know the truth so well?

SHE.
Yes, your eyes have oft betrayed you;
All that you could tell I know;
I have learned your heart's dear secret,
You revealed it long ago;
By your sighs and by your glances
All that you could whisper now
I have learned with glad assurance—
But repeat it, anyhow.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Age.

First Boarder—It was an easy matter to classify the stone age, the bronze age, etc.; but this age with its many and wondrous inventions, what name will fit?

Second Boarder—Judging by the eggs (and other grub) we get nowadays, it strikes me stor-age would be about right.—Judge.

ADORABLE SPRING.

Ethel—Oh, yes, I adore spring. It is so like childhood, you know."

Howard—Oh, yes; very squally for the most part.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

The Bargain Hunter.

From store to store she hastens,
And will think the day well spent
If on all the things she purchases
She saves but half a cent.
—Judge.

Scheme Didn't Work.

Mrs. Slimpurse—It's all nonsense to talk about managing a husband by silent appeals to his good nature. It can't be done. If you want anything you've got to say so right out. You know this horrid old hat I've worn for two seasons?

Mrs. Makeshift—Yes; and I suggested that you should quietly put it on and let him see you wearing it.

Mrs. Slimpurse—That's just what I did—exactly what I did; and when I proposed to walk down the town with him he said, "I'm afraid all this finery will make my old clothes look shabby!"

The Metropolitan Habit.

In an Italian mission school in New York city the teacher was giving a lesson on the life of Lincoln.

"And remember, children," she said earnestly, "when Lincoln went to school it wasn't as easy for him as it is for you. He had to walk miles and miles and miles."

"Why didn't he ask for a transfer?" asked a little boy on the front seat.—Judge.

A Frightful Rumor.

Cecil—Poor Algy Daffington is on the verge of complete nervous prostration over a criminally stupid rumor.

Percy—My word! It's the first I'd heard of it. What agitated the dear boy so?

Cecil—Some anonymous writer has declared that in the very near future valets will no longer be fashionable.—Puck.

Pay Day Not Eternity.

"Young man," said the serious gentleman, "did you ever pause and think that each tick of the clock brings you another moment nearer to the end of your existence?"

"I was thinging of something of that kind this very minute," cheerfully replied the youth, "only the idea struck me that each tick brought payday that much nearer."

Up to Uncle.

"Oh, uncle, do give mother her pretty diamonds back again."

"What on earth do you mean, darling? I haven't them."

"But I heard mother say that she has had to let you have them since her last bridge party, and won't be able to get them back for a long time!"

Animals That Roam.

"Now, Johnnie," asked his teacher, "when you go to the country in summer what animals do you see roving about?"

"Boarders," was the prompt reply.—Judge.

Was a Postman.

Spencer—Miss Whiston told me that her father was a much traveled man of letters.

Ferguson—So he was. He had the biggest round of any postman in the district.

His Last Wash.

Tramp—I looks like a tramp, ma'am, but I ain't. I'm a sailor, ma'am. I was wrecked and washed ashore.

Unsympathetic Lady of the House—Well, you ain't been washed since, I'll wager.

It is believed, however, that there is a lack of unanimity among the petit jurors, as to the propriety of making any statement to the court taking issue with the points made by the Grand Jury, no matter how severe these strictures were. Some of the jurors are opposed to such a plan.

The Grand Jury was hitting at a system, not a particular condition. Everybody knows, it is argued, that in the past there has been a lot of criticism of the quality of the petit jurors just as it is known that there has been a marked improvement in the quality of jurors drawn recently in Union county. However, it is pointed out that there is always apt to be an eccentric representation on every jury panel. There are generally some men drawn whose personal ideas as to whether certain laws should be on the statute books will lead them to combat the enforcement of these laws.

So much fuss is being made about the criticism of the petit jurors, one lawyer said today, that people are apt to lose sight of the other evils the Grand Jury dwelt upon and severely castigated.

Giant Schooner Sunk.

Norfolk, Va., June 26.—The British steamer Chelston, Captain Hocken, bound from Boston for Central American ports, arrived in Hampton Roads yesterday, having aboard Captain Sanford and the crew of twelve men from the five master schooner, T. Charlton Henry, of Boston, which was rammed and sunk by the Chelston in a dense fog off Fire Island, N. Y., on June 23. The prow of the steamer put an immense hole in the schooner about ten feet forward of her fore rigging on the star board side, causing the great five master to rapidly fill and sink. Boats were lowered from both vessels, and the captain and crew of the Henry were transferred to the Chelston. The schooner sank five minutes later. The Henry was of 2,149 tons net register and was built at Camden, Me., in 1902. She was owned by the Crowleys, of Boston. The loss probably will total $150,000.

FROM THE PENCIL'S POINT.

A reckless chauffeur is a sort of automaniac.

A woman is always looking on the bright side—of a mirror.

Any man who doesn't want what he hasn't got has all he wants.

Just now the open season for coal chuting is drawing to a close.

Never judge the dimensions of a woman's brain by the size of her hat.

It is necessary to show some people the open door in order to shut them up.

With the exception of the undertaker few men finish all they undertake.

It is fortunate that the best man at a wedding is content to take second place.

It takes a man to explain to a woman things that he doesn't understand himself.

Some women marry in order to be independent, and some men get unmarried for the same reason.

Most men appreciate the nonsense of a pretty woman far more than they do the sense of a homely one.

No, Alonzo, don't think because a woman is swathed in an automobile veil that she is the owner of a motor car.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Words never fail a smooth hypocrite.

A funny story gets more applause than sensible talk.

There's always room for a few more—at the bottom.

It's a woman's plain duty to be as handsome as she can.

Jonah was the first man on record to get inside information.

Popularity is an article that isn't displayed on bargain counters.

It takes a fool to fool himself into the belief that he isn't foolish.

It's up to a married man to be a husband—not merely an ex-bachelor.

Female suffragists, Cordelia, are just plain women—and the plainer they are the more they suffer.

It is far better for a girl to remain single than marry a good-looking man, for he will monopolize the mirror.—Chicago Daily News.

DYSPEPTISMS.

Tell a secret to a woman if you want it syndicated.

Our sins also have an uncomfortable habit of finding us in.

A lot of sympathy is wasted on the under dog and the old maid.

If marriage is a lottery, alimony must be a sort of gambling debt.

A girl must be very intellectual not to be able to tell what another girl has on.

A fellow asks for a girl's hand, and the first thing he knows he is under her thumb.

When a man boasts that he never did anything he is ashamed of, it may merely indicate that he is lacking in a sense of shame.

The poor man who can't afford an automobile can console himself with the thought that a mule doesn't cost as much, and is almost as dangerous.

COMMERCIAL PROVERBS.

The earning power of a dollar depends on the brains of the man back of it.

Feed your mind—the fellow who feeds his body only keeps on shoveling coal.

The greatest combination in the world is ability, ambition and initiative, seasoned with honesty.

A thousand men do a thing so-so and exist on liver to one who does it well and commands his own price.

When a lily stops growing its beauty begins to fade, and when a man quits studying his brain begins to shrivel.

If you want to succeed, either work at the thing in which you are interested or cultivate an interest in the thing at which you work.—Cent Per Cent.

The GIRL from TIM'S PLACE

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

A week of this watchfulness, with no sign of their enemy's return, not even to within the circuit patroled time and again, began to relieve suspense and awaken curiosity. They had been so sure, especially Martin, that he would come back for revenge, that now it was hard to account for his not doing so.

"My idee is he got so skeered at them two shots," Old Cy asserted, "he hain't stopped runnin' yit." And then the old man chuckled at the ludicrous picture of this pernicious "varmint" scampering through a wilderness from fright.

But Old Cy was wrong. It was not fear that saved them from a prompt visitation from this half-breed, but lack of means of defense. The one shot remaining in his rifle at the moment of meeting had been sent on its vengeful errand, all the rest of his ammunition was in his canoe, and now on the bottom of the stream. Being thus crippled for means to act, the only course left to him was a return to his cabin 75 miles away, with only a hunting-knife to sustain life with.

Even to a skilled hunter and trapper like him this was no easy task. It meant at least a week's journey through almost impassable swamps and undergrowth, with frogs, raw fish, roots and berries for food.

How that half-breed, unconscious that the mills of God had ground him the grist he deserved, fought his way through this pathless wilderness; how he ate mice and frogs to sustain his worthless life; how he cursed McGuire as the original cause of his wretched plight and Martin's party as aids; and how many times he swore he would kill every one of them, needs no description.

He lived to reach his hut on the Fox Hole, and from that moment on, this wilderness held an implacable enemy of McGuire's, sworn to kill him, first of all.

CHAPTER X.

For two weeks the little party at Birch Camp first watched and then began to enjoy themselves once more. September had come, the first tint of autumn colored every patch of hardwood, a mellow haze softened the outline of each green-clad hill and mountain, the sun rose red and sailed an unclouded course each day, and gentle breezes rippled the lake. The forest, the sky, the air and earth, all seemed in harmonious mood, and the one discordant note, fear of this half-breed, slowly vanished.

Chip resumed her hour of study each day; a little fishing and hunting was indulged in by Martin and the two officers; wild ducks, partridges, deer and trout supplied their table; each evening all gathered about the open fire in Martin's new cabin, and while the older people chatted, Ray took his banjo or whispered with Chip.

These two, quite unguessed by Angie, had become almost lovers, and as it was understood Chip was to be taken to Greenvale, all that wonder-world to her, had been described by Ray many times. He also outlined many little plans for sleigh rides, skating on the mill pond, and dances which he and she were to enjoy together.

His own future and livelihood were a little hazy to him. These matters do not impress a youth of 18; but of one thing he felt sure,—that Chip with her rosy face and black eyes, always tender to him, was to be his future companion in all pleasures. It was love among the spruce trees, a summer idyl made tender by the dangers interrupting it, and hidden from all eyes except Old Cy's, who was these young friends' favorite.

But these days of mingled romance and tragic happenings, of shooting, fishing, story-telling and wildwood life were nearing their end, and one evening Martin announced that on the morrow they would pack their belongings and, escorted by the officers, leave the wilderness.

The next morning Old Cy took Ray aside.

"I want a good square talk with ye, my boy," he said, "an' I'm goin' to do ye a good turn if I kin. Now to begin, I s'pose ye know yer aunt's goin' to take Chip to Greenvale 'n' gin her a chance at the schoolin' she sartinly needs. Now you're callatin' to go 'long 'n' have a heap o' fun this winter. I'm goin' to stay here 'n' keer for Amzi. This is the situation 'bout as it is. Now you hev got yer eddication, 'n' the next move is to make yer way in the world 'n' arn suthin', an' ez a starter, I want ye to stay here this winter with me 'n' trap. The woods round here is jist bristlin' with spruce gum that is worth a dollar-fifty a pound, easy. We've got two months now, 'fore snow gits deep. We kin live on the top shelf in the way o' fish 'n' game. We'll ketch a b'ar and pickle his meat 'n' smoke his hams, and when spring comes, I'll take ye out with mebbe five hundred dollars' worth of furs 'n' gum ez a beginnin'.

"Thar's also 'nother side to consider. Chip wants schoolin', 'n' she's got to study night 'n' day fer the next eight months. If you go back with 'em, an' go gallivantin' 'round with her, ez you're sure to, it won't be no help to her. I've given you two all the chances fer weavin' the threads o' 'fectshun I could this summer, an' now let's you 'n' I turn to and make some money. I've asked your uncle 'n' aunt. They're willin', 'n' now, what do ye say?"

Few country boys with a love for trappin, such as Ray had, ever had a more alluring prospect spread before them. He knew Old Cy was right in all his conclusions, and almost without hesitation he agreed to the plan.

It was far-sighted wisdom on Old Cy's part, however, in not giving Ray time to reflect, else the magnet of Chip's eyes on the one hand, and eight months of separation on the other, would have proved too strong, and trap-setting and gum-gathering, with $500 as reward, would have failed.

As it was, he came near weakening at the last moment when the canoes were packed and Angie and Chip came to take their seats in them.

He and his crude, rude, yet winsome little sweetheart had suffered a brief preliminary parting the evening previous. A good many sweet and silly nothings had been exchanged, also promises, and now the boy's heart was very sore.

Chip was more stoical. Her life at Tim's Place and contact with Old Tomah had taught her reserve, and yet when she turned for the last possible look at Old Cy and Ray, waving good-by at the landing, a mist of tears hid them.

Old Cy's face was also a study. To him these parting clouds were as the white ones hiding the sun; yet he felt their chill. His own life shadow was lengthening. He had now but a brief renewal of youth in the lives of these two, and then forgetfulness, as he knew full well, and yet he pitied them.

More than that, he had set his hand to guiding the bark of their young lives into the safe harbor of a home, and all feelings of his own subserved to that.

"Come, come, my boy," he said to Ray as the two turned away, and he noted the lad's sad face, "she's gone now, an' ye'd best ferget her fer a spell. Ye won't, I know, 'n' she won't; but ye'd best make believe ye do. This ain't no spot fer love-sick spells. We've got work to do, 'n' money to arn; ye've got the chance o' yer life now, an' me to help ye to it, so brace up 'n' look cheerful.

"Think o' what we got to do to git ready fer winter 'n' six foot o' snow. Think o' the traps we're goin' to set, an' the fun o' tendin' 'em. Why, girls ain't in it a minnit with ketchin' mink, marten, otter, an' now 'n' then a lynx or bobcat. Then when ye go back with a new suit 'n' money in yer pocket, ye'll feel prouder'n a peacock, 'n' Chip a-smilin' at ye sweeter'n new maple syrup."

Verily Old Cy had the wisdom of age and the cheerfulness of morning sunshine.

All that day these wilderness-marooned friends worked hard. An ample stock of birch wood must be cut and split, a shed of poles to cover it must be erected alongside of the cabin, the hermit's log hut was to be divested of its fittings, which were to be removed to the new cabin which all were now to occupy.

Realizing how vital to their existence the canoes were, Old Cy had also planned a shelter of small logs for them on one side of the log cabin, that could be locked. Here the canoes not in use must be stored at once to guard against a night call from the malignant half-breed. His canoe had been taken along by Martin's party, to be left at Tim's Place, for even Hersey would have scorned to appropriate it.

There were dozens of other needs to prepare for during the next two months, all of which were important. An ample supply of deer meat must be secured, to be pickled and smoked. All the partridges they could shoot would be needed, and later, when south-bound ducks halted at the lake, a few of these would add to their larder.

In this connection, also, another need occurred to Old Cy. Trout could be caught all winter in the lake, but live bait must be had, and so a slat ear to be sunk in some swift-running stream, which would hold them, must be constructed, also a scoop of mosquito net to catch them. These minnows were to be found now by the million in every brook, and forethought was Old Cy's watchword.

All these duties and details he discussed that first day with Ray, while they worked, for a purpose.

But the first evening here, with its open fire, yet empty seats, was the hardest to pass. In vain Old Cy enlarged upon the joys of trap-setting once more, and how and where they were to secure gum. In vain he described how deadfalls were built and where they must be placed, how many signs of lynx and wildcat he had seen that summer, and how sure they were to secure some of these valuable furs.

Ray's heart was not here. Far away in some night camp, Chip was thinking of him. He knew each day would bear her farther away. No word of her safe arrival could reach them now. Long months must elapse ere he and she could meet again, and in prospect they seemed an eternity.

"Come, git yer banjo, my boy," Old Cy ejaculated at last, seeing Ray's face grow gloomy. "Tune 'er up, an' play us suthin' lively. None o' them goody-goody weepin' sort o' tunes; but give us 'Money Musk' 'n' a few jigs. I'm feelin' our prospects are so cheerful, I'd like to cut a few pigeon-wings out o' compliment."

But Old Cy's hilarity was nearly all put on. He, too, felt the effect of the empty seats and missed every one that had gone, and Ray's jig tunes lacked their spirit. He essayed a few, and then quite unconsciously his fingers strayed to "My Old Kentucky Home," and Old Cy's feelings responded.

CHAPTER XI.

Chip's arrival in Greenvale produced astonishment and gossip galore. It began when the stage that "Uncle Joe" Barnes had driven for 20 years started for that village. There were other passengers besides Martin, his wife, and Chip. The seats inside were soon filled, and Chip, seeing a coveted chance, climbed nimbly to a position beside the driver.

"Gee Whittaker," observed one bystander to another, as Chip's black-stockinged legs flashed into view, "but that gal's nimbler'n a squirrel 'n' don't mind showin' underpinnin'. I wished I was drivin' that stage. I'll bet she's a circus."

Uncle Joe soon found her a live companion at least, for he had scarce left the village ere she began.

"Your hosses are fatter'n Tim's hosses used to be," she said. "Do ye feed 'em on hay and taters?"

Uncle Joe gave her a sideways glance.

"Hay and taters," he exclaimed; "we don't feed hosses on taters down here. Where'd you come from?"

"I used to live at Tim's Place, up in the woods, 'n' we fed our hosses on taters, 'n' they had backs sharp 'nuff to split ye."

This time Uncle Joe faced squarely around.

"I know all about hosses," she continued glibly. "I used to take keer on 'em 'n' ride one plowin', an' I've been throwed more'n a hundred times when we struck roots, an' ye ought to 'a' heerd Tim cuss. I used to cuss just the same, but Mrs. Frisbie says I musn't."

"Wal, I swow," ejaculated Uncle Joe, realizing that he had a "case." "What's your name, 'n' whar's Tim's Place?"

"My name's Chip, Chip McGuire, only 'tain't, it's Vera; but they allus called me Chip, an' Tim's Place is ever so far up in the woods. I runned away 'cause dad sold me, an' fetched up at Mrs. Frisbie's camp, 'n' she's goin' to eddicate me. My mother got killed when I was a kid, 'n' my dad killed 'nother one, too; he's a bad 'un."

Uncle Joe gasped at this gory tale of double murder, not being quite sure that the girl was sane.

"Hain't they ketched yer dad yit?" he queried.

"No, nor they won't." Chip rattled on, as if such killing were a daily occurrence in the woods. "He's a slick 'un, they say, an' now he's got Pete's money, he'll lay low."

"Worse and worse, and more of it," Uncle Joe thought.

"You must 'a' had middlin' lively times up in the woods," he said. "Did yer dad kill anybody else sides yer mother 'n' this man?"

"He didn't kill mother," Chip returned promptly; "he used to lick her, though, but she got killed in a mill, 'n' I wisht it 'ud bin him. I wouldn't 'a' bin an orfin then. Say," she added, as they entered a woods-bordered stretch of road, "did ye ever see spites here?"

"Spites," he responded, now more than ever in doubt as to her sanity, "what's them?"

"Why, they's just spites—things ye can't see much of 'ceptin' it's dark. Then they come crawlin' round. They's souls o' animals mostly, Old Tomah says. I've seen thousands on 'em."

Uncle Joe shifted his quid, turned and eyed the girl once more. First, a wild and wofully mixed tale of murder, and then spookish things! Beyond question she had wheels, and he resolved to humor her.

WOMEN'S TOURNEY FOR TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP.

Miss Edna Wildey In Good Form in U. S. Tournament.

With the largest entry in the history of the event, the annual lawn tennis tournament for the championship of the United States in women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles began yesterday on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club. Although Miss May Sutton and Miss Elizabeth Moore were absent the list was a representative one, and includes most of the leading players in the east, as well as some from the west. There was especial local interest because Miss Edna Wildey and Miss Mildred Wildey, of the Plainfield Country Club, were among the contestants. They have been playing a very fast game of tennis this season and are constantly looking for new honors.

In the women's singles, first round, played yesterday, Miss Edna Wildey beat Miss Caroline Clothier, Merion C. C., 6-2, 6-0, and Miss Mildred Wildey beat Miss Mary Disston, Philadelphia C. C., 6-4, 6-4. The second round brought the Misses Wildey together and Miss Edna Wildey beat her sister, 6-2, 6-1.

Frightened to Death.

Franklin, Mass., June 26—Frightened so that he died immediately, although he received not a single scratch, Benjamin F. Lord, an advertising agent, having offices in Boston, was the victim of an accident yesterday afternoon when a passenger train struck his automobile. Edward J. and Thomas F. Boyle were in the car at the time, but neither was seriously injured. The chauffeur, W. P. Roust, also escaped physical injury.

MOUSE AMUSES COURT.

Frightens Women During Trial of Sabocher-William Case.

While the Sabocher-Williams trial was on in the Union County Court at Elizabeth, Tuesday, considerable sport was furnished by a tiny mouse that persisted in playing near the witness box, much to the alarm of the witnesses, especially the women.

The little rodent became so much at home that it coolly hopped on one of Judge Swift's shoes and calmly looked up into the Judge's face, until the judge sent it spinning across the floor. This did not daunt the mouse, for in a few minutes it returned and continued playing around the witness box until driven into the clerk's office and killed. All this time the women in the court was greatly excited and it was with difficulty that they were persuaded to keep their seats.

Miss Loving Tells Her Story.

Houston, Va., June 26.—To save her father, on trial here for murdering Theodore Estes, her sweetheart, Miss Elizabeth Loving went on the witness stand yesterday afternoon and with tears streaming from her eyes told the story of the attack on her by Estes to avenge which the latter was slain. It was this Story that caused Judge Loving to track the man she accused and shoot him down. Miss Loving's testimony created a sensation in the court room, amplifying as it did all the accusations that were made at the time of the shooting, but which were denied emphatically by the Estes side. Backing up the stories of her father and Harry Snead, his brother in law, on the stand today, the friends of Judge Loving were confident tonight that the girl's ordeal would result in bringing her father out of the clutches of the law and restore him to his family.

State Senate's Probe.

Following a conference of Republican Senators to which Senator Colby was not invited and at which it was decided to name a Senate investigating committee, the Senate convened at Trenton, yesterday, heard read the attorney-general's opinion upholding its right to do business, received a resolution to name a Senate probing committee, and received a number of bills, including a public utility bill by Senator Colby, a resolution by Senator Hillery for the preparation of a rival public utility measure and bills by Hillery embodying the Governor's suggestions as contained in his message.

Kill Three Moonshiners.

Asheville, N. C., June 26.—Three moonshiners killed, twenty-three captured and a dozen or more illicit distilleries destroyed is reported by an Asheville raiding party of revenue officers, headed by J. Will Roberts, at Piedmont, N. C., a highly notorious section of the mountains. Roberts' raiding party consisted of thirty or forty men heavily armed with Winchesters. The moonshiners gave fight and fired upon the revenue officers from ambush. Hundreds of shots were exchanged. Several thousand gallons of whiskey were seized by the revenue officers.

Stevens for Judgeship.

Governor Stokes said yesterday that the appointment of a Supreme Court Justice to succeed the late Abram Q. Garretson would not be made immediately, as he is not yet prepared to name his successor. Although the Governor seems to have reached no conclusion as to whom he will name, the person most prominently spoken of today seems to be Vice-Chancellor Frederic W. Stevens, of Newark.

Architectural Marvels of Middle Ages Showing Signs of Decay.

Almost every day, now, the foreign dispatches report the partial fall or the dangerous weakening of one of the famous buildings of Europe. Today it is the Vatican that is beginning to crumble, yesterday it was the Alhambra, and a dozen such announcements can be remembered before one gets back even to the recent day when the great tower in Venice came down with a crash which reechoed throughout the whole civilized world because all of that world knew about the tower.

There is really some excuse for fearing that the architectural marvels of the middle ages are nearing the limit of their endurance, and that, unless they are subjected to repairs and restorations which not many of them are likely to receive, the time will soon come when people will have to do without these visible reminders of the part of the past which forms so large a part of our history and literature. This will be a loss, indeed, and yet the restorer and the repairer are almost as much to be feared as ruthless time, and one does not call them in too eagerly, even when somebody else must pay their bills.—N. Y. Times.

AGAINST THE MIDDLE.

Why Bill Cut Out Liver and Bacon When His Luck Turned.

When Bill, the ranchman, came from Denver to New York to play the races he put up at one of the most expensive hotels in the city and took one of the most expensive rooms. Then he went broke. The proprietor of the hotel and the clerk held a private consultation.

"We will let him stay here," they decided, "but from now on we will feed him liver and bacon until he pays his bill. Nothing does he get in this house from now on but liver and bacon.

They fed Bill liver and bacon for breakfast, dinner and supper for about three weeks, then his luck turned. He forthwith walked out to a strange cafe to get something to eat. He looked over the bill of fare.

"What's this in the middle?" he asked. "Liver and bacon?"

"Yes, sir,' the waiter answered.

"Give me everything on the bill of fare both ways from liver and bacon," ordered Bill.

Pious Hope.

Forty years ago the wickedest person in Allen county, Ohio, was Old Man Ellison, a well-to-do farmer. Not until he approached three-score and ten did he mellow down, and then but a little. Once when attending a raising he soliloquized thus on his own decadence:

"The ole man's been putty tuff, boys. He's rassled with some mighty hard cases, the old man has. But it's about over. The ole devil is after him hard an' fas', the ole devil is, an' by 'n' by he'll get him. But he won't keep him long, the ole devil won't. By 'n' by he'll be glad to fetch the ole man back."

"Well,' spoke up Bill Petit, his fiercest foe, "all I hope is when he does he'll forget where he found you."—N. Y. World.

Jealousy.

"Talking about Creole jealousy," said the observant man, "I saw a specimen of Chicago jealousy the other night that had it beaten to a frazzle. A handsome fellow was at dinner with two girls, when a young woman came in, caught a corner of the tablecloth, and yanked the whole tableful of dishes and dinner off onto the floor, then walked out of the room.

"What did the man do? Followed her and made friends with her again. She was his fiancee. He gave her a $400 diamond ring afterward, they said. If she had been his wife he would in all probability have beaten her instead of giving her a present."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Impetuosity.

In spite of generations of reckless combative Irish gentlemen, it is odd that we have still to go to American literature for the classical instances of impetuosity with firearms. This is a reproach to Irish authors, which should touch them closely. Irish gentlemen were killing and wounding each other on sight almost for centuries before America was heard of, and yet it was left for Bret Harte and Mark Twain and John Hay to fix in the far west the type of fire-eater who carried his honor in his belt.—T. P.'s Weekly.

In a French Restaurant.

There is a certain restaurant in town of quite ambitious pretensions, but not always successful realizations. In fact, it may be described as French on a Hibernian footing. Two people who dined there the other evening were finishing their dessert when the waiter approached. With napkin in one hand and tray poised on the other, he inquired in his best Gaelic accents:

"And will yez both have dimmytassys?"

Not Worth the Effort.

"Look out!" exclaimed the man who had seen another bravely rescued from the water. "Handle that fellow carefully or he might revive."

"Brute!" ejaculated the rescuers.

"Brute, nothing," rejoined the first speaker; "I saw him rocking the boat."

Sommer, Colby's Candidate.

Sheriff Frank H. Sommer will be the "new idea" candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. This announcement was made by Senator Everett Colby yesterday in an interview in which the Essex Senator declared Sommer to be his choice for the office. While making it plainly understood that he spoke only for himself, Colby said he believed Sommer would receive the indirsement and support in the primaries of the whole "new idea" movement. Mr. Sommer later made a statement in which he says that he will accept the nomination if it comes to him.

ATTACKING BISHOPS' LAW

Court of Errors Listen to Argument on the Measure's Screen Clause.

LINDABURY ARGUMENT

For Saloonkeepers He Argues That the Act Violates Both State and Federal Constitutions.

Almost the entire session of the Court of Errors and Appeals at Trenton yesterday was confined to argument on a writ of error to determine the constitutionality of section 4 of the Bishops act. The suit was taken to the highest court in the State by Hugh Meehan, a Jersey City saloon-keeper, against the Board of Excise Commissioners of Jersey City. A writ of certiorari had been issued out of the Supreme Court to review the action of the Jersey City Excise Board in passing a resolution providing that the interior of the bar or business room, in which liquor and other intoxicating drinks are served and sold under any license granted by the board, shall, during such time as such sales are prohibited by law, be open to full view from the public street. The resolution contained a clause excepting such places as are exempt from the operation of the resolution under the provisions of the State law.

When the case was argued in the Supreme Court it was held that the Jersey City Excise Board had a perfect right to issue such an order and Meehan appealed.

In stating his reasons for asserting that the clause in question is unconstitutional, Richard V. Lindabury, who represented Meehan, declared that it conflicts with the provision of the State Constitution prohibiting the Legislature from passing private local or special laws regulating the internal affairs of municipalities. He further contended that the act is invalid because it conflicts with the provisions of the State Constitution prohibiting the Legislature from passing private, local or special laws, granting to any corporation, association or individual any exclusive privilege or franchise whatsoever. Mr. Lindabury asserted that the act denies to all persons within the jurisdiction of the State the equal protection of its laws and, therefore, conflicts with the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution.

At the time the Jersey City Excise Board adopted its resolution Mr. Meehan was conducting a retail liquor business at 23 Washington street, Jersey City. He maintained a barroom and restaurant, and there were wooden and glass screens in the show windows on the store floor and nontransparent glass in the doors leading from the bar to the street. Since the adoption of the resolution the police authorities of Jersey City have notified Meehan and others holding similar licenses that the interiors of their bars must be kept open in full view from the public street at all times when the sale of liquor is prohibited by law.

These notifications, however, did not apply to or affect any place licensed as an inn or tavern or a hotel having at least ten spare rooms for the accommodation of boarders or travelers, or a restaurant where the business of furnishing meals to the public was regularly carried on, and which restaurant is conducted on more than one floor or story of the building, or a picnic ground or a recreation ground or a building with a bowling alley or a building entirely occupied by a regularly organized club or association.

Mr. Lindabury held that the Bishops act, in regulating the sale of liquor on the basis of a number of rooms a dealer might have in his house, was clearly special legislation, and therefore unconstitutional. "How can it be said,' said Mr. Lindabury, "that it is lawful to require the plaintiff in error to take down and abandon the usual fixtures in his place of business, which are of an elaborate and permanent character, while another liquor dealer, whose place may be next door to his, is permitted to retain and use the same kind of fixtures simply because he has a bowling alley attached to his saloon? How can a classification be other than arbitrary and unreasonable which requires him at all times not only to keep the interior view of his place entirely unobstructed, but, at the dictation of the licensing authorities, to also have the entire view from the street unobstructed, because his restaurant is conducted on only one floor or there is no bowling alley attached to it, while his competitor can sub-divide his place of business as he will and always prevent any view whatever being had from the street simply because in his restaurant meals are served on more than one floor or because there is a bowling alley attached?"

In discussing the reasons for the Bishops act Mr. Lindabury said:

BOARD OF EDUCATION BUYS CHURCH PROPERTY

PAYS $7,000 FOR WHITTIER SCHOOL BUILDING ON MADISON AVENUE.

After occupying as leased property the old Seventh-day Baptist church at Madison avenue and West Fifth street, for ten years, the Board of Education has just purchased the property and will take possession July 1. This building has been used for the Whittier school and is particularly well adapted for the purpose. It is in an excellent state of preservation and just answers the purpose. The consideration paid by the board for the property is $7,000. The deed will be passed in a few days.

For the purpose of changing the ecclesiastical appearance of the structure, and making it look more like a school, the cupola is being taken down and square windows are replacing the round ones which have been used for so many years. The Board of Education believing that the purchase of the property would be a good investment, especially as it was possible to secure it at such a low figure, it would be preferable to paying a yearly rental. Now that the city owns the property no doubt other changes will be made before the fall term opens to meet the present requirements.

FAIR ACRES CLUB ARRANGES A MEET

FREE RACES AT DRIVING PARK ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

The matinee races held at the Plainfield Driving Park last Saturday under the auspices of the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club, were such a success that the club has planned to hold another meet Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The public is invited to attend, admission being free. A strong list of entries has been secured for Saturday afternoon and those who enjoy good trotting should not fail to go to the track. There will be one race for pacers, four for trotters and one mixed race.

Elaborate arrangements are being made for the money races to be held at the park on the afternoon of July 4. There will be a fine card of horses in trotting, pacing and running races and the club has arranged to run stages direct to the track.

The entries for Saturday afternoon are as follows:

Class A—Pacers: "Roan View," George Conover; "Prince," C. C. Brower; "Albert L.," John Barbour.

Bulletins Drew Crowd.

The sidewalk in front of The Daily Press office seemed to be the most popular spot in the city last night. From early in the evening until the final report on the intercollegiate boat races came in after dark, there was always a large group of interested men before the bulletin board waiting for the wired reports. The result of the race was posted as soon as the news was flashed from the scene of the race.

Bar to Pulpit.

"From the Bar to the Pulpit" will be the subject of an interesting talk to be given at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon by John Callahan. Mr. Callahan is the successor of the late S. H. Hadley as superintendent of the Wesley Mission on the Bowery. Special music will be sung.

Hammer Mashed His Finger.

Driving a nail in a packing box in the cellar of his home on West Third street, Charles Marks, a Russian gardener, struck his left forefinger with the hammer. The blow broke a small bone and smashed the finger severely. The injury was attended to by Dr. Brennan.

At Class Reunion.

Charles Hamilton Frost and Howard Huntington have returned from New Haven, where they attended the reunion of their class of 1892. Owing to a pressure of duties City Judge William N. Runyon was unable to attend.

DELAY PERMANENT PAVE

Generally Believed That Common Council Will Take No Definite Action This Year.

CITY FATHERS DIVIDED

Some Want Brick While Others Do Not—North Avenue Considered In Good Shape Now.

Notwithstanding the progress of the ordinance which provides for the laying of a brick pavement in the business part of the city and which will be called up on third hearing at the meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, July 1, there is an opinion that nothing will be done with the matter this year. Provided the ordinance were adopted after the public hearing, it would require at least another month to secure bids for the work and award the contract. This would bring it up to the middle of August at the earliest and would leave but little time to complete the job this year.

This opinion is not expressed alone by outsiders, but there are members of the Common Council who feel the same way, in fact, one of the councilmen said this week that he doubted whether the pavement would be attempted this year, and it is rumored that the majority of the other members are of the same opinion.

While at first there seemed to be a unanimity of opinion that brick is the best, there is a difference in views on the subject and it is this that will probably defeat the plan to lay brick exclusively. There are other pavements that are looked upon with favor and while it may not be possible to adopt other kinds, it is believed that there will be sufficient votes in the Council to knock out the proposition to use brick.

There are some of the members who favor a trial of the Hassam concrete pavement and when considered it will be seen that it has some advantages over other pavements and it is said that it can be laid for less money than brick. While there was considerable opposition at first to leaving North avenue out of the ordinance, this has subsided in a measure and a majority of the citizens seem to think that the avenue is good enough as it is at present. No one appears to doubt, however, but that a permanent pavement should be laid in the business section along the line of the trolley, where the traffic is the heaviest.

SHOWER ENDED FESTIVAL.

But Warren Chapel Societies Will Carry Out Program Tonight.

Warren chapel's strawberry festival, planned for last night by the Christian Endeavor and Missionary and Aid Societies, was abruptly terminted by the heavy shower which came up shortly after 8 o'clock. The affair was being held on the grounds about the chapel and had just gotten started nicely when the downpour sent everybody scurrying to shelter. Decorations were spoiled in a few minutes and the fatithful committee members who sought to save them received a thorough drenching for their efforts.

Despite the undoing of all their work, the two societies were on the scene early today and arranged everything anew to have the festival tonight. Fresh berries and cream have been provided and the original program will be carried out. The proceeds from the affair will be added to the furnishing fund of the new chapel.

A Home Wedding.

Frank F. Depke, formerly of Danville, Ill., and Miss Bessie Emma Magues were quietly married at the home of the bride on West Fourth street, last night. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, and was witnessed by a small gathering of relatives and friends. The couple was attended by George Fleury, a close friend of the groom, and Miss Anna L. Martin, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Magues will reside on West Fourth street for the present but later in the year will make their home in Danville.

Bishop Law Indictments.

The batch of indictments handed in by the Grand Jury yesterday numbered 105, making a total of 170 found during the session. No less than ninety-nine of the bills were for violations of the screen section of the Bishops' law. All the alleged violations are charged against Elizabeth places.

A Spring Tea.

TWO NEGROES ON TRIAL

The Cases Against Payne and Johnson Taking Up Time of Union County Court.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

The case of the State against Thaddeus Payne, the negro who shot Lee Johnson, also colored, on March 9, in a poolroom on East Front street, and that of the State against Lee Johnson, were called in the Union County Court this morning. Payne was indicted on two charges, one of atrocious assault and one for carrying a concealed weapon, while Johnson was also indicted on a charge of assault and battery. S. S. Swackhamer represents Payne and W. S. Angleman is defending Johnson. The cases will probably not be finished until late this afternoon.

Self-defense is the plea that Payne offers. He came north from his hiding place in the south to surrender himself after the police had given up hope of finding him. He declares that Johnson knocked him down and that he shot in self-defense. He said that being confident of substantiating this plea he surrendered himself. He alleges that Johnson kicked and struck him until he bled.

Owing to a previous good record, at the time of the shooting the police asserted that it was hard to believe that Payne shot without some excuse. It was at first reported that Payne shot Johnson for no other reason than that Johnson had refused to pay a borrowed quarter. Johnson was taken to the hospital, where for days his life was despaired of. He finally recovered and was able to leave the hospital. Soon afterward Payne returned to Plainfield and gave himself up.

Payn was formerly employed at A. M. Griffen's hardware store, bore a good reputation with his employe and others with whom he was associated.

WEDDED AT ST. MARY'S.

Afternoon Ceremony Unites Frances Burke and William Hartfelder.

Miss Frances Burke, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Burke, of West Front street, and William Hartfelder, son of George Hartfelder, of Whitewood avenue, the borough, were married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at St. Mary's church. Father Bogan, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss B. V. McCue, while Joseph Robinson was the best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, there being guests present from New York, Newark, New Brunswick, Westfield and this city. The groom is employed by his father, the stairbuilder, and was popular as a catcher for Hope Y. M. A., during the days of the old city amateur league. The couple will reside with the bride's mother.

Gaming Debts and Board Bills.

Stirred by the prevalence of gaming among her patrons, the landlady of a rather recherche boarding house on Fifth street has posted a sign in the lower hall reading as follows: "Card Playing for Money Forbidden in this House." There is a group of young men among the boarders who indulged in nightly poker and bridge whist games, and some one or another of them was always "strapped." It is said that the boarding house mistress was moved to stop the games because two or three of the young men, finding it impossible to meet both gambling debts and board bills, ignored the latter in order to liquidate the "gentlemen's" debts.

Liquor Cases Off for the Term.

In the Union County Court at Elizabeth, today, the motion of the assistant prosecutor that two of the illegal liquor selling cases to be tried, be put off for the term, was granted and it is the opinion of those interested that all of these cases in which an indictment was returned, will likewise go off for the term for the reason that there is not now sufficient evidence at hand to secure a conviction.

Enlarging Her Property.

Mrs. Lawrence Myers, of "Sunnyside," East Front street, has purchased the valuable property adjoining her own on the south, belonging to the estate of the late Josepn Myers, her brother-in-law, and the two properties will be thrown into one.

—Neuman Brothers have the largest and best assortment of fresh vegetables to be found in the city. Consignments are received fresh each day, selected especially for the local trade.

ACTION ON CLUB SELLING

Grand Jury Instructs Prosecutor to Hold Organizations to the Law.

INDICTMENTS TOTAL 170

Another Big Batch Handed In Yesterday—Ninety-Nine For Screen Violations of the Bishops' Law.

The Grand Jury took the first step, yesterday, to do away with the sale of liquor illegally by clubs and other social organizations in Union county. Exercising its prerogative, it directed Prosecutor N. C. J. English to notify all licensed clubs, and such unlicensed clubs as might be suspected of breaking the statute, of the law, in the following resolution:

Whereas, The attention of this Grand Inquest has been drawn to the fact that certain social clubs and voluntary associations throughout the County of Union are now and have been engaged in the practice of selling or distributing malt and spirituous liquors to the members of said clubs or associations, without first having obtained a license so to do, as required by the statute, while certain other clubs or associations, although licensed in accordance with statutory requirements, are engaged in the practice of selling or distributing such malt and spirituous liquors to their members on Sundays and election days and

Whereas, Justice Swayze has charged this Grand Inquest that all such sales and distributions of malt and spirituous liquors are illegal and contrary to law, and the offenders liable to indictment:

Now therefore be it resolved by this Grand Inquest, that the Prosecutor of the Pleas of Union County be directed forthwith to notify in writing all clubs or voluntary associations in Union county, now holding license to sell or distribute malt and spirituous liquors to their members, that such sales or distributions of liquors must not henceforth be made on Sundays or election days under penalty of prosecution for a violation of such provision:

And be it further resolved that the said Prosecutor forthwith notify in writing all incorporated clubs and also notify all associations in Union county which have no such license as above mentioned and which he may be informed are violating the law, that all sales or distributions of malt or spirituous liquors made by said clubs or associations to their members are illegal and contrary to law at all times, and will render such offenders liable to prosecution; and be it further

Resolved, that the said Prosecutor be directed to have the said charge of His Honor, Justice Swayze, to this Grand Inquest printed and a copy enclosed with each notice hereinabove provided for.

The jury ended its session last evening, at 6 o'clock, when it returned another big batch of indictments to Justice Swayze. The justice thanked them for their services, which he said had been well performed. Acting on the jurors' suggestion in their presentment of last week, he adjourned them to such day as the court or the foreman might deem it advisable to call them together. It is expected the jury will meet shortly to hear reports from Prosecutor English as to liquor violations.

Among the indictments, the grand total of which now is 170, were ones charging Edna Rash, the Roselle negress, and Charles Ferdio, with murder. They both pleaded not guilty, and will be arraigned for trial the week beginning July 15. The justice said he would appoint Foster M. Voorhees to defend the negress, if Mr. Voorhees was willing. The girl's case will be based on self-defense.

Will Celebrate Independence Day.

The Washington Camp Ground Association, of Bound Brook, has issued invitations to an Independence Day celebration to be held on the camp ground, Bound Brook, Fourth of July at 10.30 o'clock in the morning. The parade will be reviewed from the Middlebrook Country Clubhouse at 9 oclock. C. C. Rawlings is president of the association, and E. A. Lloyd the secretary. The reception committee comprises the following: George LaMonte, Revs. R. J. Thomson, A. S. Pilelps, C. J. Culp, P. C. Bascom, W. F. Dittrich, Henry Stout and W. H. Whiting, W. W. Smalley, Milton Knapp and John Olendorf.

Passed Organist Examination.

Mrs. C. F. Odell, of Tarrytown, N. Y., who was formerly organist at the Church of the Holy Cross, recently passed successfully the American Guild of Organist Examination and has in consequence received the Associate degree of the Guild. The examiners for the occasion were Samuel P. Warren and Horatio Parker, of Yale University.

SCHOOL BOARD HASN'T BOUGHT ANOTHER LOT

SECRETARY WOODHULL DENIES REPORT ABOUT NEW BUILDING.

A report current in certain quarters, that the Board of Education had purchased a lot on West Front which the Irving School draws its attendance, was flatly denied by Secretary Floyd T. Woodhull, of the Board, this morning. He said there was no foundation for the report.

"I have heard no hint of such action or contemplated action on the part of the Board," he said, "and I rather thing I would know if the Board had considered it."

As a matter of fact, the Board would not be likely to have the money for such purchase. Arrangements have just been completed for the erection of a school at Darraw avenue and Fourth street, to take the place of the Washington school, and the expenditures on that will use pretty much all the money available for such purposes. Moreover, the new school has been so designed as to meet all requirements for room for several years. It was announced at the time the plans were made public, that the Darrow avenue building, in conjunction with the Irving school, would be ample to care for all the pupilsof the West End for a number of years. Under such conditions, the necessity for immediate preparation for another new school is not apparent.

MAN LOST 4 YEARS, HIS MEMORY A BLANK

Charles P. Brewin Believes That He is "Frank J. Johnson" and Remembers Not His Kin.

A DUAL PERSONALITY

Strange Case of Burlington Man Who Lives Here—A Man That Was.

Persistently denying that he is Charles P. Brewin but still admitting that he cannot remember much about himself previous to four years ago, "Frank G. Johnson," the much-sought Burlington man who disappeared in 1903, was positively located in this city today. He was found in the cleaning and dyeing establishment conducted by Miss Mary Brown on West Second street, to whom he came three years ago seeking employment. He was given a place at repairing and pressing garments and since then has worked faithfully every day, blissfully ignorant of the fact that family and friends were seeking him.

The clue that led to Brewin, or "Johnson" as he insists that he should be called, being found by a Daily Press reporter was furnished by Rev. Dr. Buchanan, father of J. Hervey Buchanan, who formerly lived in South Jersey. He is visiting in this city at the present time and while on the street yesterday, saw the man he knew at Burlington as Charles P. Brewin. His salutation of "How do you do, Mr. Brewin," was met by a blank stare and further questioning failed to gain the slightest recognition from him. He insisted that his name was Johnson and that he never lived in Burlington or knew anyone from that place.

Dr. Buchanan was positive in his identification, however, as was Alfred Woolman, the trolley car conductor who saw him Monday and made an unsuccessful attempt to talk to him, and the clergyman took the trouble to find out where he has been staying.

"Why, I knew him well and have been acquainted with his work in the Baptist church at Burlington," said the doctor to a Daily Press reporter today: "I also know his pastor and many of his friends and there is no doubt in my mind but what he is the man who has been sought after these four years."

Johnson was busily engaged at Miss Brown's establishment when inquiry was made for him this noon and he immediately looked around at the mention of the name Johnson.

"That's my name," said he looking around briskly, "who wants me?"

He was asked if he was not Charles P. Brewin who left his home in Burlington four years ago and who has since been mourned as dead, but he readily answered in the negative. When the reporter asked him where he lived before he came to Plainfield, he replied, "New York."

"Were you born there?"

"Why yes, I think so, wasn't I?" and he cast an appealing glance at Miss Brown, who stood nearby. She told him "of course he was" and a smile lighted up his face.

"It's funny about this Brewin business," he remarked, "somebody asked me the same question a few days ago but I don't remember who it was. Maybe somebody has left me some money." And then he reached for his coat to go home to dinner.

In response to questions, Miss Brown said that "Johnson" had worked for several New York tailoring firms before he came to Plainfield and that his presence in this city was brought about by answering an advertisement inserted by another local cleaner. He was not accepted when responding to it in person and decided to visit other places before going back to New York. He visited Miss Brown's establishment and was put to work.

"He told me that he had trouble with his head," said Miss Brown, "and that he had been in a hospital but he could never remember the name. He has frequently had pain in his ears and at my suggestion has been to the Plainfield hospital but he seems to get no relief. Two men who purported to be his brother and son came here Monday and spoke to him but he did not recognize them and denied that he had any relatives. Since then he has forgotten the oc-

MODES FOR THE MAN.

Linen and madras cloth are considered the best weaves for shirts and come in dainty colorings. Printed stuffs are also worn and both colors and white stuffs, stripes and corded effects will be seen. Plaited bosoms are good, even with cross stripes. Chambray in all bright colors, frequently broken by silken stripes, are bound to be popular.

The turnover colors are made with wide points and in fact the width of all colors has increased considerably. The stitching will not be noticeable on the proper thing in collars and the plain, indistinct stitching will be the favorite. This style will be a boon for the fat men.

The four-in-hand is something to which the American business man clings, and fashion dictators have kindly decreed that it shall not be taken away from him. Those ties have dwindled down a little, to be sure—they are at least an inch narrower, but they are still-four-in-hands, and much striped. Sometimes the stripes are bias and of remarkable shades, black, white and purple, pale blue, apple and dark reen, amber, crimson, and yellow, magenta, black and copper and other equally startling combinations that hardly sound so subdued as the general trend of style would indicate.

FRESH AIR AND SLEEP.

Sleeping with the window open at night is the best safeguard against the feeling of fatigue that many complain about. Unless a current of fresh air is allowed to circulate in the sleeping apartment the air becomes stale and stagnant, the sleeper breathing his own breath, laden with slow but none the less deadly poisons, over and over again. The atmosphere is often further contaminated by the escape of coal gas, which, even though slight, is none the less injurious when inhaled for eight or nine hours every night. When gas has been burned in the room several hours before the occupant goes to bed, unless the ventilation has been good, the products of imperfect combustion of coal gas are present in the air and must be inhaled by the sleeper, to the great detriment of health. It is still a very common practise to heat rooms, and especially bedrooms, by turning on all the gas pets to the full and closing every aperture that might admit a little fresh air. An apartment treated in such a manner is no longer fit to be used as a bedroom, but it makes an excellent lethal chamber for those who contemplate a deisurely suicide.

WHEN A MAN'S FORTY.

The man of forty, from the point of view of health, is usually the victim of the infernal trinity—ignorance, carelessness and self-indulgence.

He owes to these his gross overfeeding, his silly habit of inhaling tobacco smoke, his overstrained eyes.

But at forty much may be done to secure long life if the will be there.

In food, do not diet. If anything disagrees eat less of it rather than cut it off.

Try to be able to eat and drink anything, but in practise exercise a strict moderation.

All injurious habits, all use of alcohol, all overstrain of body and mind should be resolutely broken off.

Get the body, by degrees, into the best physical condition, but never make the process an absorbing pursuit.

Get within four or five pounds either way of your correct weight for your height.

SILVER WEDDINGS.

They Had Their Origin In the Reign of Hugues Capet.

The fashion of silver weddings dates back to the rign of Hughes Capet, king of France in 987.

Once as Hugues was arranging his uncle's affairs he found on one of the estates a servant who had grown gray in the service of his delative. He had been such a friend of his master that he was almost looked upon as one of the family.

On the farm with this old man was also a serving woman who was as old as he and also unmarried and who had been the most devoted and hardworking of the women servants of the king's uncle. When the king heard these praises of the two, he ordered them to be brought before him and said to the woman:

"Your service is great, greater than this man's, whose services were great enough, for the woman always finds work and obedience harder than a man, and therefore I will give you a reward. At your age I know of none better than a dowry and a husband. The dowry is here—this farm from this time forth belongs to you. If this man who has worked with you five and twenty years is willing to marry you, then the husband is ready."

"Your majesty," stuttered the old peasant confusedly, "how is it possible that we should marry, having already silver hairs?"

"Then it shall be a silver wedding," answered the king, "and here I give you a wedding ring," drawing a costly ring from his finger and placing the hands of the thankful old people together.

This soon became known all over France and raised such enthusiasm that it became a fashion after a twenty-five years' marriage to celebrate a silver wedding.

INDIGESTION.

Persons suffering from indigestion or malnutrition who are compelled to do hard mental work during the morning hours find it very trying to have the blood centering around the stomach when it is needed in the brain. If they would only take a light, very easily digested meal they would find that the stomach now and then needs a vacation. Entire abstinence from food is not to be insisted upon unless in cases of special feeding, but let the foods which are taken be light, slightly nutritious and easily digested—as a little fruit with a small bowl of well-cooked cereal, and perhaps four or five tablespoonfuls of cream, eaten slowly. An easily digested breakfast would consist of half a pint of hot milk, sipped slowly, or two-thirds of a cup of milk with one-third coffee (for those who do not like milk), or a cup of hot water, or two soft-boiled eggs and a piece of toast, or a cup of well-made cocoa, or chocolate and toast after the dish of fruit, omitting the cereal; or, in cold weather, a bit of broiled bacon with an egg and brown bread. Coffee taken with a cereal is very apt to produce fermentation, and the result is sour stomach. This, frequently repeated, creates serious results. People who cannot take a cereal will find meat and fruits less liable to disagree with them than meat and starchy foods.

New Methods.

The first morning the new teacher had charge of the village school, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, he taught a class in mental arithmetic, and gave the following example:

"If I had seven oranges and eleven more are given me, then I give five of them to a friend, how many oranges have I left?"

He could not understand the puzzled expression of the children's faces or why he received no answer; but, thinking they must be rather dull, he repeated the question. After a little silence a small hand was raised.

"Well, little boy, how many are left?"

"Please, sir," timidly replied the boy, "we always do our sums with apples."

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murray, Sr., of Central avenue, are at Wolfboro, N. H., for the summer.

GOLF.

Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, of the Plainfield Country Club, finished fifth with a score of 104, 3—101, in the handicap tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, at Baltusrol, on Tuesday, and in the aggregate handicap event in the afternoon she and Miss Hurlbut, returned a score of 202, 6—196.

Events scheduled at the Plainfield Country Club for Fourth of July will include play for the Independence Day cups, morning or afternoon; club championship, qualifying round, 1 p. m., first round Consolation cup, first round. Third Eight cup, first round.

The Park Golf Club has planned an attractive program for Fourth of July. There will be play for the Holiday cup, members' bogey handicap, eighteen holes, match play; to be competed for morning and afternoon; competitors who turn in their scores for eighteen holes before 2 o'clock will be allowed to play again for the trophy in the afternoon. There will also be an approaching and putting contest—mixed couples, open to members and their guests; to start at 4 o'clock in the afternoon; suitable prizes for the winning couple.

The events at the Westfield Golf Club on the Fourth of July will be a bogie handicap in the morning for men, 18 holes, both classes with a prize to the winner and a handicap medal play for mixed foursomes in the afternoon, prizes to the winners.

Miss E. S. Porter, of Boston, was an invited guest at the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association tournament at Baltusrol, Tuesday, but she could not finish any better than fourth, with a net score of 100.

Plans are underway for the social festivities at the Plainfield Country Club on the Fourth of July. There will be music in the afternoon and a dance in the evening.

The social features each Saturday at the Park Golf Club are proving a delightful thing to the many members to accept the opportunity to participate. Every Saturday afternoon tea is served and it is now quite the thing to give lunches and dinner parties.

As yet no dates have been announced for team matches between the Park Golf Club and the New Brunswick Golf Club as proposed earlier in the season by the New Brunswick Club. These matches tend to increase interest in golf and rivalry among players. Two seasons ago the Park Golf Club engaged in matches with Westfield and other nearby towns and the results were very satisfactory.

DIAMOND DUST.

In not securing "Teddy" Overton, one of the amateur league teams has misssed an opportunity to be regretted by all fans. Last season he put up a fast game behind the rubber and at the bat. Besides, he is a crack-a-jack fielder.

George Dupee will make his first appearance here this season on Crescent Oval, Saturday, pitching for Y. M. C. A. against Scotch Plains. The Plains team is coming to Plainfield full of ginger and determined to win, but the association boys will be prepared to give them a warm reception.

Ralph and William Schoonmaker, of the Y. M. C. A. team, are both playing a fast game in the field and at the bat.

Every member of the Clinton Avenue team is in first class condition and the boys will make a strong bid for the pennant in the amateur league. Randolph is pitching steady ball, of the winning variety and in fact every player is "on the job to win." The nine will go against Dunellen at Dunellen on Saturday, and while they do not anticipate a hard time, it may be that Manager Penney's boys may give them a surprise.

Manager Penney, of the Dunellen team, believes that his aggregation will yet make it interesting for the other nines in the amateur league. He depends a great deal on Jack Peacock to hold down opposing teams, while he is looking for a big improvement in the fielding of his boys.

Boston shuts out the Giants by a score of 5 to 0. This announcement is enough to send the cold chills up and down the spine of the most ardent fan. McGraw's pets seem to be sliding down the ladder at a remarkably fast pace.

The fans are keeping their weather eye on the Brooklyns these days. The Trolley Dodgers are certainly putting up the real article of ball when they can administer three straight defeats to the Philadelphias.

Grant, the Phillies new third baseman, is attracting the attention of the fans. He is exceptionally fast in the field and thus far he has proved to be very handy with the stick, securing at least one hit in every game. Grant played in Jersey City last year.

News From Home

While you are away for the summer

THE DAILY PRESS

will be mailed regularly to your address on request without extra charge. Leave your order with your newsdealer or at the main office of The Daily Press.

Plainfield, N. J., June 27, 1907.

Sommer is an appropriate name for the latest candidate for the Governorship.

An exchange very properly remarks: "Anyone wanting to know how efficient a fair, uninfluenced Grand Jury can be has but to study the May Grand Jury in Union county, of which Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, is foreman."

Referring to the presentment made by the Grand Jury as to alleged existing evils in Elizabeth, the Evening Times, of that city, says incidently:

"The people of Elizabeth look to Council, nor can Council procrastinate or evade the issue thus thrust upon it. The next session of that body should witness the passage of a dignified, clearly-worded, straightforwarded resolution which the Grand Jury must either heed or, ignoring it, admit the wrongfulness of its extraordinary charges, at least insofar as the local aldermanic body is concerned."

Will the Times please explain what the Grand Jury has to do with its Council, or vice versa? The deduction it made is absurd on its face.

Boroughites are wondering what has become of the commission entrusted to ascertain the most practical method of sewerage. It has been a long time since that body presented a preliminary report and much disappointment is expressed over its failure to complete the work. As the situation is today, the borough is not a whit better off than it was years ago when the necessity of sanitary sewage disposal was first deemed to be imperative. All that has been brought out is that one of two systems should be chosen. What the taxpayers want is an early report of just what scheme is considered the best, due consideration being given the prospect of a merger of the municipality with the city of Plainfield. At the next meeting of the North Plainfield Council some definite report should be forthcoming from the commission.

That the Grand Jury aimed simply and solely at an alleged pernicious evil when it drew the court's attention to excise conditions is generally admitted notwithstanding the somewhat biased opinions of a few persons here and there who are criticizing the presentment for apparently selfish purposes. The effort to show that the grand jury has cast reflection on the court does not appear to be borne out when the report is carefully perused. Such is the case also regarding the present petit jury. How anyone can believe that reflection is made on that body is indeed hard to discern. What the Grand Jury did aim at is an alleged "system." Whether such a thing exists is for the proper authorities to ascertain. The subject is a most serious one and vital to the future welfare of not only Elizabeth and other parts of Union county but the whole State. If such an evil does in fact exist, and the high calibre of the Grand Jury should be heeded in this connection, no time should be lost in stamping out the evil as well as punishing any guilty parties.

PLAN A MONORAIL LINE TO NEWARK

FINANCIERS EXPECT TO CONSTRUCT HIGH SPEED ROAD WITH A LOW FARE.

Announcement was made yesterday of the formation of a traction company which will build a monorail capable of very high speed between Newark and New York. Among those interested in the company, it was announced, are John H. Starin, Charles Stewart Smith and Woodbury Langdon, members of the Rapid Transit Commission. It is the ultimate object to have direct communication from Newark to New York, either through the McAdoo tunnels or by special ferry service.

The plans allow for a four track elevated monorail road running trains between Newark and Jersey City every ten minutes, with a charge of five cents and a charge of three cents from New York to Jersey City, either by ferry or tunnel.

By a peculiar coincidence the three men mentioned, although interested in the new company, have opposed, as Rapid Transit Commissioners, the granting of a franchise to the Behr Monorail Company. The construction and operation of the two systems are much alike, it is understood. In connection with the announcement it was said word had been received that a trial of the system on a short stretch at the Jamestown Exposition was made yesterday and proved successful. It was possible, the announcement said, to attain a speed of 100 miles an hour without trouble.

One feature of the new system, it is said, is that only slight reduction in speed with be necessary around curves, the monorail allowing for excessive speed.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

The body of William H. Bishop, who committed suicide at Pitman Saturday by shooting, was cremated at the Germantown crematory yesterday.

While working at the Whitall Tatum glassworks at Millville, Clarence Cockrill, a tending boy, collided with a snapper, and a red-hot bottle cut a deep gash in his arm.

James L. Bell, colored, sixteen years old, of Mantua, was arrested Monday night, charged with attempting to assault Sadie Haas, a thirteen-year-old white girl, of Park road.

John Burton, a well known farmer near Hartford, was cleaning a bull with brush and comb, when the animal suddenly turned on him piercing his arm with one of its horns.

Search is being made for Leon Warner, a fifteen-year-old son of John Warner, of Millville, who disappeared from his home Sunday last, after having been reprimanded by his father.

Captain A. J. Newbury, of Jersey City, was reappointed yesterday a member of the Hudson County Board of Park Commissioners by County Judge Blair. The term is four years.

The prevalence of measles in sections of Bayonne is causing much discussion. Some members of the Board of Health are of the opinion that the disease germs have been spread by cats.

Diplomas were presented to this year's classes of the Jersey City High School last night, when the second class to be graduated from the new building held commencement exercises.

Charles Young, a laborer, employed on the icehouses just across the Market street bridge, Paterson, fell from the roof of one of the icehouses yesterday afternoon and sustained injuries which resulted fatally.

Russell Miller, nine years old, of 1810 Mulford street, Camden, fell from a merry-go-round at Wood Lynee Park, yesterday afternoon, and sustained a fractured skull. The boy is in a serious condition at Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Former Fire Chief Otto Krause and John Delaney, of Fairmount, were each fined $12.50 yesterday for allowing their dogs to be at large after the Board of Health had ordered them quarantined. They were said to have been bitten by a mad dog.

At noon yesterday the mercury at Mt. Holly was up to the 100 mark. The average temperature was about 94 and the humidity was most oppressive. Many people in factories quit work in the afternoon, fearing prostration. Business in the open was suspended as much as possible.

Backing his horse and wagon over an embankment into a marl pit that was filled with water, Reed Seaman, a Civil War veteran, of Pemberton, came very near losing his life by drowning yesterday. He went down into the hole with the outfit, but was rescued with difficulty. The horse was drowned.

Charles Myers, a farmer, of Steelmanville, his wife and two small children were hurled yesterday from a wagon in which they were crossing the meadow turnpike, near Atlantic City, in a collision with a big automobile, in which were two men and two women. The man and woman escaped with slight bruises, but the children were badly injured.

George F. Schmidt, a well known resident of Bayonne, son of Police Sergeant William Schmidt, will be ordained to the ministry within a few days. He was graduated recently from the Concordia Seminary of the German Lutheran church at St. Louis, and before he left the seminary he accepted a call to the pastorate of the German Lutheran church, Richmond, Va.

Dr. John H. Banta, of Paterson, was to have been accorded a trial in the police court yesterday afternoon on a charge of maintaining a vicious dog, but the hearing had to be postponed, because, it is said, the physician received a serious injury in his recent encounter with Mrs. Mary E. Giveans, proprietor of the Collis House. Two of his ribs are broken and two physicians are attending him.

The excitement at Grand Heights over the proposed establishment of a colored campmeeting on the old Methodist campground in the fashionable cottage residence district reached such a pitch Monday that a number of wealthy cottage owners forcibly ore up 100 fence posts that Rev. William H. Robinson, the colored preacher, set around the camp ground. If the threats that the exasperated property-owners are making are carried out there will be no campmeeting.

Senators' Conference Not by Invitation.

Trenton, June 27.—Governor Stokes appeared much annoyed yesterday over the published statement made by Senator Colby that the latter was not invited to attend the conference of Republican Senators in the Governor's office, at which the several bills suggested by the Governor were considered. Mr. Colby, after adjournment, reiterated the statement that he felt as if he had been ignored in the consideration of the draft of these bills, and remarked that when the bills were on final passage he was not as familiar with their purport as his colleagues. Through his secretary, Edward Gray, the Governor makes the following statement today: "The story published in some of the papers that Senator Colby was not invited to the conference of the Senators in the Governor's room does great injustice to the Chief Executive. The Governor did not invite any of the Senators. They came to the Governor's room as they can at all times. The door was never closed, and the Senators were coming in and going out at odd times. Senator Colby knows that he is always welcome in the Governor's room, and that he receives the same treatment as the other Senators, and if the Governor had invited the Senators, Senator Colby would have been invited with the others."

TOILET HINTS.

Few women are careful enough about keeping control over their facial expression. They are entirely too apt to frown and look serious, thus implanting lines and wrinkles which, once they come, are hard to erase.

Pose and expression have a wonderful amount to do with a youthful appearance, more, in fact, than most people realize.

As a rule it is the profile that shows age first, and there are certain lines and crow's feet that come in front of the ear and at the side of the face that should be carefully looked after.

Wrinkles in the neck are among the first signs that go to prove that a woman is no longer in her first youth, and when they do come they never should be neglected, but should be carefully massaged.

Therefore it is up to every woman who wants to look as young as possible to carefully study her profile and not to be content with the appearance of her full face. These lines are almost invisible at first, and if treated early they can be effaced and kept down.

The chin and throat are also telltales. If the chin is drawn in and down the throat naturally sets in lines curving towards the ear, but if the chin is held up there are no lines at all.

Figure, of course, has much to do with a youthful appearance, and corsets of the best make are an important asset to the woman who would look young. So is an elastic step, and nothing counts for quite as much as the art of sitting and rising in a youthful manner.

It is decidedly worth while to practice certain balancing exercises that would do much toward retaining elasticity of movement and giving the body perfect poise.

SHOE KNOWLEDGE.

You may hardly believe that there are special times and seasons for the trying on of new shoes. But so it is. You need a larger pair of shoes in summer than in winter, and it is always best to try them on in the latter part of the day. The feet are then at the maximum size. Activity naturally enlarges them or makes them swell; much standing also tends to enlarge the feet. New shoes should be tried on over moderately thick stockings; then you can put on a thinner pair to ease your feet if the shoes seem too tight. It is remarkable what a difference the stockings make. If they are too large or too small they will be nearly as uncomfortable as a pair of shoes that are too tight. New shoes can be worn with as much ease as old ones if they are stuffed to the shape of the foot with cloth or paper and patiently sponged with hot water, says Woman's Life. Or, if they pinch in some particular spot, a cloth wet with hot water and laid across the place will cause immediate and lasting relief. Milk applied once a week with soft cloth freshens and preserves boots and shoes.

THE USEFUL TURPENTINE.

Turpentine has many uses in the household, one of the chief among them being in the laundry.

Mixed with ammonia it will remove paint stains from colored clothing, usually leaving the goods perfectly free from marks. The clothing is dippen into the mixture and rubbed until the stain disappears.

Added to cold starch in the proportion of four drops to one tablespoonful of the starch, it makes the iron glide smoothly over the fabric without the slightest trouble. Its use in this way, however, cannot be recommended very highly except in an emergency, as it has a tendency to yellow the starch and the color clings to the linen.

Never put turpentine on paint or varnish, as it will dissolve it as soon as it touches it. Its volatile nature makes it cut grease in the same way.

Dynamite Kills Eight.

Houston, Va., June 27.—As the result of the premature explosion of a box of dynamite, near Tola, Tuesday, eight persons were killed and six others seriously injured. Two Americans killed were Edward Clarke, of Charlotte county, fireman of a donkey engine, and Cornelius Sullivan, of Lamont, Ill., foreman for the McDermott Construction Company, of Chicago, which has the contract for the construction of a part of the Tidewater Railway. The six others killed were Italian workmen. The accident happened in a deep railroad cut where about fifteen men were engaged. About fifty pounds of dynamite exploded. The explosion was heard for miles around and nearby houses were damaged by the terrific shock.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Stranger—Beg pardon, sir, but you have it in your power to do me a great favor, and one that I will gladly repay.

Bankrupt (sadly)—I? I am afraid you have made a mistake. I am of no use to anybody. I have just failed for half a million, with no assets.

"So I heard."

"You knew it, and yet you say I can be of service to you?"

"Yes, sir, I beg you will not refuse."

"But what can a miserable bankrupt like me do for any one?"

"I want you to tell me, sir, how you got so much credit. I am from Chicago."

Value of Experience.

Fond Mother—Why, my dear, what is the matter?

Daughter (recently married)—Boo, hoo! My husband doesn't—lo-love me any more He didn't kiss me when he came home, and he—he kept edging away from me whenever I went near him; and—and now he's in the library, and don't want—don't want to be disturbed—boo, hoo, hoo!

Fond Mother—Calm yourself, my dear. He loves you as much as ever, but I suppose he has taken a drink, and doesn't want you to know it.—N. Y. Weekly.

First of All.

The excitable individual came in late and when the man in the coat-room took longer than usual to check his coat his temper knew no bounds.

"Hurry up," he exploded, "and check my coat! Can't you see I have been standing here an hour?"

"My man," replied the other, calmly, "it is not your coat you want checked."

"Then what is it, blockhead?"

"Why your temper, sir."—Chicago Daily News.

Eclipsed.

The fashionable girl wept.

"Confide!" said mamma.

"Boo-hoo!" sobbed the girl. "I am always receiving disappointments. You know I had made arrangements to startle society by eloping with our chauffeur."

"Yes, my dear."

"Well, I have just found out that Ethel Gilder is passing the tip that she is going to elope with the pilot of an airship."—Chicago Daily News.

So Nice of Them.

Gunner—I tried to tease my wife about women always getting off the street car backward. She said it was etiquette.

Guyer—Etiquette?

Gunner—Yes, she said they considered it impolite to turn their backs on the conductor.—Chicago Daily News.

His Idea of It.

"Of course you are in favor of improving the consular service?"

"I am," answered Senator Sorghum. "What we want in all branches of government service is a corps of subordinate employes so proficient that the person appointed as the head can't possibly go wrong."—Washington Star.

HIS CHANCE.

He—You don't realize how I love you. I could die kissing you!

She—Well, perhaps if you come round to-morrow when father's here you can gratify your ambition.

Inside Information.

If every mortal would confess
All frankly what he must endure
How often would we scorn success!
How often envy lives obscure!
—Washington Star.

An Indication.

"What makes you so sure that there is no future for the American Indian?"

"The simple fact," answered the western man, "that so many of them have quit smoking the pipe of peace and taken to cigarettes."—Washington Star.

A Similarity.

"Did you ever try the stock market?" asked the eastern man.

"No," answered Broncho Bob. "But it's my guess that a deal in stocks is pretty much like a deal in faro. You want to fight shy unless you know the dealer."—Washington Star.

A Gentle Hint.

He—Tell me, confidentially, how much did the bonnet cost you?

She—George, there is but one way in which you can obtain the right to inspect my millinery bills.

He popped.—Royal Magazine.

ELKS INVADE RAHWAY.

To the Number of Six Hundred They Aid in Installing New Lodge.

Elks, members of the benevolent protective order, were numerous in Rahway last night. They came in herds yesterday afternoon from Newark, Elizabeth, Jersey City, Bayonne, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, East Orange, Paterson and even Hoboken to organize Rahway Lodge, No. 1075, which was instituted at Union Hall yesterday afternoon by Deputy Thomas P. Fay, of Long Branch and by members of Elizabeth Lodge, which was the mother lodge.

There were sixty charter members, among them many well-known citizens. Ex-Mayor James H. Furber was one of those who rode the caribou that was brought up from Perth Amboy especially for this occasion. The Elizabeth elk was out of gear from overfeeding. Following the institution a dinner was served at Washington Hall, and a parade of members of the order, about 600 in number. The festivities wound up with a vaudeville and smoker for Elks only.

Dog Follows Her to Jail.

Detroit, Mich., June 27.—Faithful to the mistress who went to a cell because she refused to part with him, a monster mastiff followed Mrs. Albert Chenes, of No. 612 River street, to the county jail yesterday morning and whined disconsolately outside the door until the attaches le him in and permitted him to lie down beside her cell. Complaint of failing to obtain a license for the dog was made against Mrs. Chenes. Mrs. Ida Steinkop, No. 10 Vermont avenue, reported to the police that the animal had bitten her child and that Mrs. Chenes refused to kill the dog. The latter is in for a term of forty days and the dog will serve with her.

Stokes the Leader.

After a long conference yesterday morning between Governer Stokes and Senators Minch, Hillery, Bradley, Wakelee, Avis and Robbins, an agreement was arrived at to go ahead with legislation and investigation, the outcome of the conference was the passage of bills in the Senate, showing that Governor Stokes is the master spirit of the Republican party in the State. He won out in the proposition that the people demanded the reforms he had advocated and the Senate would be faithless to its duty to the people if it did not attempt and pass legislation at the present time.

No Statement from Petit Jury.

On Monday last one of the petit jurors claiming to represent the panel, appeared before Judge E. S. Atwater, and informed him that he desired to make a statement to the court on behalf of the jury, regarding that portion of the presentment by the Grand Jury affecting the jury. Judge Atwater referred the matter to Justice Swayze. After a conference with Justice Swayze, the jury thought it would be unwise at this time to make any statement and none will be made.

Barber Resigns.

Assemblyman Barber, Mercer, threw a bomb into the camp of the house Democrats at Trenton yesterday by resigning from the Hahn investigation committee because of the unfair treatment given by the majority Democrats to evidence which came before the committee. Assemblyman Gibbs, Camden, will likely resign, thus leaving the committee composed entirely of Democrats.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

June 30: "The Evils of Commercialism." "And they began to beseech Him to depart from their borders."—Mark v, 1-17.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—Jer. xliv, 15-18; Acts xix, 23, to xx, 1; Deut. xi, 26-28; Prov. xxix, 2.

Much is said at the present time about the spirit of commercialism and the evil which results from its cultivation. Is it altogether clear what is meant when we use the term? Do all discriminate accurately between what is the desirable spirit of traffic and the detrimental trait?

Few, if any, would have us go back to the former days when the means of communication were few and slow and all that a family used must largely be produced by their own exertions; when the women not only kept the house, but spun, wove and made all the clothing of the family; when comforts were few and luxuries unknown except to the exceptionally wealthy.

The progress in industries and the facilities for interchange of commodities have made it possible now for all but the exceptionally poor to enjoy products from the ends of the earth and to also find a market for one's own productions far beyond the local community.

It is not the extension of commerce which we deprecate so far as it assists to make human conditions of life more tolerable.

But with the increase in the physical comforts and means of enjoyment there have seemed to grow up a spirit of craving for the mere pleasures of existence and a tendency to sacrifice the things of spirit and moral integrity to the merely physical. Deep, earnest religious zeal is not so much in evidence as it has been in former times; at least it does not seem to control the actions of society as apparently as in previous times. In business the greed of gain has too largely replaced a sturdy honesty and honor which we are wont to think once dominated the commercial world. The haste to get rich appears to have infected all classes. Many circumstances and forces have operated to bring about this state of things.

Just how far the drift in this direction has gone it would be difficult to determine, perhaps well nigh impossible. But that there is serious danger in this concentration of the public mind on material things of life to the exclusion of the deeper concerns of life in society and in individual manhood and womanhood is all too apparent.

The increase of wealth from the opening of natural resources of forests, mines, harvests and cattle, together with the increase in production from inventions and improved means of transport by railroad and vessels, has brought an era of material prosperity such as the world never before saw and which we do not fully realize.

In consequence time and attention have been more than usually given to care for these things. There has also been increased emphasis put on the physical sciences and the industrial sciences. All this has had an unfavorable result on religious and spiritual culture.

Unless each person gives care in his own case not to allow material things to have undue attention he will awake to the consciousness of his mistake when it is too late to apply the remedy.

If we do not in society apply the remedy in time, we shall find our increase in wealth and luxury has been purchased at too dear a price. Decay of virtue can never be compensated by bulk of trade or increase of cash. If manhood is lost, there has been no gain.

The loss of swine to the Gadarenes weighed more than the recovery of reason to a man who was demented. We need to beware lest we apprize swine in the present day at greater value than men.

His Faith.

Less than a month before President Harper died he sent for four intimate friends that they might pray at his bedside with him. "Let us talk with God," he said; "let us not be formal; let us be simple." When his turn to pray came he asked, "May there be for me a life beyond this life, and in that life may there be work to do, tasks to accomplish, and this I ask in the name of Jesus Christ." When a great university president, a great thinker and scholar, can rest in a faith as simple as that, is it not a little amusing to see young men considering themselves too scholarly and educated to be Christians?—Forward.

Always Worth Living.

No one is really ever tired of life. What we get tired of are the hindrances to life, never life itself. Life is always worth living; it is always the gift of God. Disgust with life simply means that we have somehow strayed off the right road. We are thinking of ourselves rather than of God. We are dwelling on thoughts of change, disappointment and pain rather than on joy, strength and peace in God's service. The failure is in our own soul, not in life, and the way to remedy it is to throw ourselves upon God and enter each new day with hope, faith and love.

The Gathering Place.

Life changes all our thoughts of heaven.
At first we think of streets of gold,
Of gates of pearl and dazzling light,
Of shining wings and robes of white,
And things all strange to mortal sight,
But in the afterward of years
It is a more familiar place—
A home unhurt by sighs or tears,
Where waiteth many a well known face,
With passing months it comes more near;
It grows more real day by day;
Not strange or cold, but very dear,
The glad homeland not far away,
Where none are sick or poor or lone,
The place where we shall find our own,
And as we think of all we knew
Who there have met to part no more,
Our longing hearts desire home, too,
With all the strife and trouble o'er.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 30.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Foreign missions. Christ in Africa.—Isa. xliii, 1-13.

Africa has been called the darkest of the world's continents, and it is not only darkest Africa so far as the color of the skin of the people is concerned, but also because of the mental, moral and spiritual darkness of the vast majority of its people. Until recent years this great dark continent, except on the northern and western coasts, was almost unknown. But through the works of missionaries and explorers, such as Livingstone, Stanley and others, even the innermost parts of this vast continent have become fairly well known. The discovery of diamonds in the southern part, where are now the greatest diamond fields, also led the commercial world to take a part in the opening of this great continent. Some people suppose that the great heathen nations have become known first through the political and business worlds, but such is not the case. In the vast majority of cases, as illustrated in Africa, the missionary is the pioneer laborer in these countries, and after he has shown the way the others follow. The world owes much to the Christian missionary for the work he has done in making known the unknown nations of the world. No blush of shame need flush our cheeks in our support of the missionary either at home or abroad.

Africa today is populated with a great mass of people widely separated in their intelligence, civilization and their religions. In the states that border the Mediterranean sea the Mohammedans prevail, relics of the days when the Moslem religion almost conquered the world. From Mohammedanism we go down through many various forms of religious faith until we reach the lowest found the world over, where the inhabitants scarcely seem to be human beings.

What Africa needs in all its parts today is Jesus Christ. And there are several reasons why Africa's need should appeal with especial force to all Christians. (1) The great needs of the people. The darkest places have the greatest need of the light. The Chinese, Japanese and Indians must through their relations with other nations come into some contact with Christianity, but the unenlightened and unsaved races of inland Africa can only receive it by its being sent to them. The duty, therefore, rests upon us to send it, and that duty is being performed, a Christian mission station having been recently established in the Sudan. (2) The world is in great debt to these dark races of Africa. From time immemorial until the overthrow of slavery Africa formed the slave market of the world. The poor degraded people were rudely forced from their homes and made to become slaves to the more enlightened races. This debt against them should be paid by giving them Christ, the light—Christ, who shall make them free indeed. (3) The relation of the Israelites and of Christ Himself to Africa should appeal to us. Read the topic, "Christian Africa." Can you do it without thinking of the time when, a fugitive from Herod's wrath, He actually lived in Africa? His feet touched the soil of this great continent. It gave Him a home when His own ruler sought His life. Shall we not remember this and send Christ back to Africa after nineteen centuries that He may be a refuge to the people and assure to them a heavenly home?

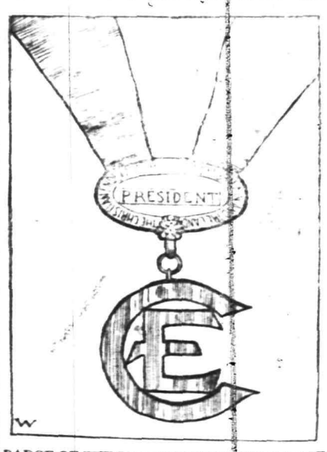
A Notable President.

Rev. John Pollock, pastor of St. Enoch's Presbyterian church, Belfast, Ireland, has the unique honor of being president at the same time of the Irish Christian Endeavor union, the British Christian Endeavor union and the European Christian Endeavor union. Dr.



BADGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE BRITISH CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION.

Clark in a recent article describes his rare abilities as speaker, writer and organizer. On the other side of the Atlantic he is counted the greatest of Christian Endeavor poets, some of his hymn writings having become so popular as to be translated into other tongues. Mr. Pollock has spoken at a number of international conventions.

The Idea of Helpfulness.

One of the central ideas of the Christian Endeavor society is that of helpfulness. The society that lives for itself and not to help the church is not a true Christian Endeavor society. The Endeavorer that seeks merely his own progress in the Christian life and not to help some one else nearer to Christ is not a true Endeavorer.—Jamaica Endeavor Gem.

The GIRL from TIM'S PLACE

BY CHARLES CLARK MUNN

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO.

"Oh, yes, we see them things here now 'n' then," he said, "but it takes considerable licker to do it. We hain't had a murder, though, for quite a spell. This is a sorter peaceful neck o' woods ye're comin' to."

But Chip failed to grasp his quiet humor, and all through that 20-mile autumn day stage ride she chattered on like a magpie.

He soon concluded she was sane enough, however, but the most voluble talker who ever shared his seat.

"I never seen the beat o' her," he said that night at Phinney's store,—the village news agency,—"she clacked every minit from the time we started till we fetched in, an' I never callated sich goin's on ez she told about cud ever happen. Thar was murder 'n' runnin' away, 'n' she got ketched 'n' carried off 'n' fetched back, 'n' a whole lot o' resky business. She believes in ghosts, too, sorter Injun sperits, 'n' she kin swear jist ez easy ez I-kin. It seems the Frisbies hev kinder 'dopted her, 'n' I guess they'll hev their hands full. She's a bright 'un, though, but sich a talker!"

At Aunt Comfort's spacious, old-fashioned home, where Chip was now installed, she soon began to create the same impression. This had been Angie's former home, and her Aunt Comfort Day had been her foster mother.

This family, in addition to the new arrival, consisted of Aunt Comfort, rotund and warm-hearted; Hannah

"Why Don't Ye Shave?"

Pettibone, a well-along spinster of angular form and temper, thin to an almost painful degree, with a well-defined mustache; and a general helper on the farm, and a chore boy about Chip's age named Nezer, completed the list.

Once included in this somewhat diverse group, Chip became an immediate bone of contention.

Aunt Comfort, of course, opened her heart to her at once; but Hannah closed hers, almost from the first day, and in addition she began to nurse malice as well. There was some reason for this, mainly due to Chip's startling freshness of speech.

"I thought ye must be a man wearin' wimmin's clothes, the first time I see ye," she said to Hannah the next day after her arrival, and without meaning offense. "It was all on account o' yer little whiskers, I guess. I never see a woman with 'em afore. Why don't ye shave?"

This was enough; for if there was any one thing more mortifying than all else to Hannah, it was her facial blemish, and a mention of it she considered an intentional insult.

From this moment onward she hated Chip.

Nezer, however, took to her as a duck to water, and her story, which he soon heard, became a real dime novel to him, and not content with one telling, he insisted on repetition. This was also unfortunate for—blessed with a vivid imagination and sure to enlarge upon all facts—he soon spread the story with many blood-curdling additions.

These stories, with Uncle Joe's corroboration, resulted in a direful tale believed by all. Neighbors flocked in to see this heroine of many escapades, villagers halted in front of Aunt Comfort's to catch a sight of this marvel, and so the wonder spread.

Angie was, of course, to blame. More impressed with the seriousness of the task she had undertaken than the need of caution, she had failed to tell Chip she must not talk about herself, and so a woefully distorted history became current gossip.

When Sunday came the village church was packed and Parson Jones marveled much at the unexpected increase of religious interest. He had heard of this new arrival, but when the Frisbie family with Chip, in suitable clothing, entered their pew, the cynosure of all eyes, this unusual attendance was accounted for.

And what a staring-at Chip received!

On the church steps a group of both young and old men had awaited her arrival and gazed at her in open-eyed astonishment. All through service she was watched, and not content with this, a dozen or so, men and women, formed a double line outside, awaiting the Frisbies' exit.

Angie also failed to understand the principal cause of this interest. Her last appearance at this church had been as a bride. Naturally that fact would produce some staring, and so the curious and almost rude scrutiny the family received was less noticed by her.

But Chip's eyes were observant.

"I don't like goin' to meetin'," she said, "an' bein' stared at like I was a wildcat. I seen 'em grinnin', too, some on 'em, when we went in, an' one feller winked to another. What ailed 'em?"

Her vexations, however, had only just begun, for Angie had seen and made arrangements with Miss Phinney, one of the village school teachers, and the next morning Chip was sent to school. And now real trouble commenced.

Not knowing more than how to read and spell short words, and unable to write, she, a fairly well developed young lady, presented a problem which was hard for a teacher to solve. To put her in the class where she belonged was absurd. She must sit with older girls, or look ridiculous. If she recited with the eight-year-old children, the result would be the same, and so a species of private tuition with recitations at noon or after school became the only possible course and the one her teacher adopted.

This also carried its vexations, for Chip was as tall as Miss Phinney and a little larger. Not one of that band of pupils was over 12. To join in their games was no sport for Chip, while they, having heard about her thrilling experiences, with a hint that she wasn't quite right in her head, felt afraid of her.

"I feel so sorry for her," Miss Phinney explained to Angie, a week later, "and yet, I don't know what to do. She is so big the children won't play with her, or she with them. I am the only one with whom she will talk, and she seems so humble and so grateful for every word. I can't be as stern with her or govern her as I should, on account of her temper and size.

"Only yesterday I heard screaming at recess, and going out, I found that Chip had one of the girls by the hair and was cuffing her. It transpired that this girl had called her an Indian and asked if she had ever scalped anybody. I can't punish such a pupil, and I can't help loving her, so you see she is a sore trial."

CHAPTER XII.

The streams and swamps contiguous to this lake were well adapted for the habitat of mink, muskrat, otter, fisher, and those large fur-bearing animals, the lynx and lucivee.

Old Cy, familiar as he was with the homes, habits, and the manner of catching these cunning animals, soon began his trap-setting campaign. A few dozen steel traps were first set along the stream and lagoons entering the lake, and then he and Ray pushed up Beaver brook, and leaving their canoe, followed its narrow valley in search of suitable spots to set the more elaborate deadfalls.

As gum-gathering was also a part of their season's plan, they now left the swamp valley, and, ascending the spruce-clad upland, began this work.

There was also another element that entered into the trapping and gum-gathering life,—the possible return of the half-breed.

"He hain't nothin' agin us," Old Cy asserted, when the question came up. "We didn't chase him the day he stole Chip, 'n' yet I s'pose he'll show up some day, 'n' mebbe do us harm."

It was this fear that had led Old Cy to leave one of their canoes in a log locker, securely barred, and also to caution the hermit to remain on guard at the cabin while he and Ray were away.

A canoe is the one most vital need of a wildwood life, for the reason that the streams are the only avenues of escape and afford the only opportunities for travel.

Old Cy knew, or at least he felt almost sure, that the half-breed would return in good time. He had also reasoned out his failure to do so at once, and knew that left canoeless, as he had been that tragic day, his only course must be the one he actually followed. A month had elapsed since then, with no sign of this "varmint's" return, and now Old Cy was on the watch for it.

They had first visited the small traps near the lake, securing a couple of mink and three muskrats, which were left in the canoe. An otter was found in one of the deadfalls, and taking this with them, they entered the spruce timber and hung it on a conspicuous limb. Then the search for gum began.

As usual, they worked hard. The days were short, the best of sunlight was needful to see the brown gum nuts in the somber forest, and so they paid no heed to aught except what was overheard. When time to return arrived, Old Cy picked up his rifle and led the way back to where the otter had been left, but it had vanished. Glancing about to make sure that he was right, he advanced to the tree, looked down, and saw two footprints. Stooping over to examine them better in the uncertain light, he noted also that they were not his own, but larger, and made by some one wearing boots.

"Tain't the half-breed," he muttered, with an accent of relief, and looking about he saw a well-defined trail leading down the slope and thence onward toward the swamp.

Some one had crossed this broad oval, spruce-covered upland while they were not 200 rods away from this tree, had stolen their otter and gone on into the swamp.

Any freshly made human footprint found in a vast wilderness awakens curiosity; these seemed ominous.

"He must 'a' seen us 'fore he did the otter," Old Cy ejaculated, "an' it's curis he didn't make himself known. Neighbors ain't over plenty, hereabout."

But the sun was nearing the tree-tops, the canoe was a mile away, and after one more look around, Old Cy started for it. There was no use in following this trail now, for it led into the tangled swamp, and so, skirting this until a point opposite the canoe was reached, Old Cy and Ray then plunged into it.

Twilight had begun to shadow this vale ere the canoe was reached. And here was another surprise, for the canoe was found turned half over, and on its broad oval bottom was a curious outline of black mud. The light was not good here. A fir-grown ledge shadowed the spit; but as Old Cy stooped to examine this mud-made emblem, it gradually took shape, and he saw—a skull and cross bones!

"Wal, by the Great Horn Spoon!" he exclaimed, "I never s'posed a pirate 'ud fetch in here! An' he's swiped our muskrats and mink," he added, as he looked under the canoe, "darn him!"

Then the bold bravado of it all occurred to Old Cy. The theft was doubtless made by whosoever had taken their otter, and not content with robbing them, he had added insult.

"I s'pose we'd orter be grateful he left the paddles 'n' didn't smash the canoe," Old Cy continued, turning it over. "I wonder who't can be?"

One hasty look around revealed the same bootmarks in the soft earth near the stream, and then he and Ray launched their craft and started for home.

"I'm goin' to foller them tracks to-morrer," Old Cy said, when they were entering the lake and a light in the cabin just across reassured him. "It may be a little resky, but I'm goin' to find out what sorter a neighbor we've got."

CHAPTER XIII.

All fellow-sojourners in the wilderness awaken keen interest, and the unbroken silence and solitude of a boundless forest make a fellow human being one we are glad to accost.

A party of lumbermen wielding axes causes one to turn aside and call on them. A sportsman's camp seen on a lake shore or near a stream's bank always invites a landing to interview whoever may be there.

All this interest was now felt by Old Cy and Ray, and with it an added sense of danger. No friendly hunter or trapper would thus ignore them in the woods. This piratically minded thief must have seen them, for the spruce-clad oval, perhaps half a mile in width, was comparatively free from undergrowth where they had been working. He had crossed it within fairly open sight of them, had found the otter hanging from a limb, had taken it, and thence on to rob their canoe, daub it with that hideous emblem, world-wide in meaning, and then had gone on his way. Almost could Old Cy see him watching them from behind trees, skulking along when their backs were turned, a low, contemptible thief.

Old Cy knew that bordering this oval ridge on its farther side was a swamp, that a stream flowed through it, and surmising that this fellow might have come up or down this stream, he left their cabin prepared for a two or three days' sojourn away from it, which meant that food, blankets and simple cooking utensils must be taken along.

No halt was made to visit traps. Old Cy was trailing bigger game now; and when the point where they had left the canoe the day previous was reached, the canoe was pulled out on the stream's bank, the rifles only taken and the trailing began. He followed up the brook valley a little way, to find that only one track came down; he then circled about the canoe, until, like a hound, he found where the clearly defined trail left the swamp again.

Here in the soft carpet under the spruce trees one could follow this trail on the run, and here also Old Cy found where this enemy had halted beside trees evidently while watching them, as the tracks indicated. When the bordering swamp was reached, the trail turned in a westerly direction, skirting thus for half a mile, and here, also, evidences of skulking along were visible.

Another trail was now come upon, but leading directly over the ridge, and just beyond this juncture both the trails now joined, entered the swamp, and ended at a lagoon opening out from the stream. Here, also, evidences of a canoe having been hauled up into the bog were visible.

The Y. M. C. A. nine will practise at Crescent Oval this afternoon.

The game between Scotch Plains and Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon will be of unusual interest to the old line fans because it will mark the return of George Dupee, the former city league twirler, to local baseball. Dupee pitched the Y. M. C. A. nine to victory in the old league, and he is said to be better now than he was in 1903. He has been pitching for the New York A. C. this summer and is in the pink of condition. He says his arm was never better. Speed and control being equal, he should be better in the box than Minford, good as the youngster is when in form. He has a longer experience, and uses his head all the time.

TENNIS.

On Saturday, June 29, and Thursday, July 4, there will be the men's singles tennis championship at the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, and in addition to this tournament the fourth annual open tournament of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association will be held at the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, on August 27 and September 2, inclusive. These championship tournaments will be competed for under the same conditions as last year; namely, first place to count five points and second place two points, the club winning the greatest number of points to hold the cup for one year, the cup to become the permanent property of the club winning it three times, not necessarily in succession.

New Tennis Club.

A number of young people in the Netherwood district have taken steps to form a tennis club. Walter Henry, of Farragut road, is chairman of the committee in charge, and is arranging for the laying out of the court. The latter, it is expected, will be ready for play by the middle of next month.

Won State Meet Event.

Russell Lawrence, of this city, won the 12-pound shot put in the State track meet of the Y. M. C. A. in Newark. He hurled the shot 43 feet 1 inch. Newark won the meet by a big margin, getting the championship the fourth consecutive time. Lawrence and C. D. Burgess were the only Plainfielders in the meet. The latter didn't get a place.

Cornell the Winner.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 27.—Cornell maintained her prestige on the inter-collegiate course yesterday by winning the 'varsity eight oared race, but she did it only after the most desperate struggle of her boating career. From start to finish it was Columbia that rowed so game a race that there was never half a length between the men of Cayuga and the men of Morningside. It was Columbia that led Cornell over the first two miles, then lost the speed by a fraction of a length, and in the final mile recovered the loss, the two crews fighting an almost neck and neck race down to the finish line, where Cornell, by a supreme effort put forth in the last two hundred yards, forced the nose of Ithaca shell across the line, with the point of the Columbit boat so close behind that it appeared from the observation train to be abreast of Cornells bow oar. The Naval Academy crew finished a good third after a lively race with Pennsylvania for that position. The Philadelphia oars men had to be content with fourth place, with Wisconsin fifth.

The Misses Wildey Win at Tennis.

Rain interfered with yesterday's play in the women's national championship lawn tennis tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, at St. Martin's. Only two matches were played in women's singles, but good progress was made in the doubles. In the first round of the women's doubles, Miss Edna Wildey and Miss Natalie Wildey, of the Plainfield Country Club, sustained their reputation by defeating Miss Leroy and Mrs. Clement Wainwright, 6-1, 6-1. Miss Edna Wildey is still in the women's singles, which the rain interfered with yesterday. Miss Mildred Wildey, who was defeated by her sister in the first day's play, has returned home.

"The safeguards created by the act of 1906 against the violation of the Sunday law, while applying to places licensed as saloons and restaurants, have no application to those licensed as inns and taverns or hotels. By its provisions one saloon-keeper is required to have his premises open to the public view from the street on Sunday, while another is not required to do so because he holds an inn and tavern license. Can it be said that legislation which brings about this result is not special and therefore unconstitutional?"

Mr. Lindabury asserted that the Bishops act was in violation of the Federal Constitution, because any legislation which discriminates against some and favors others is prohibited whether enacted under the police power of the States or not.

Hillery Measure Passed.

When Sentate 375 was taken up in the State Senate yesterday, Senator Colby offered a substitute measure in Assemblyman Brady's house bill 291, the "Oregon" act providing for a supposed advanced method of getting the will of the people in the selection of United States Senators. Senator Hillery opposed this substitute, as saying it was a method of overriding the constitution of the United States in the selection of United States Senators. The substitute was killed and then the Hillery act providing for the voters expressing their will for United States Senators at the primaries, was passed. Senator Hillery said that under the act proposed by Senator Colby, a Democrat could vote for his ticket candidates at a general election, and at the end of the ticket could vote for a man which the Republican legislators would be bound to accept.

MAN LOST 4 YEARS

currence but has worked himself into a nervous state trying to recall what it was. The people who talked to him did not say that he is the man for whom they have been searching but I understand that they are fully convinced that he is the missing Charles Brewin."

A stranger case of dual identity, with oneself dead, has seldom been disclosed. Physicians who have known the whilom tailor as the prosperous Charles P. Brewin say the pressure of a small bone on the skull is the cause of all the trouble, but "Charles Johnson" knows naught of medical science and cares less, and he is very much averse to having doctors open his head to see what is the matter.

His dual history dates from four years ago in November when his wife and children awoke to find him gone. He had been a deacon for a generation in the First Baptist church, of Burlington, and was prominently identified with the G. A. R. These and other organizations gave aid in the search. The curtain seemed to fall on the last act when the missing man's hat was found on a Jersey Central ferry-boat in New York, with a note, telling his wife he would die. During his service in the Civil War he suffered sunstroke, which brought on a neurotic condition intermittently, and this was charitably ascribed as the cause for his act, by the friends and family who loved him.

DECRIES USE OF ALCOHOL.

Dr. Marcy Also Advocates State Institution for Inebriates.

Long Branch, June 27.—Officers were elected at the second day's session yesterday of the New Jersey Medical Society as follows: President, Dr. Edward J. Ill, of Newark; first vice president, Dr. David St. John, of Hackensack; second vice president, Dr. B. A. Waddington, of Salem; third vice president, Dr. W. J. McKenzie, of Trenton; recording secretary, Dr. W. J. Chandler, of Orange; corresponding secretary, Dr. Daniel Strock, of Camden; treasurer, Dr. Archibald Moyer, of Newark.

Cape May was selected as the next meeting place. Dr. Alexander Marcy, Jr., of Riverton, in his annual address, advocated the discontinuance of alcohol both as a medicine and as a beverage and recommended a State institution for inebriates.

Although Mr. Perkins and the other Union county members of the Assembly will not be present, the liquor question will be debated at a meeting to be held in the school auditorium in Roselle tonight. Mr. Burke and his supporters are expected to fire some hot shot into the Assemblymen, and particularly the Mayor of Westfield.

$700 FOR NEW JERSEY CENT COINED IN 1786.

Philadelphia, June 7.—Numismatics from all over the country are here attending the sale this week of the collection of coins made by the late Matthew Stickney, and amazing prices are being obtained. The highest price ever realized for gold coin was paid yesterday, when the world-famous Brashear doubloon, coveted by all collectors, sold for $6,200. The next highest sensational price was $1,050 for a Paul Revere half-penny. A unique New Jersey cent, dated 1786, and displaying an eagle, sold for the astonishing price of $700. It was purchased by a local collector.

The Brashear doubloon is regarded as a beautiful coin. It was struck in 1787 at New York by Ephraim Brashear, and is one of five known specimens. When put up at auction yesterday the first bid was $1,000. The coin went to DeWitt Smith, of Massachusetts, at the record price. The Paul Revere half-penny is believed to have been engraved by Paul Revere, the Revolutionary hero. Its price, $1,050, is the highest ever paid for a copper coin.

Matthew Stickney died about fifteen years ago, at Salem, Mass. He was born in 1805, and started to gather coins in the early part of the last century. Among his treasures was an American dollar of the 1804 coinage. His collection constituted an almost perfect array of American coins in all metals.

Abolish Bureau.

The Senate at Trenton yesterday passed Nos. 370 and 373, the acts abolishing the state bureau of labor and then reorganizing a State bureau of labor and statistics, thus combining these two bureaus under one head. The chief is to receive $3,500 annual salary adn they assistant chief $2,500.

DR. RUSH RHEES ON FAITH

College President Warns the Young Men Against the Spirit of Doubt.

"UPWARD SUMMONS"

"Thinking Men Today," He Declares, "Are Disturbed by the Travesty of Religion."

Dr. Rush Rhees, president of the University of Rochester, who is a former resident and frequent visitor in Plainfield, preached a remarkable sermon before the graduating class of that seat of learning this week. His subject was faith.

The text of President Rhees' sermon was taken from the fourteenth verse of the third chapter of Philippians, which reads: "I press toward the goal for the prize of the upward calling of God in Christ Jesus." The substance of the forceful sermon was: Thinking men today are disturbed by the travesty of religion. The great additions to scientific knowledge has dissipated faith in Scriptural teachings to a great extent and "have raised a mist which conceals God." The power and vitality which gave the upward calling its victory in the early centuries are somewhat inert today. Yet those who have faith should not abandon it or forego the power and inspiration of a real religion because its travesty is common, even as they would not discard wisdom because is can be feigned. One should listen to the "upward summons" and live his life as it directs.

"You are on the threshold of a life which calls you henceforth to walk in different paths. It calls some of you to further study, some to ministry in one or another form, some to professional activity, and some to business cares and aims. The upward summons which God issues to you is not alternative to these. If God is near, and we akin to him, all tasks are sacred that are worthy of ourselves, in all alike the upward summons reaches us, in all alike lower and earthlier aims insistently urge themselves upon us. The spiritual inertia that resists all progress invades the cloister and the study as freely as the mart and countinghouse. God calls to a life of progress, of spiritual endeavor, of resistance to the currents which keep by us set toward the lower levels of life from which we and our fathers have emerged. These currents know no barrier which shuts a sacred calling from a secular.

"We cry out much today against what we call the commercial spirit. We make lamentation that it contaminates lives set apart to ministry for soul or mind or body, that it puts a price on manhood and honor and integrity, and boasts that all or any of these may be bartered in its market. But this is not the commercial spirit. This is the old foul-visaged vice of avarice. The spirit of commerce is an agency of progress. It discovers new worlds, it invents economics, it multiplies provisions for human wants, it serves our life in countless noble ways. It incurs peculiar danger, for the prize of its success is gold, the object of man's greed from his early days of barbarism until now. But that greed is a stain upon the commercial spirit, even as it is the curse of men with itching palm in every walk of life.

"The upward summons cries out in the market and the counting room as loudly as by the bedside of the sick, in the council room of the attorney, in the quiet of the study, in the closet of the preacher calling men to the triumphant upright life. It is the call in any task or walk of life to love God first as did Jesus Christ, a call to the adoration of truth, and holiness and goodness; a call to joy in moral progress; a call to hope for life's triumph over sin and death, as Christ has triumphed for us. That summons is a call to love our neighbors fully, in commerce and in every other occupation to confess the pricelessness of human life, the appealing claim of a brother's need, the clear, persuasive plea for sympathy with my neighbor alike in his joy and in his sorrow, as the Master valued life and ministered to need and opened his heart to every pulsing of his fellow's life. And the prize is the fulfilled life. That it is fulfillment our own ideals declare, that it is fulfillment the record of history demonstrates, that it is fulfillment is seeen supremely in the simple fact of the present masterhood of the meek and lowly Friend of publicans and sinners. Here is the light to guide your path, whatever task you undertake, wherever life places you, however it may hedge you in with difficulties or temptations—God's summons to the Godlike life.

WARREN CHAPEL FUND NOW REACHES $850

CHURCH SOCIETIES' FESTIVAL NETS ABOUT $175.

The strawberry and ice cream festival was continued last night under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor, Missionary and Aid societies, of Warren chapel, with marked success. The affair was held on the large lot at Somerset street and Fairview avenue, and the net proceeds were for the furnishing fund of the new chapel now building on Watchung avenue. The societies want to raise $1,000 for this purpose by September 1, and they will undoubtedly succeed, as there is now over $850 in the treasury, the festival netting about $175.

The grounds were attractively decorated with Japanese lanterns, 250 of them being suspended about the place and around the many handsomely decorated booths. In addition there were fourteen tables, where ice cream, cake and strawberries were served. These were presided over by waitresses, members of the various societies.

The various chairmen were as follows: Ice cream, Miss Hattie Squier; strawberries, Mrs. John Schenck; cake, Mrs. J. H. Snyder; candy, Miss Nora B. Schenck; lemonade, Charles Bryan; flowers, Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey. The chairmen all had an efficient corps of workers from the Christian Endeavor, Missionary and Aid societies.

Among those who assisted in making the affair a success were Mr. and Mrs. John Dickson, for the use of their home, adjoining the lot where the festival was held; J. W. Gavett for the loan of dishes; Mark Lees for cutting grass; Joseph Farlee and J. H. Snyder for carting; Miss May Bennett, the efficient cashier; Theodore Martin, as general manager of the grounds, and Charles Windham, Thomas Finney, John Schuck and Francis Caldwell, all of whom contributed their services without charge.

One of the special attractions of the evening was the music by the Liberty Band, of this city. A fine program of popular selections were rendered by the band to the enjoyment of the large crowd.

RE-REPLEVINED HORSE.

Richard Baldwin Retains Possession of Animal in Dispute.

In the Baldwin-Vanderhoef horse case, the first hearing of which was held in Justice Mundy's court, Wednesday, the former scored yesterday by re-replevining the animal, thus keeping it in his possession. He filed a bond, and will hold the horse until the final settlement as to ownership, in the Somerset County Court in September. F. J. Blatz is his lawyer.

A city court case growing out of the trouble will be heard tomorrow morning. No written complaint has been made, but Vanderhoef has been ordered to appear on allegations made by Baldwin.

A June Tea.

A very charming tea was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Morris Alexander Zook at her home on East Sixth street, in honor of her friend, Miss Craig, of Kentucky. Mrs. Zook was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Zook, senior, and Mrs. H. Bernard Coombe. The assistants in the dining room were the Misses Anna and Helen Davis and Miss Constance Patten. A large number of kuests was present. The house was prettily decorated with flowers.

John Glasel, arrested for peddling without a license, was arraigned this morning before Judge Runyon. He was fined $2.

SCHOOL BOARD'S DILEMMA

Berkely Heights Lacking in Proper Accomodations For Pupils.

THE LAW VIOLATED

Must Provide More Room But Just How to Do It Causes Much Agitation.

A division in sentimen over the need of more school room and the projected improvements to the Plainfield avenue public school of Berkeley Heights has thrown the citizens of that section of New Providence township into a controversy which may drag along indefinitely, to the detriment of educational development. Owing to the rapid growth and increase in population the present schoolhouse has become inadequate and more room is necessary to accommodate the pupils. During the last term County Superintendent of Schools W. J. Shearer, of Elizabeth, paid a visit to the local schoolhouse and was surprised to find that there were more pupils in the school than the present structure could properly accommodate. He also discovered that the State law was being violated by the Board of Education in allowing two teachers to instruct as many classes in one room. Superintendent Shearer called the attention of the members of the school board to this state of affairs and ordered that steps be taken to provide more room and to comply with the state law in reference to having but one teacher for each room.

When the result of Superintendent Shearer's visit became generally known agitation at once began for better school facilities. William Jeffery, the former Plainfield real estate operator who has been engaged in developing a section on the north side of the Lackawanna Railroad tracks, offered the suggestion that the school board erect a new school for the accommodation of first and second year pupils on the north side. He based his arguments for this course on the fact that out of the ninety-eight pupils enrolled eighty reside on that side of the track, while but eighteen have their homes on the southern side where the school is now located. Mr. Jeffery favors as a site for a new building a plot of ground about one mile distant from the Plainfield avenue school. A majority of citizens, it is said, also favor the same idea as entertained by Jeffery, as does Committeeman Joseph Kunz. Despite the sentiment in favor of a new school for the younger children it is believed that a majority of the members of the school board are against making an expenditure for a new structure and will try to improve matters by building an addition to the present structure.

In the belief that the members of the board would show their hands at the monthly meeting last night it was predicted that a lively session would take place, but everything passed off serenely and not a grain of excitement enlivened the meeting. Perhaps this was due to the absence of Mr. Jeffery, who was detained in New York and was unable to be present, at any rate Committeeman Kunz did not advocate the erection of a new structure to accommodate the overflow of young pupils. The meeting was held in the schoolhouse which was dimly lighted for the occasion by a single kerosene lamp. The deliberations of the board were cut short at 9:30 owing to a limited supply of oil.

Ways and means to bridge over the difficulty were talked over in a calm manner, with Casper Fox, the president of the board, presiding over the meeting. Owing to the many formalities required by the State school low it was decided that it would be impossible to build an addition and have it completed be-

SUB-CONTRACT MADE ON THE SEWER WORK

DUNELLEN CEMENT COMPANY TO ERECT PUMPING STATION.

Peter Morgan, of Poughkeepsie, who has the contract for building the southside sanitary sewer, has had considerable trouble in securing a sub-contractor to construct the house and opening for the installation of the pumping station on Randolph road. Cormick Caufield, the mason, was the first one to take the subcontract, and when he examined the plans in detail and learned that he had to go down a number of feet below the water line, he gave up the job.

Other contractors were sought, in Plainfield and New York, but the figures were so high that Mr. Morgan declined to accept them. Finally, the Dunellen Cement Company was induced to take the contract, but it is said that that company will find it difficult to complete the work at the figures named and make much profit. The vault into which the machinery is to be installed is to be constructed of concrete and must be perfectly waterproof. The fact that there is water to be contended with in the construction work, makes it much more expensive. However, it is a matter that Mr. Morgan will have to settle and the work must be done according to the plans. Any loss, if there is one, will have to be borne by Mr. Morgan and the sub-contractor.

FOURTH WILL BE GREAT DAY IN NEW MARKET

BIG CELEBRATION OF AN OLD FASHIONED NATURE TO BE HELD.

Plans have been partly completed by the committee in charge for the big Fourth of July celebration at New Market under the auspices of Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. The observance will be an old-fashioned one, with a lively program of sports, and all the features of a patriotic picnic. The committee is bending every energy to make it the greatest celebration ever held in New Market.

Land and water sports will be included in the athletic program. There will be swimming races, boat races, tub races, and aquatic events of novel character, as well as running races, potatoe races, bag races, jumping events, tug of war and other field and track contests. The entry lists will be large, and prizes of value will be given the winners.

In the evening the celebration will close with an elaborate display of fireworks. Over $400 worth of pyrotechnic contrivances of one sort or another have been ordered. A brass band of twenty-five pieces will play afternoon and evening.

Many Plainfielders are expected to take part in the celebration. The Juniors of this city will be well represented at the affair, and a feature of the afternoon will be a baseball game between nines from Somerset and Plainfield Councils.

Vail's grove will be the scene of the celebration, as in past years. It is finely situated, and admirably adapted to the purpose. Refreshment booths will be erected.

The committee in charge of the affair is made up of Harry J. Piddington, William T. Piddington, Frank O. Nelson, Foster Sofield and Dr. Daniel C. Main. They are being assisted by other members of the Council.

BACK TO REFORMATORY

Frank Mulliner's Parole Was Brought to an End in City Court Today.

NEGLECTED HIS FAMILY

Ran After Young Servant Girl and Threatened Her Employer—Weeps As Officer Takes Him in Custody.

Informed of the arrest of Frank Mulliner, of Dunellen, a paroled prisoner, on a charge of making threats, Chief Parole Officer Charles Moore, of Rahway Reformatory, attended the hearing in the city court, this morning. When the testimony was all in he decided that Mulliner was wanted at the institution again, and he made the formal demand that terminated the young man's freedom.

Mulliner was sent to the Reformatory from Peapack three years ago under conviction for a grave crime. He was twenty-two years old at the time. He was released on parole last winter, and went to live in Dunellen with his wife and two children.

He broke his parole by neglecting his family almost immediately. Mrs. Mulliner was forced to make complaint to Moore at that time, and the latter told Judge Runyon this morning that he wanted to take Mulliner into custody then. The young man pleaded for another chance, and was given it.

Recently, Mulliner became interested in a young servant girl working for a man living on West Sixth street, and he again neglected his wife and children. Mrs. Mulliner learned of the servant's part in the affair, and she went to the girls' mistress. She aroused the later's sympathy, and the women told her husband. He watched for Mulliner's coming, and the next time the young man appeared he ordered him from the place and forbade him to come there again. Mulliner adopted a defiant attitude, and after blackening his wife's character vilely, made threats against the servant's employer. His arrest followed.

Mrs. Mulliner told her story of neglect and non-support to City Judge Runyon this morning. Mulliner tried to belittle the story and the charge against him, but the evidence was conclusive.

"Mulliner," said the magistrate, "the Reformatory has first call on you, and Mr. Moore is here to say whether or not the institution desires you to come back. If he doesn't want you, I will hold you for the Grand Jury."

"He has broken his parole," said Moore. "I will take him with me."

"Don't take me from my two children," pleaded Mulliner.

"You didn't think of your children when you ran after that young girl," said Moore. "I have no sympathy for you. I should have taken you back to the institution when your wife complained last spring."

Mulliner broke into tears. He was sobbing when Moore took him, handcuffed, from the station house.

Mrs. Mulliner will be assisted by the woman for whom the servant girl works.

Park Club Will Celebrate.

The Park Club is planning for its usual Fourth of July celebration during the afternoon and evening of Independence Day. In the afternoon there will be tennis on the courts, with a tea at the clubhouse and in the evening there will be a grand display of fireworks, followed by a dance. Admission to the club grounds will be by card through members.

Suffers Appendicitis Attack.

E. S. Hyatt, of East Ninth street, who recently went to Chicago on a business trip, was taken suddenly ill Saturday night with a severe attack of appendicitis. An operation was performed during the night and Mr. Hyatt is now doing well.

CAN'T FIND ANYBODY WHO WILL BE DOG CATCHER

MAYOR HAVING A TOUGH TIME GETTING A FEEDER FOR THE CANINE CORRAL

WANTED—Active person to be head of the Plainfield dog catching industry. Age, sex, color or previous condition of servitude will not figure in appointment. Address, call personally or 'phone to C. J. Fisk, Mayor's office, Plainfield.

Mayor Fisk did not ask to have that advertisement inserted, but the need is urgent, and he himself knows not how to relieve it. There is a loud, raucous clamor for the appointment of a dog catcher, but a deep, dripping silence meets his call for applicants. Even those who "would take the matter under advisement" are so scarce as to rival the dental adornment of the garden variety of hens.

The hustling mayor, it is said, has taken to stopping all his friends and asking tearfully if they will please consent to be dog catcher, or at least tell him of some man or woman, youth or maid who will take the job. Up to 1:48 this afternoon the result of his canvass was confined to a collection of hoarse chortles and unfeeling jibes.

"They want me to appoint a dog catcher," said the Mayor sadly, "but no one will be it or hold anybody else long enough to be tagged. Must I, at my age, go forth and be dog catcher myself?" and he wiped away a tear as he saw his Duty as a model executive looming up sternly ahead of him.

At 2 p. m. the Mayor's telephone rang violently. At the other end was Dr. T. S. Davis who shouted that he just spied a man running past his office after a dog. Aleck Ayers volunteered to offer the job to the stranger but when he returned he declared that the man wanted forty dollars a week with five days off duty.

As the mayor swooned in his chair he murmured "Shall It be Knott or not Knott. Just then a message came from the S. P. C. A. headquarters. It read "We want you to get a dog catcher but we don't want to select a man as we want the responsibility on your shoulders."

A marked copy of the advertisement will be sent President L. V. F. Randolph, Dr. T. S. Davis and Dr. M. O'M. Knott.

BOSS BARBERS MEET.

Will Close Shops All Day July 4 As An Experiment.

The Boss Barbers Association, of the city and borough, met last night and decided to close shops all day on the Fourth of July but to keep open until 12 o'clock the night before. The move was decided upon as a result of the requests made by the journeymen barbers, who recently advocated a number of changes. Heretofore the shops have been open until noon on holidays, closing the night before at 9 o'clock.

The closing on July 4 will be in the nature of an experiment and if it proves satisfactory will be maintained on all holidays throughout the year. The requests of the journeymen for a half-holiday every other week and their suggestion that the prices of hair-cutting and shaving be made uniform will be discussed at a meeting on July 18.

Will Try Hassam Pavement.

The Public Service Corporation has requested the Borough Council to make provision for the laying of Hassam pavement between the rails of the tracks on Somerset street, in connection with the block of that material to be laid. The company stands part of the cost of the entire pavement but according to the original plans some other material was to be used in the center of the street. The Public Service officials are anxious to give the Hassam system a thorough trial and may eventually use it on all of its lines.

NEGROES FOUND GUILTY

Johnson and Payne Both Convicted on All Charges as Preferred by Authorities.

ONE SENTENCE PASSED

Injured Man Placed in Charge of Probation Officer and Must Pay All Costs of the Prosecution.

Before Judge Atwater in the Court of Quarter Sessions at Elizabeth, yesterday, Lee Johnson and Thaddeus Payne, the Plainfield negroes who engaged in a shooting affray in a pool room last March, were found guilty as charged; Johnson for assault and battery and Payne on two counts, one for atrocious assault and one for carrying a concealed weapon. Immediately after receiving the verdict, Winfield S. Angleman, counsel for Johnson, moved that his client be sentenced at once, owing to the fact that he has not yet fully recovered from the bullet wound in his body. The court, however, preferred to hold the matter over night and Johnson was locked up the same as Payne. This morning sentence was suspended upon him with the understanding that he pay the costs of the prosecution, remaining in the care of the probation officer until it is done. Payne will be sentenced next week.

Both the trial and sentence of the two men were conducted under a new section of the Crimes act, passed by the Legislature last spring. It holds that where two men engage in a fight both are guilty of assault, one as much as the other. The fact that Payne pleaded self defense was an after-consideration. The sentencing of Johnson to pay the costs of prosecution is a new feature in cases of this kind.

When Johnson was arraigned before the court this morning, he was scored as the aggressor in the fight and the fact he was nearly killed was practically all that brought about the leniency in his punishment. His counsel presented a doctor's certificate showing that he is not yet entirely out of danger and that it will be many weeks before he is able to go to work. He was released from custody as soon as sentence was passed and returned to Plainfield.

Payne is represented by S. S. Swackhamer and he is making every effort to secure light sentence for his client because of the self-defense plea being upheld.

STRIKE AT SINGER'S.

Pipefitters' Helpers Say They Must Have Twenty Cents an Hour.

The helpers of the pipefitters in Singer's at Elizabeth have been out on strike since Monday because an increase of pay was not granted them. The helpers have been getting seventeen cents an hour. They put in a demand for twenty cents an hour. When this was refused they walked out. The pipefitters and their assistants do not number many men. It is their business to look after the steam pipes and other things of that sort throughout the factory.

When the new building was being put up the men had plenty of work to do, as they worked a full day on Saturday, sometimes on Sunday and overtime during the week. Of late there has been no Saturday or Sunday work, and overtime has been scarce. As a result the wages for the week sank much lower, and the helpers put in a bid for more pay per hour. Those who walked out have been replaced by other men.

Zachariah Wilson Injured.

Zachariah Wilson, of Chatham ham street, is carrying his left arm in a sling the result of an accident a few days ago when he was thrown from his bicycle and sustained a fracture of the collar bone. He was returning home from wrok one night, when the forks of his wheel snapped off at the head, and he was thrown a distance of several feet in the roadway. It was with difficulty that he reached home. A physician was called and the broken bones were set.

INGENIOUS METHOD OF GETTING HUGE BOILER INTO BASEMENT OF THEATRE BUILDING

Though it is not exactly what might be called "a great engineering feat," a novel and ingenious method of installing a six-ton high pressure boiler in the basement of the New Plainfield theatre has been adopted by the contractors in charge of the task. There was no opening in the building large enough to admit the ponderous affair and the problem that presented itself was where to make one. After many ways and means had been discussed, it was finally decided to dig a huge trench in Exchange alley, directly against the theatre wall and then cut through the bricks into the basement. As the boiler is fifteen feet long, eight feet high and eight feet wide it meant a great deal of preparation but everything is now in readiness and the job will probably be accomplished today.

The task of lowering the six-ton weight into the trench and then shoving it through the hole in the wall will be in charge of Henry Wierenga. He has arranged a plan for getting it down quickly and contemplates no trouble in eventually landing it on its base. The boiler will have twice the heating capacity of its predecessor and is only one of the many improvements to be installed in the house by Manager Counihan this summer.

PLAINFIELD BOY YOUNGEST MEMBER OF CREW THAT WON 'VARSITY EIGHT RACE

Plainfielders who are interested in collegiate sports and many others who like to see "home talent" preeminent in feats of skill and strength, feel a keen sense of satisfaction in the fact that a local boy was a member of the Cornel crew which won the 'varsity eight race, Wednesday. He is Leonard W. Gavett, son of Street Commissioner Gavett, who rowed No. 5 for the winners in the big event and who is looked upon by college men as one of the best oarsmen who ever sat in a shell.

Though Gavett is only twenty years old his equal in a physical sense would be hard to find. Tall and erect, he sands 6.01 feet and weighs 180 pounds. He is not only the youngest member of the crew but is also the heaviest and there is only one other who is taller than he. L. R. Gracy, who rowed No. 4, stands 6.04 feet but weighs 4 pounds less.

Gavett is now in his third year at the university and since his entrance as a freshman he has made an enviable record both in athletics and general studies. The one has not been neglected at the expense of the other and he is one of the most popular men in the college, while the members of his class hail him as "the best ever." He has upheld '08 in various events on many occasions and has a string of wins to his credit.

DIAMOND DUST.

The important local game tomorrow will be played at Crescent Oval, when the Y. M. C. A. nine will meet Scotch Plains. The last time these teams met the Plains boys were victorious and the association nine has it in for the down-the-line team. George Dupee and Walter Nelson will form the battery for the local aggregation and Frentz and Alberts will be in the points for the visitors. This will be Dupee's first game here this season and there is considerable interest among the fans. The rest of the positions will be filled as usual.

Bound Brook has an off day tomorrow so far as a league game is concerned, however the team has arranged to play an out-of-town team at home.

Knabe, of the Phillies, is one of those players addicted to bringing the fans to their feet with wizard-like feats on the ball field. There is an individuality about his work which is such a notable characteristic of Hal. Chase's playing. In short, he is a card.

Report has it that Mike Lynch, the pitcher released by Pittsburg, is to join the New York Nationals. From Holyoke comes word that Lynch had a number of offers and decided to accept the one from McGraw.

The Detroits get a knockout blow once in awhile, but they come back all the harder for it.

Harry Lumley pushes his bat against a pitcher that suits him with the lazy indifference of a sleepy man putting on his shoes in the morning. As for the ball it doesn't stop going until it has cleared the fence.

What is the matter with "Willie" Deegan? He is not pitching very much these days.

SCHOOL BOARD'S DILEMMA

fore next fall. Sentiment among the members was divided as to whether it would be advisable to build another story on the top of the present building or to add another one-story room to the present structure. However, George Wahl was appointed a committee of one to procure plans and bids from an architect without delay.

Louis Burgmiller, clerk of the board, was authorized to visit Superintendent Shearer, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the board would be complying with the law relative to having but one teacher in each room, by erecting partitions through the room now occupied by two teachers, and thereby making two rooms, with the expectations of making the improvements a year later.

In case Superintendent Shearer decides that this method will not be within the keeping of the law the committeemen will find themselves up a tree and unable to provide more room by the time school reopens in September. Before the improvements can be started it will be necessary for the voters to endorse the action of the board on the matter of appropriations to carry through the project. More time will be taken in submitting the plans to the State Board for their approval.

In talking to a number of citizens before the meeting, last night, a Daily Press reporter discovered that the sentiment was largely in favor of the erection of a new school for first and second year pupils, and it is probable that a call for a public meeting will be made in the near future by the advocates of the Jeffery idea in view of crystallizing the sentiment in this direction.

Committeeman Wahl does not favor the idea of erecting a new school because he says it would cost too much money. "We can fix up the present school for $2,000, where if we went on the other side of the track and built a new one, we would have to buy ground, and go to other expenses," said Mr. Wahl to the Press man.

Mr. Wahl believes in keeping expenses down to rock bottom on other matters also. During the meeting when the committee on teachers reported that slight increases in salaries had been made, Mr. Wahl voiced his disapproval of the course taken by the committee. He inquired of Chairman Fox "why the salaries had been boosted?"

Mr. Fox responded by informing the members that the teachers insisted on advances with threats to quit if they did not receive them.

"These teachers are getting just as bad as the unions, and I don't think they should be allowed to believe that they can pull the members of the board around by their noses any way they like," added Mr. Wahl.

"Well, beef and dresses are getting higher every year," retorted Committeeman Johnson, and the colloquy ended.

Clerk Burgmiller reported a balance of $24.12 on hand, with $22.50 due for janitor's services. Before the meeting closed Mr. Burgmiller was re-elected clerk for another year at an annual salary of $25, and allowance for postage.

MISSING NORTH BRANCH FARMER RE-APPEARS

REJOINS WIFE AND DAUGHTER IN THIS CITY AFTER NINE MONTHS.

Charles C. Sutphin, 40 years old, the farmer who disappeared from his home at North Branch, nine months ago, without any apparent cause, has turned up in this city, where his wife and daughter have been living at the home of John Stryker, an uncle, on Lyman place.

When Sutphin left his home he started to drive to Bloomsburg to buy cattle and the next day his rig was found at Whitehouse, where he had abandoned it at a farm house. That was the last trace relatives could find of him. Mrs. Sutphin refused to believe her husband dead and made a vigorous search for him.

She appealed to the police here for assistance, but their search in Plainfield and surrounding points was in vain. Several weeks ago Mrs. Sutphin asked a New York newspaper to help in the hunt.

Sutphin will talk little about his absence. His wife says he was ill after he went away from home, but his health is better now. He has been in Philadelphia. Mrs. Sutphin is happy over the reunion. Sutphin and his family will reside in this city, the farm at North Branch having been sold in his absence.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. David Williams, of Westfield, is registered at the Normandie Hotel, Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Wahling, of East Front street, are entertaining relatives from Melrose, Mass.

Miss Helen Armstrong, of Duer street, leaves next Tuesday for the country home of A. D. Porter, Kearsarge, N. H., where she will spend the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Muldowney, of Bergen street, the West End, are the parents of a baby daughter who came to their home Wednesday morning.

N. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., of East Front street, who was graduated at West Point this year in the coast artillery department, is ill at his home with tonsilitis.

Arthur Humble, of Somerset street, will leave next month for Jamestown, Va., where he will spend a portion of his vacation. Before he returns he will visit Old Point Comfort, Luray Caverns and Washington.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—Miss Sybil Anderson, of this city, recently gave a violin recital at the residence of Mrs. L. P. Gaston in Somerville.

—A barn on the farm of John Docherty, near Somerville, was burned last night. Two horses and a cow perished in the flames. The loss is about $1,500.

—The Public Service Corporation is laying new ties and rails on Somerset street, preparatory to macadamizing the street and the laying of a block of Hassam pavement on that street.

—Plenty of fine Jersey strawberries and strictly fresh vegetables at Neuman Brothers tomorrow. The assortment at this store is always the largest in the city and selected especially for the local trade.

—Ralph Conover, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Conover, of Park place, narrowly escaped breaking his arm Tuesday afternoon while playing on the sidewalk near his home with several playmates. One of the little fellows gave him a push accidentally and he fell in the gutter, striking his arm on the curbing. At first it was thought the bones of the arm were broken, but Dr. P. J. Zeglio discovered only a bad sprain.

Moving Pictures End Tomorrow.

Reliable Money Lenders

Forget Your Money Troubles—We Can Show You How

Start life afresh. Borrow from us to pay the several you owe and make payments in keeping with your income. By so doing you keep your credit good. Ease up the pressure on yourself and have a chance to "turn around" in other things needed for the family.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

MORAL:—Do likewise and avoid worry. Come in and we will talk it over with you, or drop a postal and a confidential representative will call on you.

SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.

SPRING AILMENTS.

A man and a house need the same thing in spring—a good cleaning out. A certain amount of impurities have gathered in both during the winter. I am no authority for house cleaning. So far as the man is concerned Cooper's New Discovery taken for two weeks will bring the desired result. It will positively do these three things—clean out the stomach and bowels, tone up the system generally, and bring back the snap to body and mind that now seem dull and worn out. Try it and see if you won't be as pleased as Mr. Hull, whose letter I quote below:

MR. A. W. HULL.

"I suffered a general breaking down of the system. Had no appetite, poor digestion and was constipated. I lost ambition and took no interest in anything. Nothing I could do seemed to give me relief until upon a friend's advice I began to use Cooper's New Discovery. It helped me from the start. Now I am able to do as much work as the next one and I enjoy it. I have a hearty appetite and am stronger and better every way. Your New Discovery medicine is certainly the best tonic and system builder I have ever known." A. W. Hull, 142 Porter St., Detroit, Mich.

These are the famous medicines with which Mr. Cooper recently created such a stir in Chicago. His demonstrations there attracted wide attention. We are agents.

DUNELLEN WITHDRAWS FROM AMATEUR LEAGUE

RARITAN A. C. WILL FILL THE VACANCY AND COMPLETE SEASON'S SCHEDULE.

The Dunellen Baseball Club withdrew from the Inter-City Amateur League at a meeting of the league officials, last night, and the Raritan A. C., of Raritan, will fill the vacancy, completing the Dunellen schedule. Ever since the league season started there has been more or less doubt as to whether Dunellen would hold out. Jesse Ayers was the first manager chosen, but before the season opened he retired and James Penney, of this city, who organized the Plainfield A. C., succeeded Ayers and he took many of his players to Dunellen.

The time for signing new players was up and as most of the desirable men had been taken by the other clubs in the league, the Dunellens had difficulty in securing desirable men. This had been a handicap to the club and finally realizing that the club was no match for the other teams, Manager Penney withdrew last night. No plans were adopted for the distribution of the Dunellen players in case any of them are desired by the other clubs in the league, but this matter will probably be attended to. The league waived all claim to the club and players.

The Raritans are considered a strong aggregation and should be an equal match for the other clubs. The only disadvantage is the distance to be travelled between Plainfield and Raritan to play the games. This will not be a serious handicap, however, if the Raritans play good ball and make it interesting for the other teams, which it is believed it will. Tomorrow the Clinton Avenues will play its first game with Raritan at the latter place.

WEST BEATS EAST IN TENNIS TOURNEY

MISS E. WILDEY OUT IN SINGLES—SISTERS ARE IN DOUBLES YET.

East met the West in the Women's National Championship Lawn Tennis tournament yesterday at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, and when the struggle was ended the East had to acknowledge defeat. The big match of the day was in the third round of the singles between Mrs. Barger-Wallach, of New York, and Miss Carrie B. Neely, the Cincinnati champion and the leading player of the middle West. Miss Neely took the first set, 6-2. The second set was stubbornly fought, Mrs. Wallach finally winning, 10-8.

In the women's singles, Miss Rachel Harlan, of Philadelphia, defeated Miss Edna Wildey, Plainfield Country Club, 6-1, 6-2. In the women's doubles, second round, the Misses Wildey defeated Miss McFadden and Miss Agnes Groome, 8-6, 6-4. Plainfield was again to the fore in the first round for the mixed doubles, when Miss Mildred Wildey and W. Morris Tilden, defeated Miss Coates and A. E. I. Jackson, 6-4, 6-4. In the second round Miss Edna Wildey and D. Mathey defeated Miss Borda and A. Thayer, 6-2, 6-2. The matches will be concluded today, when it is expected that the Plainfield representatives will continue to make a good showing among the other crack players remaining in the tournament.

BURKE KNOCKS PERKINS

Meeting He Addresses Invites Assemblyman to Debate Local Option.

TEN IN THE AUDIENCE

But Invitation Is In Name of Citizens of Roselle and Roselle Park—Rev. Stifler's Talk.

Assemblyman Randolph Perkins did not appear at the meeting in the Roselle High School Auditorium to discuss the local option question, but J. Frank Burke was afforded the opportunity to tell about 10 persons what he thought of the New Jersey Legislature, legislators in general and Mr. Perkins in particular. His opinions were not complimentary, though those which concerned Mr. Perkins were rather in sinuations than opinions.

Mr. Burke, who is superintendent of the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League, was introduced by the Rev. James F. Stifler, pastor of the First Baptist church. He dwelt at length on the various features of the local option bill, quoted from the last presentment of the Grand Jury, and told of his experiences in other States while fighting for the cause. He went over the recent controversy between himself and Mr. Perkins, and caused much laughter when he quoted a statement from one of the Assemblyman's letters which declared in effect that he didn't care how much Mr. Burke said against him down at Trenton but he objected to his spreading the same statements all over his home county.

"He's afraid, and they're all afraid of publicity," declared the speaker. "But the church of God has become up-to-date, and it has decided to have a lobby, a Christian lobby if you please, to turn on the searchlight."

The newspapers came in for a bit of praise from the Rev. Mr. Stifler at this point.

In the course of his talk Mr. Burke quoted from Solomon, that passage which speaks of the servants riding on horses, while the masters walked. He declared that nowadays the same condition existed, only that the servants used automobiles, and perhaps violated the speed laws. This, of course, was an obvious reference to the Union county Assemblyman and caused some mild laughter. Continuing Mr. Burke said that the attitude of the "servants" on the liquor and other questions perhaps explained why they were able to ride in autos while their masters walked.

Mr. Burke told of a conversation with Mr. Perkins in Trenton, in which he had tried to induce him to support the local option bill. He declared he had been interrupted by a Mr. Clark, who, he said, was a go-between for Boss Bob Davis, of Hudson, representing the "interests," and the legislators. He said that Mr. Clark had spoken a few words to the effect that legislation affecting the "interests" was up, and the Assemblyman had quickly followed him into a room where other representatives of the "interests" were.

The local option question was presented with a force and eloquence by Mr. Burke and evidently favorably impressed the audience. The main principle is that every man should have the right to vote on the question as to whether saloons shall exist or not.

Mr. Burke said the only reason the church hadn't won out was because of the Liquor Dealers' Association which had the Legislature tied hand and foot, had an unlimited corruption fund and had been there seventy-five years ahead. Incidentally he declared that he admired the saloon men for their up-to-date methods.

By a unanimous vote it was decided to invite Mr. Perkins to attend an other meeting to debate the local option question. The following was the resolution adopted:

"Resolved, That we, the citizens of Roselle-Roselle Park invite our Assemblyman, Randolph Perkins, to come to this hall and address us on the subject of local option and to meet upon the platform some man whom we may select from our residents."

Will Hold Patriotic Service.

Patriotic services will be held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, tomorrow night, and the church will be decorated appropriately for the occasion. Special music will be rendered by the choir and the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson will preach on the subject, "Our Country's Call to Put Down the Enemies to Our Flag." ASSESSORS TO SIT TO COMPLETE REVISION

SESSIONS IN COUNCIL CHAMBER BEGINNING ON MONDAY.

The Plainfield Board of Assessors announces that it will meet in the Common Council rooms on North avenue, every day during the week commencing Monday, between the hours of 9 and 12 a. m. and 2 and 5 p. m., Thursday, July 4, and Saturday excepted, for the correction and revision of tax assessments for the year 1907.

During that time all taxpayers in the city will have an opportunity to inspect the tax books and the board will listen to any complaint regarding assessments. The holding of public meetings will save the taxpayers the trouble of going to Elizabeth and appearing before the county board of taxation.

The assessors completed their task this week of assessing all the personal and real property in the city, and before sending the books to the county board, where the assessments are examined and the county rate is established, the local board will give taxpayers a chance to learn what their assessments are and to receive any suggestions as to possible changes.

FESTIVAL A SUCCESS.

Outdoor Affair for Benefit Faith Chapel Liberally Patronized.

Under the auspices of the Baraca Class and one of the men's Bible classes, of Faith chapel, a successful lawn festival was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. LaRue, on East Second street, last night. The grounds were decorated with Japanese and Chinese lanterns and flags and there were several attractive booths. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the chapel and liberal patronage was accorded. All of the members of the Baraca and Bible classes assisted in making the festival a success. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the chapel building fund.

The general committee in charge comprised Mrs. Gilbert VanNest, Mrs. Charles Griffen, Mrs. C. E. Myers, Mrs. W. C. LaRue, Mrs. William Peck. Those at the lemonade booth were the Mrs. Helen Myers, Bessie Carson, Verna Stewart, Christin Viebrock and Bertha Van Nest. The decorations were arranged by C. E. Myers, Christopher Utzinger and Gilbert Van Nest and the refreshment committee comprised F. S. Stewart, William Conger and U. B. Crane.

Mayor Fisk Acquires More Property.

The J. J. H. Poillon property at W. Seventh street and Madison avenue, and which was owned by H. B. Coombe of Madison avenue, has been sold to Mayor Charles J. Fisk and A. N. Atterbury. The property has a frontage of 107 feet on West Seventh street, adjoining Mr. Atterbury's property, and a depth of 200 feet on Madison avenue, adjoining Alexander Millar's property. The property was purchased for speculative purpose, it being the intention of the purchasers to prevent the erection of any undesirable houses in that neighborhood.

Miss Helen Whitney and Miss Nan Wilson, teachers in the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, took their classes on a picnic yesterday. The day was spent on the mountains, where the children and their teachers had a jolly good time. The party returned home about 5.30 o'clock.

SAVED BY HIS FATHER

Five-year-old Kenneth Egany Rescued From Peril of Flames.

HAD SET HIMSELF AFIRE

Usual Result Followed Game With Matches—Father's Nearness and Prompt Action All That Prevented Serious Accident.

Kenneth Egany, the five-year-old son of Thomas Egany, 701 West Fourth street, was severely burned on the right knee at 7.30 o'clock this morning as a result of playing with matches. He was saved from more serious injury by his father, who was fortunately nearby when the boy's garment burst into flame.

Kenneth was playing on the back porch. His father, a short distance away, was cutting the grass in the yard. The boy, unknown to his parents, had secured possession of some matches, and he started fooling with them. He set fire to a piece of paper, and in watching that burn up he went too near it. He was wearing a "Rough Rider" suit, loosely made of thin cloth, and the flapping trousers caught fire swiftly as a tongue of flame touched them.

The boy screamed as the fire flared up, and his father's attention was instantly draw to him. Egany dashed for his son, and caught him up without thought of his own danger. He rolled the boy on the damp grass, and put out the flames.

Kenneth's right knee was badly burned. Dr. A. K. Brennan, of Grant avenue, who was summoned, dressed the injury. He said it was severe, but not dangerous.

BRICK PAVE FRIENDS CLAIM SEVEN VOTES.

Believe They Have Strength Enough to Pass Ordinance Monday Night.

The July meeting of the Common Council will be a lively one from all accounts. The brick paving ordinance will come up for final reading after a public hearing, and the contracts for macadamizing eleven different streets, as well as the contract for building a portion of the Plainfield avenue storm sewer will be awarded. It was reported today that seven votes had been secured in favor of the brick ordinance as now drafted and adopted on two readings, but still there is likely to be even a greater division of opinion when the vote is taken.

Councilman R. I. Tolles, who has just returned from Mt. Clemens, Mich., where brick pavement is in use and has been for some time, will probably have something to say on the subject. Councilman Daniel T. Ginna, chairman of the street committee, who has the ordinance in charge, recently returned from a trip in the west, where he inspected various kinds of pavements in a number of cities, and he will most likely have something to say about his trip. It is also understood that some of the other members of the Council have changed their views and will present new opinions as to the kind of pavement that is desirable.

Dr. Chambliss Addresses Meeting.

The Young Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held the last meeting of the season yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. David Sutphen, of Madison avenue. Rev. Dr. Chambliss addressed the meeting, giving a helpful talk. A social half-hour concluded the meeting, when refreshments were served.

—The Baptist excursion committee has eliminated all the unpleasant features of past years and can assure the public a fine time on July 11.

PUBLIC SERVICE TO PAY ITS FIRST DIVIDEND

CONCERN 4 YEARS OLD TO MAKE INITIAL PAYMENT.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey in Newark late yesterday afternoon the following announcement was made:

"The Board of Directors of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, at its meeting today, declared a dividend of one per cent on the capital stock of the company. The dividend is payable on June 9."

At the same time a meeting of the Board of Directors of the United Electric Company of New Jersey, one of the subsidiary concerns of the Public Service, was held, and later this notice was given out:

"The Board of Directors of the United Electric Company of New Jersey, at its meeting today, declared its special dividend of five per cent on its capital stock out of the accumulated net earnings since the organization of the company on June 1, 1899. The dividend is payable tomorrow, June 29."

These are the first dividends which have been declared by either organization since its formation. The Public Service Corporation was formed on May 6, 1903. The one per cent dividend is said to be a quarterly payment.

Under its charter the authorized capital stock of the Public Service Corporation is $25,000,000, of which $12,250,000 has been issued. In addition, it has outstanding $6,250,000 in convertible, five per cent notes.

BOYS WHO STOLE BIKE SENT TO REFORMATORY.

In the Somerset County Courts in Somerville, yesterday, James Mangino and Benjamin Lombardo, of Bound Brook, pleaded guilty to stealing a bicycle from John H. King's van in Bound Brook some time ago and were sent yb Judge Schenck to the State home for boys at Jamesburg. John Lombardo, of the same place, pleaded the same way to the same charge and was sentenced to be in charge of Probation Officer John B. Osbourn for one year.

When the ocense was committed, John H. King was moving the household effects of Oscar Sharp from Somerville to Newark and the van stood over night in Bound Brook. The boys took the bike and repainted it, put on an old pair of pedals and an old seat, with the result that the owner of the wheel himself could scarcely recognize it when it was recovered by County Detective Totten, who made the arrest.

The case of Joseph Sansone, charged with contempt of court, was again postponed for one week.

PLAYED STREET PIANO.

Raritan Business Man's Successful Recital On a Hand Organ.

Two scraggly-looking Italians were drumming out indefferent tunes from a street piona in Somerville yesterday afternoon, receiving little or no remuneration, when James C. Wyckoff, a prominent business and society man of Raritan, ordered them away from the instrument and handled the crank himself for about fifteen minutes.

Some sprightly music issued from the "organ" and a large crowd collected to witness the performance. When Mr. Wyckoff got tired he took off his hat and went among the audience and took up a collection. The Italians were enriched by several dollars as a result of Mr. Wyckoff's good work.

Blows Out His Brains.

Despondency, caused by the death of a favorite son, coupled with other family troubles, caused John Stark, a m ason, fifty-five years old, to blow out his brains yesterday with a shotgun at his residence, 327 Fay avenue, Elizabeth. It was several hours before his act was discovered and the police notified.

SCREEN LAW AND POLICE

That Section of the Law to Be Rigidly Enforced in Elizabeth.

REPORT TO PROSECUTOR

They Now Know Where They Stand, Chief Says, and Will Act—Much Excitement at County Seat.

All violations of the screen clause of the bishops' law will be noted by the police on all Sundays hereafter and reported to Prosecutor English and the Excise Board according to a statement made by Chief of Police Tenney yesterday. The police have likewise been notified to keep a sharp lookout for violations of the law by selling liquor on Sunday, and wherever possible to make arrests.

The police compelled a pretty general obedience of the screen clause last Sunday, but it will be even more strictly obeyed tomorrow, if promises are made good. Previous to Justice Swayze's charge regarding screens the police were not sure just what inns and taverns had the right to keep the interior of their bars concealed on Sunday. They now intend to report all inns and taverns that have not ten spare rooms for the accommodation of guests as violators of the law if screens or other obstructions to a full view are found in their windows. There had previously been an assumption that inns and taverns, regardless of their accommodations, had a right to keep up their screens.

The police officials have also been in doubt as to the proper authorities to whom violations of the screen clause should be reported. The method proposed, reporting to both the Prosecutor and the Excise Board, hardly decides the question, but it answers the purpose.

None perhaps is more interested in the outcome of the case which is being tried in Trenton to test the legality of the screen clause in the bishops' law than Chief Tenney. The Chief said yesterday morning, however, that until an adverse decision was given by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the clause would be enforced there.

There is no denying, not even by the officials themselves, that the instructions of Justice Swayze and the work of the Grand Jury have at least cleared the air and put it squarely up to the authorities to prevent violations of the provisions of the bishops' bill.

Just what the police will do regarding the sale of liquor in clubs, if that should continue in spite of the Grand Jury's instructions, they find it hard to figure out. None but members are admitted to clubs and nobody expects them to "peach" even if liquor should be sold contrary to law. The police say that while they may be morally certain that liquor is sold in some clubs they must have legal evidence before they can take action.

No club in Elizabeth, under the court's recent instructions, has the right to sell liquor now at any time. It is expected that some will apply for licenses soon.

JURY ACQUITS OLSEN OF ASSAULT CHARGE

DECLARED NOT GUILTY AFTER A FEW MINUTES DELIBERATION.

Within a few minutes after testimony in the case had been summed up, a jury in the Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday, declared Charles Olsen, of Sotch Plains, not guilty of the atrocious assault charge on which he was tried. His discharge from custody was ordered immediately afterward.

Olsen's arrest followed an affray at Scotch Plains during which he stabbed Warren MacCauley in the abdomen. It was shown by the defendant's counsel that he had been persistently followed about by MacCauley and that he finally cut him when he saw there was no other way to escape being attacked. It was also shown that MacCauley bears a very bad reputation for quarreling and fighting and at the present time is awaiting the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of breaking and entering. On the other hand, Olsen's character and standing in the community were proven to be of the best.

Olsen was represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., and S. S. Swackhamer, the latter summing up the case and presenting the facts to the jury.

Success attended the ice cream and strawberry festival of the Girls' Mission Club of the Congregational church last night. It was held on the lawn before the church. The attendance and the proceeds were large. The latter will go into the mission fund of the club.

The committee in charge was made up of the Misses Ethel McIntosh, Marjory Phillips, Maud Emmons, and Edith Bentley. They were assisted in serving by the Misses Edna Smith, Ida Dealaman, Laura Baker and Miss Lillian Whitall.

PLEAD TO INDICTMENTS.

Elizabeth Ice Dealer's Bail, $1,000, the Laggest Fixed in Union Court.

There were several arraignments yesterday in the Union County Court before Judge Edward S. Atwater. Charles Weidenhoffed, indicted for assault and battery on former Alderman George W. Horre, of Elizabeh, pleaded not guilty, and his bail was fixed at $200. George Fox, an Elizabeth ice dealer, indicted for atrocious assault on Policeman William E. Lloyd, pleaded not guilty, and his bail was fixed at $1,000.

Clarence Cree, of Elizabeth, was indicted for cruelty to animals, but Assistant Prosecutor John K. English informed the court that from the evidence he had obtained the State could not secure a conviction. Therefore, the indictment was thrown out.

Epworth League Lawn Party.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church, together with its friends to the number of about sixty, enjoyed the last social of the season, last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull, of East Second street. The affair was in the nature of a lawn party and the evening was spent in playing all sorts of games. The grounds were decorated with lanterns and American flags. Miss Helen Whitney, as chairman of the social committee, had charge of the affair, while Miss Louise Sayre planned the evening's entertainment. Refreshments consisting of lemonade and cake were served by the committee.

DROWNED IN MILL RACE

Two-Year-Old Girl Meets Death in Shadow of Her Home.

NO CHANCE FOR LIFE

Fell From Bank Unseen, and Dead When Absence Was Discovered—Grief-Stricken Parents In a Frenzy.

Mary Roussio, two years old, daughter of Oresta Roussio, an Italian laborer, was drowned in the mill race at the Watchung avenue bridge yesterday afternoon. Her four-year-old sister, who had been sent out to watch her, and an Italian man who was walking along the bank, were looking in another direction when the child fell in, and she died before a hand could be extended to help her.

Mary was the youngest of three children. The other child was sent out with her from the Roussio home, back of the Y. M. C. A., near the bank of the raceway, for an airing, shortly before three o'clock. Salvi Viaccho, a boarder in the Roussio home, was walking up and down the bank not far from them. The elder child relaxed her vigilance over Mary and allowed the tot to toddle away alone. Viaccho walked in another direction, with his back to Mary, and the little one was unwatched.

Suddenly Viaccho heard a scream. "Mary is gone," cried the derelict "little mother." Viaccho ran to her, and looked about. A second glance rested on the edge of a tiny dress that showed above the waters of the race.

He seized hold of it and drew the body of Mary to the bank. The child was stone dead. Viaccho ran with the body to the house, and then sped to Dr. A. C. Gesswein's office. The physician responded at once, but there was nothing he could do. He said the child must have died swiftly. It took but little water to fill the tiny lungs and still her heart.

Mrs. Roussio's grief over the death of Mary was pitiable. The father came home a few minutes after the accident, and his frenzy almost equalled that of the mother. When Policeman Charles Flynn, who was sent to investigate the case when it was reported to the police a few minutes after the drowning, reached the place, husband and wife were carrying on like people possessed.

County Physician Westcott was notified of the drowning. Permit for burial was given today. The child will be buried tomorrow in St. Mary's cemetery.

Dunham; inside sentinel, William Frech; outside sentinel, George GaNun; representative to State Council, William Waters; chaplain, P. H. Latourette. The installation will take place Friday night, July, at which time there will be initiation, one member being elected last night.

Had Fruiterer's Shoe.

William Van Liew, who has been arrested several times for drunkenness, was sent to jail for sixty days by Judge Runyon in the city court this morning. He was arrested last night by Patrolman Messler, after K. Fatouros, a Park avenue fruit dealer, had reported the alleged theft of a shoe by Van Liew from his store. Van Liew had the missing shoe in a bundle of old clothes he was carrying when Messler stopped him. He said he didn't know how it got there.

Furnishing Fund Over $1,000.

The proceeds from Warren chapel's very successful strawberry festival Thursday night, placed the total of the furnishing fund of the new chapel over the $1,000 mark. It was erroneously stated that the amount in hand was about $850. The chapel societies had set September as the time limit in which to secure $1,000 for the purpose but the energy with which everyone worked resulted in accomplishing it over two months ahead.

WEDDING RING LOST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS RECOVERED THROUGH ITEM IN THE DAILY PRESS

Through an article in The Daily Press, Tuesday, on the fifty-first anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Larrabee, 45 Willow avenue, with a reference to their golden wedding anniversary on June 25, last year, the recovery of a wedding ring lost by Mrs. Larrabee twenty-five years ago was brought about.

When Mr. and Mrs. Larrabee first came to Plainfield they lived in the house at Westervelt and Fairview avenues, now occupied by Andrew M. Winckler. While living there Mrs. Larrabee lost her wedding ring, and after a long search gave up hope of finding it. A few days ago, while setting out a plant in his garden, Mr. Winckler came upon a plain gold ring, which, when washed, revealed the inscription of a date, but no clue to the owner. He showed the ring to members of his family, among them a granddaughter.

The latter saw the article on the anniversary in The Daily Press, and remembering that Mr. Larrabee formerly lived in the house, was struck with the correspondence of the date of the anniversary with that of the inscription on the ring. She cut out the item, and sent it to Mr. Winckler, calling his attention to the coincidence of the dates.

Mr. Winckler was only too pleased to take the opportunity to restore the ring. It proved to be, without doubt, the lost wedding ring. Mrs. Larrabee regards the ring as priceless, and is correspondingly overjoyed at its recovery.

MARTINSVILLE FARMER ASTONISHES PARK AVENUE WITH A CIRCUS RIDER'S FLIP-FLOP

Edward Blazier, a well-known resident of Martinsville who tills the soil for a livelihood, never studied circus riding as a side line but he gave an exhibition of hurdling on Park avenue this morning that would have put many a Knight of the Arena to shame. He was about to drive under the railroad bridge with a young and skittish horse when one of the lines broke and the animal swung around, heading full tilt for Mrs. Denton's flower establishment.

Blazier leaped from his seat directly upon the horse's back and was just about to grasp the bridle when the wagon struck a hydrant. The animal stopped as if an air-brake had been clapped on him but Brazier kept on going. He cut through the atmosphere like a fleet-winged bird and then described a "double, death-defying, demoniacal loop-the-loop," much the same as the young woman who gets a thousand dollars a minute more or less for risking her neck in a whirling automobile.

A Miss Sanders, also of Martinsville, who had been sharing the seat with Blazier, made a wild scramble to gather up what would be left of him but he was on his feet before she had taken three steps. He was somewhat jarred and had a suspicious shaking in the knees, otherwise he was unhurt.

Several telephone linemen had in the meantime caught the horse and with rope and wire put the damaged wagon back in shape. As Blazier and Miss Sanders started to go away, one of the helpers exclaimed with admiration:

"Say Boss, if I could make that turn like you did—me for Barnum & Bailey."

It is understood that Keith & Proctor have agreed to give a handsome sum for the theatre, and that it is the intention of the new managers to entirely renovate the house and improve the appearance of the entrance.

No date has been fixed for the opening. Mr. Jacobs said that full particulars would probably be given out Monday.

KEEPS HIS MARRIAGE WAGER.

Ernest F. Hilsdorf, of Woodbridge, Paid $25 to Each of Three Friends When Wedded.

Woodbridge, June 29.—Ernest T. Hilsdorf, formerly a well known resident of Woodbridge, but now of Perth Amboy, and Miss Florence M. Roberts, of Luzerne, Pa., were married Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride. The grandfather of the groom, John Hilsdorf, of Woodbridge, attended the wedding.

Mr. Dayton was the first, and he paid $60 to his friends. Then the wager was raised to $25, and a few days since Mr. Hilsdorf sent a check for that amount to each of the other three parties to the wager. KNOW IT WELL.

Familiar Features Well Known to Hundreds of Plainfield Citizens.

A familiar burden in every home,
The burden of a "bad back."
A lame, a weak or an aching back
Tells you of kidney ills.
Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you.

Here is Plainfield testimony to prove it:

Rhoda A. Martin, of 24 Jackson avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had pain in my back and loins for about a year or more, no doubt caused by my kidneys being out of order. I felt it more in the morning, just after getting up or if I did any stooping or lifting. Notwithstanding the fact that I took all kinds of medicines I never found anything which helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at L. W. Randolph's drug store. They not only removed the pain, but they strengthened me in other ways." (Statement made in January, 1901).

Statement Confirmed.

On July 22, 1905, Mrs. Martin's daughter said: "The testimonial given for publication four years ago was true in regard to the benefit my mother derived from Doan's Kidney Pills, and today she is as ready and willing to repeat what she therein said as she was after using your medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TRAINED ANIMAL TRUST.

Bostock to Head It—Will Have Arenas Here and In Europe.

Norfolk, Va., June 29.—A new trust is in process of formation. It will be known as the Arenic Exhibition Company, and the head of it will be Frank C. Bostock, the animal king. The capitalization will be £1,000,000, and most of the capital has been subscribed by English and European admirers of Mr. Bostock. Some of his American friends are in it, too.

Mr. Bostock, in discussing the new trust today, stated that it would control 90 per cent. of the trained wild animals in existence. He has already arranged for arenas in the following cities: Boston, New York (Coney Island), Rochester, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Atlantic City. The arena at Pine Beach Park will also be included in the circuit.

The European arenas will be the Paris Hippodrome, one at Blackpool, England, and at Berlin, Vienna, Rome and Madrid.

CARE OF THE FEET.

The springtime has a notable effect upon the human body. The harmless little ill known as "spring fever" seems to about cover all the various ways in which the system is disturbed. Among the discomforts of this season there is considerable annoyance from the feet. They swell and bur and grow very tired and weary. Because of the pressure against the shoes there is a great deal of pain if such a thing as corns is present.

Because these ills are not serious is no reason why the discomfort should not be relieved. The first thing to be considered is the shoes. At the earliest sign of fever in the feet lighter shoes should be put on, also from a quarter to a half size large. A good plan is to wear low shoes, and if the weather is cool protect the ankles with gaiters. These are beter than his shoes, because the feet are freer and thre is better ventilation. Change the shoes as many times a day as possible. When indoors wear slippers. Wash the feet night and morning in warm water and good soap. It is a good plan to give them a cold bath afterward, rubbing briskly to tone the skin. Bathe them when tired with clear alcohol, and before going out dust them with a good talcum powder.

MORE THAN HE COULD HANDLE.

Brother Jones Was a Few Thousand Beyond His Capacity.

It was a little out-of-the-way church just after the foot washing had been observed, which is a custom followed by that particular religious sect of people, that the preacher announced that the congregation would join in singing hymn No. 23, "My Soul, Be on Thy Guard; Ten Thousand Foes," etc. Jones, a red-faced, broad-shouldered giant, tried to put on a lot of energy and sing tenor, for this was a special occasion, and he seemed to be the whole church, since he was musical director, and the only choir they had, as well as janitor and deacon; in fact, he did everything but preach. Jones rose up and in stentorian tones began to sing in a pitch too high. When he got to the second line ("The ten thousand foes," etc.) it was necessary for his voice to rise beyond his capacity, and he broke down. The congregation began to titter, and a brother in the front row said: "'Pears to me like you're a leetle too high." And the old gentleman in his shirt sleeves, over in the amen corner, rose up with a judicial air and drawled out: "S'pose we just try 5,000."—Judge's Library.

HAD BORROWED A PAST.

Pittsburg Man's Unique Scheme for Pleasing His Bride.

There is a man in Pittsburg who will be married in a short while, and will occupy the house a few rooms of which he has used during his bachelor days. He takes the greatest pleasure in showing his intimate friends about the place, and is especially delighted at the astonishment they express when his own "den" is reached. He has always been a quiet, studious fellow, but as refitted the room gives the appearance of the lounging place of a regular rounder. There are racks of long pipes; photographs of actresses are stuck about the chimney glass; a shelf of beer steins runs all the way around the room, and a few feminine gloves, handkerchiefs, and fans are scattered about. "Great Scott, Jack!" the last visitor gasped, "where did you get this outfit, and why?" "Bought out a college fellow," was the complacent reply. "Just think how pleased that dear little girl will be when she sees all this truck, and thinks how much wickedness she has won me away from!"—Harper's Weekly.

Sleep and Old Age.

There is no question that the quantity of sleep required steadily diminishes from infancy to old age. This is a rather interesting exception to the general rule that, as in so many matters, old age returns to the needs of infancy. As regards sleep, old age is more remote in its needs from infancy than in any other period of life. If elderly people obtain good sleep during the first few hours, and if they have not lost that delight in reading which we all had in youth, but which so many of us curiously lose, their case is not to be grieved over. The special value of the earliest hours of sleep, by the way, has been proved by psychological experiment. The popular phrase "beauty sleep" is well warranted. It is the early (the deepest) hours of sleep that make for health and beauty.

A Queer Habit.

A New Jersey dog has a most peculiar habit, which is that regularly every Sunday and holiday he fights with some of his canine friends. Ordinary days he is the most quiet and peaceable dog imaginable, and would no more think of picking a quarrel than of refusing a bone. But always on Sundays and holidays that it is he celebrates. Out he starts spoiling for a fight, tail erect and hair bristling. He never fails to find one, either! Why he does this no one has ever been able to find out, but there seems to be something in the air on those special days that excites his fighting instincts, and he never misses an opportunity.

A Plant Prophet.

There has been found recently in Cuba a strange plant which has extraordinary powers in forecasting not only atmospheric, but seismic disturbances. When these are to occur twigs and leaves perform peculiar movements, each having its definite significance. By observing them weather forecasts can be made from two to seven days ahead, and earthquake forecasts as much as 26 days in advance over an area of 300 square miles. Volcanic eruption and accumulations of fire damp in mines can also be predicted.

Scientific Farming.

A Scottish laird took his new plowman to task for the wavering furrows which were the result of his work. "Your drills are not nearly as straight as those Angus made," he said, severely. "He would not have left such a glebe as this." "Angus didna ken his work," said Tammas, calmly, contemplating his employer with an indulgent gaze. "Ye see, when the drills is crookit the sun gets in on a' sides, an' 'tis then ye get early 'taties."

Sunshine the Great Disinfectant.

Let plenty of sunshine into your house. Sunshine is the greatest of disinfectants. It will also discourage "bugs" of all kinds, great and small. No room is fit to inhabit if the sun doesn't shine full into it for a couple of hours daily. Carpets and hangings? Yes, of course it will fade them. If you value your carpets and hangings more than the health of yourself and family by all means keep out the sun.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

F. B. Fisk has given a prize for competition at the Nassau Country Club to be played for in July and August, sixteen to qualify at handicap medal play before July 7. A program is out for a mixed foursome on the course July 4, and for weekly contests until September.

Special cups to supplement the Saturday competitions at the Ardsley Club will furnish sport on holidays for the members. July 4 the play will be for H. H. Vail's cup, September 2 for Franklin Q. Brown's cup, and on Thanksgiving Day for the Gilbert Colgate cup. Harry Holbrook and Robert James Eidlitz have also presented cups. The Ardsley tournament committee this year is made up of H. S. Brooks, J. C. Mahon and L. M. Greer.

At the Plainfield Country Club today there will be finals for the June cup, play for the Scratch, Golf Committee and Green Committee cups. The weekly dinner-dance at the clubhouse will be an attraction tonight.

Plainfield has gained considerable prominence this season in the golf and tennis world, representatives of the Plainfield Country Club being factors in a number of open events on the links and tennis courts.

Raymond B. Carroll, one of the crack golfers of the Park Golf Club, visits the Westfield Golf Club frequently, where he is making low scores in the various events. In the open tournament held recently at the Plainfield Country Club, Carroll entered from the Westfield club.

There is no more ardent golfer in this part of the State than C. W. McCutchen, of the Park Golf Club, and his scores are generally among the lowest returned by contestants.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Park Golf Club, is getting back to his usual form and he is pressing other members of the club for honors in the various events scheduled each week.

While she is not in the good form that marked her play last season, Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers is playing an excellent game of golf this year and generally finishes among the leaders.

DIAMOND DUST.

Jack Peacock, who pitched one game for the Dunellen team, should be signed, if possible by one of the other league teams. He is too good a player to escape.

President Powers administered a severe dose of medicine to Tim Flood, of the Toronto Eastern League Club, for assaulting an umpire. He expelled him from the league and now if he wants to play ball he will have to seek an outlaw league team. Flood was given fifteen days in jail for his offense.

Y. M. C. A. and Scotch Plains at Crescent Oval, this afternoon. It should be one of the best games of the season. George Dupee will pitch for the locals.

The Clinton Avenues will journey to Raritan this afternoon to meet the new league team at that place. The Plainfield boys are going prepared to score the first victory over the new team. Randolph and O'Loughlin will be the battery.

The Raritan A. C., which has taken Dunellen's place in the amateur league, will be at a disadvantage if it takes the standing held by Dunellen in the league.

Roger Bresnahan has left the hospital in Cincinnati, where he was knocked out by a pitched ball and has gone to his home in Toledo to recuperate.

What is the matter with "Christy" Mathewson this season? On Thursday Wiltse had to relieve him in Philadelphia and besides he is not nearly as effective as two years ago.

Unusual features of Thursday's results were that the two Boston teams won on the same day and the two Chicago teams lost.

Toronto still holds the lead in the Eastern League with twenty-nine victories and eighteen defeats. Buffalo and Jersey City are in second and third position with Newark in fourth place.

THE MAN FOR GOVERNOR.

The announcement of Sheriff Sommer's candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination has caused much discussion throughout the State and as might be expected there is a wide diversity of opinion over the merits of the man for the place. As the Newark Evening Star says, "If the Republican organization in the State is to do effective work in the campaign and election this year it must harmonize its differences and unify its forces." But that paper does not go far enough when it says: "A candidate acceptable to the people, if fixed upon, would do much to unify the party." He must not only be "acceptable to the people" but must be their own choice. Any such thing as "fixing upon" a candidate this fall will not do. For the time being at least, the people seem determined to do the "fixing upon" and are not going to delegate that prerogative to a few self-chosen leaders. There must be in all quarters of the State a practical unanimity upon the fitness of a particular individual and the expression of the delegates at the State convention must represent the true idea of the masses who select them as their spokesmen. Nor does the Star go far enough when it says that the requisite qualifications of the candidate must be those of a good presence, cleanliness, ability to do good campaign work and an unblemished record. We venture to add that the candidate must have previously demonstrated ample executive ability and a backbone stiff enough to do the right thing at all times in the face of the powerful influences at work to swerve him from the true path of duty.

If what the Jersey City Journal says is correct Sheriff Sommer has excellent qualifications. The paper, in paying tribute to the Newarker, declares that he is "a lawyer of ability and there is no doubt that he would make a good governor, for the sense of responsibility would tone down much radicalism." He has made a reputation as a man of decided opinion in the right line and he can always be trusted by the people. Notwithstanding all this, the Journal expresses its view that he would not secure the hearty support of all Republicans. This is unfortunately true for Mr. Sommer has probably antagonized a large faction of the party during his public career. But be as it may, he is the kind of man that must be named and as there are dozens of equally prominent and equally well qualified men in the party there should be no trouble in an unanimous choice. Factional warfare portends bitter strife and probable defeat.

The Newark Evening News ventures to say that no university has attempted to make Mark Twain a D. D. If America's champion funny man could be put through a course of sprouts by being compelled to read Punch without indulging in any Yankee cuss words he might be a fit candidates even for an S. T. D.

Letter from Tree Commission.

Plainfield, June 28, 1907.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Someone must have misinformed your reporter as to the purposes of the Shade Tree Commission. The commission has, as you state in today's paper, purchased a power sprayer, and is doing its utmost to rid the city of the elm leaf beetle, but it has no desire to subtitute other varieties of trees for the elms which are among our most desirable trees. There are altogether too many shade trees in many places on our streets, both for comfort and the good of the trees. A street is much more attractive if the trees are spaced a sufficient distance apart to allow each tree to develop symmetrically and to let a little sunlight in between the individual trees, but the soft maples (silver leaf maples) should go rather than the elms.

MILES ROBERTS,
Vice Chairman Shade Tree Commission.

The Elm Trees.

Plainfield, N. J., June 28, 1907.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Sir: Pardon a word of skepticism. In your issue of Friday I find the following article:

"The tree commission appointed by Mayor Charles J. Fisk several weeks ago, and of which Elliott T. Barrows is the chairman, has purchased a tree sprayer and F. J. Martin, of the Yale School of Forestry, has been engaged to spray the elm trees of the city to rid them of the beetle. The tree commission proposes to rid the city of the elm trees as fast as practicable, and in their places will set out trees of other varieties which are not so susceptible to bugs and other pests."

I am unwilling to believed that so intelligent a commission "proposes to rid the city of the elm trees"—nor do I for a moment suppose that it can. Many of us would about as soon think of abandoning our homes as our elms. They are the finest trees in existence.

Again I venture to doubt as to the purchase by so able a commission of "a tree sprayer," and, as to its purpose, "to spray the elm trees of the city." Once more, it cannot. And any partial job it might do would result in a waste of public money. I venture the assertion that little or no practical benefit has thus far accrued from the expenditure of Plainfield public money in fighting treepets. But a tree commission of which Mr. Barrows is chairman may nevertheless do much good.

New Cassatt Rail.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 29.—Steel men returning from New York, where they attended a conference with the railroad men, divulge for the first time the specifications that were required by the Pennsylvania Railroad in the manufacture of the proposed Cassatt rail, and which the United States Steel Corporation refused to accept without advancing the price of rails from $28 to $33 a ton. In making the ingot from which the rail is rolled the steel of its weight settles to the bottom, making the lower part of the ingot solid steel. The top, however, is always filled with a certain amount of vacuum. When the ingot is rolled into a rail a portion of the rail is weakened by the air holes. President Cassatt always contended that it was at these weakened places that the rails gave way. The specifications for the Cassatt rail require that twenty-five percent of the entire ingot shall be cut off. As this upper part can be used only as scrap steel, the railmakers believe that they would lose eighteen per cent of the value of the ingot.

DUKE WON'T DISCUSS HIS WEDDING PLANS.

Doesn't Deny Engagement to Mrs. William Inman, Beautiful Southern Widow.

When James B. Duke, President of the American Tobacco Company, when asked by a reporter at Somerville yesterday whether or not he contemplated soon being married to Mrs. William Inman, the beautiful Atlanta widow, he declined to discuss the subject.

"It is reported in New York and Atlanta that you are to marry Mrs. Inman in Europe in the latter part of July, Mr. Duke," said the reporter. "Will you confirm or deny the report?"

"I have absolutely nothing to say on the subject," said the tobacco magnate.

Mrs. Inman was with Mr. Duke when the question was put to him. She blushed, but also denied to talk.

G. A. R. HEARS GARDNER.

Old Soldiers, in Encampment at Ocean City, Listen to Congressman's Address.

Ocean City, July 29.—The forty-second annual encampment of the State G. A. R., which began Thursday was continued here today.

The campfire on the pier, in which the veterans took part, singing war songs, was the feature of last night Speeches were mad by Congressman J. J. Gardner, Rev. Holmes Gravatt and H. D. Moore, and special music was rendered.

Chaplain Hill, of Red Bank, was renominated by acclamation. Not much further progress was made in the nomination of officers. In addition to a struggle for the position of State department commander, an effort is being made to secure the support of the delegates for Charles Burroughs, of Redford, quartermaster general of the national department, for commander-in-chief.

Utilities Commission.

New York, June 29.—Completely ignoring political considerations and selecting only such men as he thought would most faithfully serve the interests of the people, Governor Hughes yesterday appointed the two State Utilities commissions, bodies which will have power of the most extraordinary and sweeping character over the public service corporations of the State. The New York city commission is composed of these men: William R. Willcox, Manhattan, chairman (R.); Milo Roy Maltbie, Manhattan, (Ind. R.); William McCarroll, Brooklyn (R.); Edward M. Bassett, Brooklyn, (D); John Edwin Eustis, Bronx (Ind. R.). The commission for the rest of the State is composed of Frank W. Stevens, Jamestown, chairman (R.); Charles Hallam Keep, Buffalo (R.); Thomas M. Osborne, Auburn (Ind. D.); James E. Sague, New Hamburg (R.); Martin S. Decker, New Paltz (D.) Surprise was general at the selections, particularly of the members of the New York commission. While every one conceded that the appointees are all men of the cleanest records, it was a subject of comment that practically none of them had been discused, and that some of the are men comparatively unknown in public affairs. They will draw salaries of $15,000 a year each.

Advances Commutation.

New York, June 29.—Commuters on the various branches of the New York Central will be obliged to adjust their pocketbooks to a new scedule of rates when they buy their monthly tickets on July 1. While slight reduction are made in some cases in single and return trip tickets, a general increase is announced in all commutation and family tickets on all branches. W. H. Newman, president of the road, is authority for the statement that the company has been losing money on its commutation business and henceforward it must make a fair profit or abandon the commutation rates altogether.

Bankrupt Destroyed Books.

New York, June 29:—Judge Holt in the United States District Court yesterday refused a discharge in bankruptcy to Henri Wolf, individually and as a member of the firm of Wolf & Heilner, upon unusual grounds. It was for having destroyed the books "to conceal his true financial condition," that objection being raised to the bankrupt's discharge. Wolf pleaded that he was engaged in the business of making loans at usurious interest and that District Attorney Jerome had instituted criminal proceedings against him, and that he had therefore destroyed his books to prevent the District Attorney from obtaining evidence against him.

Garbage Riots.

New York, June 29.—While many residential sections of the city lay reeking in the stench of nearly a week's accumulation of garbage, rubbish and ashes, New York yesterday presented the surprising spectacle of riotous demonstrations, brick throwing and other violence against the men the city had enlisted to try to bring relief. So serious was the rioting in several widely scattered sections of the city that police reserves had to be called and in one or two cases the ugly temper of the mobs that swarmed to the support of the striking street cleaners was cowed only by a show of firearms. It was this situation, coupled with the failure of Commissioner Craven, of the Street Cleaning Department, to make material progress, that led Mayor McClellan late in the day to go over the Commissioner's head and issue an official order placing the collection of garbage and other noxious refuse in the hands of the Department of Health.

Seeks Freedom From Father.

Boston, Mass., June 29.—Miss Dorothy Straine, whose father, Robert F. Straine, made a sensational attempt to abduct her immediately upon her graduation from a fashionable boarding school at Wellesley, is taking legal steps to be forever freed from her father. In two years she will inherit a fortune from her mother's estate. Straine is now in Salem jail waiting trial on a larceny charge from a stock market transaction, and also to answer a charge of attempting to kidnap his daughter. A petition for the removal of the father as guardian for his daughter has been filed by her other guardian, Roland W. Boyden. The petition sets for that Straine is unfitted to have the custody of his daughter.

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson.

Probation Officer of Union County:

My Dear Mrs. Williamson—I have received a report of your work as probation officer of Union county, covering a period of over five years. The report is very interesting and is worthy of the careful attention of our citizens. The method of dealing with persons convicted of crimes and misdemeanors is a subject of the highest importance to the well-being of the community. From my observation I am satisfied that in many cases it is the best way to deal with offenders, and especially persons whose offenses are the first that they have committed. I heartily approve of the manner of dealing with such persons as indicated in your report.

I also wish to express my high appreciation of the valuable services that your have rendered to this county as probation officer.

I recommend to the Board of Freeholders that your report be printed at the expense of the county, so that the public may understand the kind of work which has been done in the way of probation.

Very truly yours,
EDWARD S. ATWATER.

On motion of Freeholdre Robison it was ordered that the communication be received and that the Committee on Publication be directed to obtain estimates for the printing of 200 copies of the report as recommended, said committee to report as the next meeting of the board.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By the Committe on Van Winkle Brook Bridge Extension, Springfield, N. J.:

To the Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—The committee on the extension of the Van Winkle Brook Bridge, at Springfield, N. J., would report that it has considered it well to have a concrete sidewalk on the bridge, as the same is to be extended on the northerly side, for the full width of the walk, and that also, a neat pattern of iron railing should be constructed at this point, as it lies in the centre of Springfield Village.

We would therefore recommend that an additional appropriation of $125 be made for this work, making the total appropriation for the improvement contemplated $525, instead of $400, as heretofore authorized by the board.

Peter H. Meisel,
W. H. Swain,
George B. Cladek,
S. P. T. Wilbur,
J. J. Donahue,
Committee.

Freeholder Gruener moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the Committee on Claremont Place Bridge, Cranford, N. J.:

To the Board of Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee would respectfully report that it has examined the bridge on Claremont place, Cranford, and found that the present wooden covering is in a very bad and unsafe condition and should be replaced.

It therefore recommends that a new brick arch and steel beam covering be constructed on this bridge, and that the present abutment walls and wing walls be not more tha $450. The work also to include new iron railings.

E. K. Adams,
George B. Cladek,
Elston Darby,
Committee.

Freeholder Krouse moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By the committee on Linden Avenue Bridge, Roselle, N. J.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee has examined the bridge at the above site and finds it in a very dilapidated condition, the present structure being an old planked floor bridge.

Your committee is of the opinion that a new steel beam and brick or concrete arch bridge, on stone abutements, should be erected over the brook at Linden avenue at this point, the same to be six feet span in clear, and about fifty-four feet in length, and your committee would therefore recommend the construction of such a bridge at a cost not to exceed the sum of $700.

Henry Krouse,
Robert C. Maurer,
John Robison,
Committee.

Freeholder Gruener moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By Committee on Division Avenue Bridge, Summit, N. J.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your committee finds that the Division avenue bridge will cost at least $25 more than the appropriation made, and we therefore respectfully recommend a further appropriation of $225.

John N. Cady,
Joseph Perry,
Bradford Jones,
Committee.

Freeholder Gruener moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By the Committee on the Purchase of Certain Paintings, etc.:

Elizabeth, N. J., June 1, 1907.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders, Union County:

Gentlemen—Your committee to which was referred the matter of purchase of three oil paintings ocered by General J. Madison Drake, would respectfully report that we have examined the paintings in question, and believe them to be works of great artistic merit and historic interest, and doubtless of a money value greater than the price now asked for them.

We do not, however, think it advisable for this board to purchase oil paintings to place in the county courthouse. If we have the legal right to do so, which is doubtful, we do not think it should be done without some very decided public sentiment throughout the county made evident to this board that such purchase is desired by the people; at this time we have not been able to discover any such sentiment as to warrant us in recommending the purchase of these oil paintings.

If, however, any patriotic indivuals or societies should wish to purchase the pictures and present them to the county, it would be eminently proper for the board to accept the gift for the county and care for them in a suitable manner.

Respectfully submitted,
Charles A. Smith,
E. K. Adams,
Noah Woodruff,
J. Logan Fay,
J. Hervey Doane,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Cady, received and placed on file.

By the Committee on Three Bridges in Union Township:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Three Brides in Union Township would respectfully report that it has examined the bridges, and finds the bridge near Carter's place in good condition, except for the water working its way back of the wall, and would recommend that a wing will be built a cost not to exceed $75. The bridge near Baldwin's is in a very bad condition, it being an old wooden bridge, rotten and ready to collapse, and we would recommend iron beams and brick arches, and a repair of the walls at a cost not to exceed $700. Bridge number three, near Chapman's, we find caved in on one side and in very bad condition, and would recommend that the whole structure be rebuilt at a cost not to exceed $100, making in all $875.

Respectfully submitted,
Noah Woodruff,
Peter H. Meisel,
John J. Donahue,
Committee.

Freeholder Darby moved that the report be received, and recommendations adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By the Elizabeth Drawbridge Committee on Claim for Damages of the Lenox Brick Company, etc.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—The Elizabeth Drawbridge Committee, to which was referred the claim of the Lenox Brick Company, of Cliffwood, N. J., for damages for being help up at South street bridge, would report that it has made a settlement with them for $5, and your committee would recommend the payment of the same after proper auditing.

Respectfully submitted,
Thomas J. Pierson,
E. K. Adams,
S. P. T. Wilbur,
Committee.

Freeholder Krouse moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered, on roll call by unanimous vote.

By the Comfmittee of the Whole, to which was referred the petition of citizens of the city of Rahway, asking that certain roads be adopted as county roads, two reports, the following one being taken up for consideration.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 6, 1907.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders, Union County, N. J.:

Gentlemen—Your Committee of the Whole, to which was referred the petition of citizens of the city of Rahway, asking that certain sections of St. George avenue and Leesville avenue, in said city, be adopted as county roads, would respectfully state that we have examined the said roads.

We found that St. George avenue, from Lake avenue to the Middlesex county line, was in bad condition, the remaining section of said avenue, as petitioned for, being in better condition; we found that the section of Leesville avenue, as petitioned for, was in a very bad and dangerous condition, being almost impassable for ordinary travel.

As the said roads are connecting links between Middlesex and Union counties, and are the main highwyys for automobile and other heavy traffic between the upper and lower sections of our State, we therefore present the following resolution as our report and recommendation:

Resolved, That St. George avenue, in the city of Rahway, beginning at the centre line of Grand Street, in said city, and running in a southerly and southwesterly direction through the city of Rahway, to the Middlesex county line, and also that Leesville avenue, in said citl of Rahway, beginning at the centre line of St. George avenue and running in a westerly direction through the said city of Rahway to the Middlesex county line, said roads being at least one mile in length, be improved by the construction of a macadamized road; and be it further

Resolved, That the Clerk of this board be directed to send a copy of this resolution to the State Commissioner of Public Roads for his approval, and that upon the approval of the same by the State Road Commissioner, the County Road Committee be and is hereby authorized to proceed to have said roads surveyed in accordance with the provisions of chapter 58 of the laws of 1905.

Respectfully submitted,
BENJAMIN KING,
Chairman Committee of the Whole.

The report of the Committee on Rules, said over from last meeting, was taken up, and after further consideration was adopted as a whole without dissent.

Freeholder Cady moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

JILTED FOUR TIMES.

Immortal George Turned Down Until He Met Martha Custis.

When Colonel George Washington first met Martha Custis she was a dashing widow, yet in her twenties, beautiful, charming and wealthy. The father of his country promptly fell in love with the lady and as promptly laid siege to her heart. His wooing was speedy. A chance meeting at the house of Major Chamberlayne, an afternoon and an evening with the belle of Virginia, and he was almost an accepted suitor. But the gallant colonel was not exactly an amateur in the art of love making. He at least had the experience of great mistakes to profit by. For history records the fact that there were four ladies who declined the golden opportunity to share the heart and the home and the glory of the afterward greatest American gentleman.

Why? Only the sphinx that could answer the immortal riddle of mankind might tell. Handsome, well dresser, skilled in the elegant accomplishments of the day, and above all a soldier, apparently Colonel George Washington ought to have been a lover for whose only right any woman would have fluttered to his arms. But they didn't. The ladies who thus failed of the lustrous niche in history that they might have had were, in turn, a miss of 2 years, whom her suitor of soulful 17 indited as the "Loveland Beauty;" a Miss Fontleroy, a Miss Cary and a coquettish Miss Mary Philipse, whose ancestral manor house at Yonkers, N. Y., is to this day reckoned as a sort of romantic shrine.

But from this train of experience the soldier, who later was able so brilliantly to plan a campaign, doubtless learned wisdom. He must have found out how not to do it, for when he laid siege to the heart of the widow Custis it was done with a master hand that found the right way as easily as if it had never failed at the trick.—Broadway Magazine.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

The policemen detailed for the famous Broadway squad in New York are all tall, lean men. This is not an accidental selection. The height is so they may look over the heads of the crowd, and their leanness so they may not get caught between the cars.

Booker T. Washington is going to spend the summer at West Neck, L. I. His house will be about three miles from the Roosevelt home. The place consists of about 100 acres, and the house was built by the Van Wyck family many years ago.

Senator Lodge will be the orator of the day on August 15, when the dedicatory exercises of the tablet in commemoration of the settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623 will be unveiled at Gloucester, Mass.

"He left his canoe here 'n' crossed the ridge above us 'n' down to whar we left the otter 'n' on to our canoe." Then he come back the way we follered, 'n' my idee is he had his eye on us most o' the time. I callate he has been laughin' ever since at what we'd say when we found that mud daub on our canoe, durn him!"

But their canoe was now a half-mile away, and for a little time Old Cy looked at the black, currentless stream and considered. Then he glanced up at the sun.

"I've a notion we'd best fetch our canoe over here," he said at last, "an' follow this thief a spell farther. We may come on to suthin'."

"Won't he shoot at us?" returned Ray, more impressed by this possible danger than was Old Cy.

"Wal, mebbe and mebbe not," answered the old man. "Shootin's a game two kin play at, an' we've jist ez' good a right to foller the stream ez he has."

But when their canoe had been carried over and launched in this lagoon, Ray's spirits rose. It was an expedition into new waters, somewhat venturesome, and for that reason it appealed to him.

Then they had two rifles; Old Cy had taught him to shoot; he had already killed one deer and some smaller game, and the go-west-and-kill-Indian impulse latent in all boys was a part of Ray's nature. Besides, he had an unbounded faith in Old Cy's skill with the rifle.

For two hours they paddled along this serpentine highway, and then the vastness of this morass began to impress them. No sign of current had been met. All view of the spruce-grown upland they had left was obscured by distance. Now and then a dead tree, bleached and spectral, marked a turn in the stream, and hundreds of them, rising all about above the low green tangle, added a ghostly haze. It was as if they were venturing into a new world—a boundless morass, covered by an impenetrable tangle, and made grewsome by the bleaching trunks of dead trees.

No halt for dinner had yet been made. They were both faint from need of food, and so Old Cy reached for a small wooden pail containing their sole supply of provisions. Neither was it a luxurious repast which was now eaten. A couple of hardtacks munched by each and moistened with a cup of this swamp water and a bit of dried deer meat was all, and then Old Cy lit his pipe, dipped his paddle in the stream, and once more they pushed on. Soon a low mound of hard soil rose out of the tangle just ahead, an oasis in this unvarying mud swamp, and gaping at them from amid its cover of scrub birch and cedar stood a deadfall. It faced them as they neared this small island, and with log upraised between a pen of stakes it much resembled the open mouth of a huge alligator.

"Hain't been built long," Old Cy exclaimed, after they had landed to examine it. "I've a notion it's the doin's of our pirate friend, an' he's trappin' round about this swamp. He's had good luck lately, anyhow, for he's got six o' our pelts to add to his string."

From here onward signs of human presence in this swamp became more visible. Now and then an opening cut through the limbs of a lopped-over spruce was met; a spot where drift had been pushed aside to clear the stream was found at one place; signs of a canoe having been nosed into the bog grass were seen; and here were also the same footprints they had followed.

Another bit of hard bottom was reached, and here again was another deadfall. Tracks evidently made within a few days were about here, and tied to its figure-four spindle was a freshly caught brook sucker.

"The secnt's gettin' warm," Old Cy muttered, as he examined these signs of a trapper's presence, and then, mindful of the sun, he paddled on again.

And now an upland growth of tall spruce was seen ahead, the banks became in evidence, and a slight current was met. One more long bend in the stream was followed, then came curving banks and large-bodied spruce. They were out of the swamp.

Soon a more distinctive current opposed them, a low murmur of running water came from ahead, and then a pass between two abutting ledges was entered. Here the stream eddied over sunken rocks, and pushing on, the forest seemed suddenly to vanish as they emerged from the gloom of this short canyon, and the next moment they caught sight of a long, narrow lakelet.

The sun, now almost to the tree-tops, cast a reddish glow upon its placid surface, and so welcome a change was it from the ghostly, forbidding swamp just left, that Old Cy halted their canoe at once to look out upon it. It was seemingly a mile long, but quite a narrow lake. A bold, rocky shore rising in ledges faced them just across, and extended along that side, back of these a low, green-clad mountain, to the right, and at the end of this lanelike lake a bolder, bare-topped cliff was outlined clear and distinct.

The strip of water, for it was not much more, seemingly [illegible] gorge in these mountains, only one break in them, to the left of this bare peak; and as Old Cy urged their canoe out of the alder-choked stream, now currentless, once more, a margin line of rushes and reeds was seen to form that shore. Back of these, also, rose the low ledge they had passed.

"Looks like a good hidin' spot fer a pirate," he exclaimed, glancing up and down the smiling lakelet. "Thar ain't many folks likely to tackle that swamp—it took us 'most all day to cross it. I'll bet no lumberman ever tried it twice, 'n' if I wanted to git absolutely 'way' from bein' molested, I'd locate here. I dunno whether we'd best cross 'n' make camp 'mong them ledges or go back into the woods. Guess we'd best go back 'n' take a sneak round behind the ledge. I noticed a loggin leadin' up that way 'fore we left the swamp."

But now something was discovered that proved Old Cy's wisdom, for as they, charmed somewhat by the spot, yet feeling it forbidding, still glanced up and down the bold shore just across, suddenly a thin column of smoke rose from away to the right, amid the bare ledges.

The Two Watched in Silent Amazement.

First a faint haze, rising in the still air, then a burst of white, until the fleecy pillar was plainly outlined as it ascended and drifted backward into the green forest.

CHAPTER XIV.

Old Cy was, above all, a peaceable man, and while curiosity had led him to follow the trail of this robber and to cross this vast swamp, now that he saw the suggestive smoke sign, he hesitated about venturing nearer.

"I guess we'd best be keerful," he whispered to Ray, "or we may wish we had been. I callate our pirate friend's got a hidin' spot over thar, 'n' most likely don't want callers. He may be only a queer old trapper a little short o' scruples ag'in' takin' what he finds, 'n' then ag'in he may be worse'n that. His campin' spot's ag'in him, anyhow."

But the sun was now very low; a camp site must soon be found, and scarce two minutes from the time he saw this rising column of smoke, Old Cy dipped his paddle and slowly drew back into the protecting forest. Once well out of sight, the canoe was turned and they sped back down-stream and into the swamp once more. Here he turned aside into a lagoon they had passed, and at its head they pulled their canoe out into the bog.

The two gathered up their belongings, and picking their way out of the morass, reached the belt of hard bottom skirting the ridge. They were now out of sight from the lake, but still too near the stream to risk a camp-fire, and so Old Cy led the way along this belt until a more secluded niche in the ridge was reached, and here they began camp-making.

That night was the longest ever passed by Ray, for not until near morning did he fall into a fitful slumber, and scarcely had he lost himself before Old Cy was up and watching for the dawn.

Its first faint glow was visible when Ray's eyes opened, and without waiting for fire or breakfast, they started for the top of the ridge. From here a curious sight met their eyes, for the lake and also the ridges out of which the smoke had risen were hidden beneath a white pall of fog. Back of them also, and completely coating the immense swamp, was the same sea of vapor. It soon vanished with the rising sun, and just as the ledge across the lake outlined themselves, once more that smoke sign rose aloft.

And now the two watchers could better see whence it came. Old Cy had expected to obtain sight of some hut or bark shack nestling among these rocks; but none was visible. Instead, the smoke rose out of a jagged rock, and there was not a cabin roof or sign of one anywhere.

"That feller's in a cave," he whispered to Ray, "an' the smoke's comin' out o' a crack, sure's a gun!"

It seemed so, and for a half-hour the two watched it in silent amazement.

Then came another surprise, for suddenly Old Cy caught sight of a man just emerging from behind a rock fully ten rods from the rising smoke; he stooped, lifted a canoe into view, advanced to the shore, slid it halfway into the water, returned to the rock, picked up a rifle, then pushed the canoe off, and, crossing the lake, vanished into the outlet.

The two watchers on the ridge exchanged glances.

"He's goin' to tend his traps, an mebbe ourn," Old Cy said at last, and then led the way back to their bark shack. Here he halted, and placing one hand scoop-fashion over his ear, listened intently until he caught the faint sound of a paddle touching a canoe gunwale. First slightly, then a more distinctive thud, and then less and less until the sound ceased.

"The coast's clear, he added, now in an exultant whisper, "an' while the old cat's away we'll take a peek at his den."

A hurried gathering of their few belongings was made, the canoe was shoved into the lagoon, and no time was lost until the lake was crossed and they drew along side of where the smoke was still rising in a thin film. No landing was possible here, for the shore was a sheer face of upright slate, and only where this lone trapper had launched his canoe could they make one.

From here a series of outcropping slate ledges rose one above another, and between them and parallel to the shore, narrow, irregular passages partially closed by broken rock. It was all of slaty formation, jagged, serrated and gray with moss.

Following one of these passages, Old Cy and Ray came to the ledge out of which the smoke was rising from a crevasse. It was a little lower than one in front, perhaps 40 feet in breadth, double that in length, and of a more even surface. At each end was a short transverse passage hardly wide enough to walk in, and a few feet deep.

And now, after a more careful examination of the crevasse out of which the thin film of smoke rose, Old Cy began a search. Up and down each narrow passway he peeped and peered, but nowhere was a crack or cranny to be found in their walls. In places they were as high as his head, sheer faces of slate, then broken, serrated, moss-coated, or of yellow, rusty color. Here and there a stunted spruce had taken root in some crack, and over, back from the topmost ledge, this green enclosure began and continued up the low mountain. Here, also, in a sunny nook below this belting tangle of scrub spruce, were ample signs of a trapper's occupation in the way of pelts stretched upon forked sticks and hanging from a cord crossing this niche. They were of the usual species found in this wilderness,—a dozen muskrat, with a few mink and otter skins and one lynx.

Another sign of human presence was also noted, for here a log showing ax marks, with split wood and chips all about, was seen.

"Some o' them pelts is ourn," Old Cy ejaculated, glancing at the array, "an' I've a notion we'd best hook on to 'em. Mebbe not, though,' he added a moment later, "it might git us into more trouble."

But Ray was getting more and more uneasy each moment since they had landed there. It seemed to him a most dangerous exploit, and while Old Cy had hunted over this curious confusion of slate ledges and stared at the rising film of smoke, Ray had covertly watched the lake's outlet.

"I don't think we'd better stay here much longer," he said at last. "We can't tell how soon that man may come back and catch us."

"Guess you're right," Old Cy asserted tersely, and after one more look at the inch-wide crack out of which the smoke rose, he led the way to their canoe.

"Thar's a cave thar, sure's a gun," he muttered, as they skirted the bold shore once more, "an' that smoke's comin' out on't. I wish I dared stay here a little longer 'n' hunt fer it."

Old Cy was right, there was a cave there beneath the slate ledge—in fact, two caves; and in one, safe and secure, as its owner the notorious McGuire believed, were concealed the savings of his lifetime.

More than that, so near do we often come to an important discovery and miss it, Old Cy had twice leaned against a slab of slate closing the entrance to this cave and access to a fortune, the heritage of Chip McGuire.

Ray's fear, while well founded, were needless, however. McGuire—for it was this outlaw whom they had ample reason to avoid—was many miles away. And yet so potent was the sense of danger, that neither Old Cy nor Ray thought of food, or ceased paddling one moment, until they had crossed the vast swamp and once more pulled their canoe out at the point where they had entered it the day before.

Here a brief halt for food and rest was taken; then they shouldered their light craft and started for Birch Camp.

In the meantime another canoe was ascending this winding stream, and long before nightfall, Pete Bolduc, sure that he was on the trail of McGuire, entered the ledge-bordered lake.

SENATE QUITS AFTER PASSING REFORM ACTS

HOUSE MEMBERS FAIL TO RESPOND TO SPEAKER'S CALL FOR WORK.

In the Senate at Trenton yesterday reform legislation was transacted with dispatch, and, after a busy day, adjourned late in the afternoon to meet Monday, and then from day to day, until the committees to whom are intrusted bills have finished their work. When the resolution came up to adjourn it was opposed by Senator Colby.

Senator Hillery said the resolution embodied the only constitutional way the Senate could adjourn, the House being in defiance of the constitution in not being there attending to business, and adjourning until July 5, a period of more than three days, without the consent of the Senate.

The upshot of the matter was a tacit agreement to meet Friday, when, it is announced, the House will be in session. A hearing on the potable water bill, which was not finished, was announced for Friday at 11 a. m. Senators Wakelee, Hutchinson and Silzer were named a committee to give the hearing.

Speaker Lethbridge came to the State House yesterday with the Democratic members of the Hahn investigating committee, and that committee organized by electing Mr. Hahn chairman and Mr. Sullivan secretary. Mr. Backes is to be the counsel, and Frank Hague serveant-at-arms, but Herbert Knight was named stenographer in place of William O. Byrne, of Paterson.

Mr. Gibson, the sole remaining Republican on the committee, who says he will resign, was not present. Speaker Lethbridge offered the place of Mr. Barber on the committee to Mr. Jess, of Camden, and Mr. Potter, of Cumberland. Neither would accept it, and the speaker said he would offer it to some more Republicans, and, if none would accept, he would then make the committee of five all Democrats. "We will go on with the investigation if it takes all summer," declared the speaker. The investigating committee adjourned to Friday after organizing.

The efforts of Speaker Lethbridge to get the House at Trenton and at work came to naught. He telegraphed all over the State Wednesday and Thursday, but there were counter-telegrams sent out from the Democratic bosses, and the speaker was called to account for trying to stop the Democratic plan of inaction.

Mr. Brady, of Essex, was caught and prevented from going West. He came to the State House to show he was on hand, but there were not ten Democrats who showed up. Many of the Republican assemblymen came, but there was nothing to do, the speaker saying "there is no hurry. We will wait until July 5, before the House finally comes together."

Try to Make Siamese Twins.

New York June 29.—Officers for the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will today begin an investigation into an eration performed in the stable of the Bradford Street Hospital by which two puppies had their sides cut open and then sewed together in an effort to see if it were possible to produce Siamese twins by surgery. Two young physicians attached to the Kings County Hospital, whose names have not been revealed performed the operation. "In the interest of science," was the reason given for the operation at the Bradford Street Hospital, but when the attention of Nicholas Grace, assistant superintendent of the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was drawn to the case last night he said that the investigation would be most thorough. The puppies were five weeks old and the property of "Mat" Priggins, driver of the hospital's ambulance.

"CENTRAL PARK"
Was — Is — Will Be

IT WAS, only about a year ago, just a pretty farm.

IT IS to day the finest building site in Plainfield, with broad avenues macadamized their entire width, concrete curb, sidewalks, trees, gas, electric light, in fact all improvements. Nearly $100,000 expended in new and handsome dwellings, now ready for the market.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Central Park is that beautifully situated tract bounded by Park, Prospect, Hillside and Thornton Avenues.

Lots selling rapidly—Prices very low—Great investment or speculative opportunities.
